STORM-SWEPT EAST
The Wind Beyond the Memory of the Oldest Inhabitant.
EVERYTHING RAZED TO THE GROUND
Tree Falls on the house of a Farmer and Two of His Children Are Crushed to Death.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Oct. 14.-The oldest inhabitant was forced to admit that the terrific outburst of wind and wave that swept through the city yesterday surpassed any storm in his day or generation. The tide was the highest ever known here. On the river the waves dashed with tremendous force against the warehouses and vessels, the tide quickly covering the lowlands opposite the city and stretching in an unbroken sea across the rice fields as far as the eye could reach. The troubled stream bore an immense quantity of wreckage. High water did considerable damage on Water street. All the wharves were under water, and the flood swept through the lower floors of the warehouses. The city wharves were washed up and landed bodily on Water street. The fire wharves were also badly damaged. The flood is deep enough from Chestnut and Mulberry streets for a rowboat.
The only loss of life as yet known is reported from Sampson, where a tree fell on the house of a farmer named Lane and crushed two of his children to death. The total loss in this immediate vicinity will probably reach $150,000.

Million-Dollar Loss in Baltimore.
BALTIMORE, Oct. 14.-The damage done by last night's storm is greater than has been experienced in many years. Along the water front the tide rose to the level of the wharves, overflowed into the stores and cellars of commission merchants and places occupied by oyster packers, and completely destroyed stocks to the amount of almost $1,000,000. The oyster boats are badly damaged; the destruction of property all through the city is large.
Devastation and Death.
Georgetown, S. C., Oct. 14.-The devastation and death wrought by the hurricane and around this city and adjacent sea islands is terrible. The entire water-front of Georgetown is flooded, and there is much damage to merchandise stored in warehouses. At Magnolia Beach almost every house was washed away and thirteen white and six colored people drowned. A number escaped a watery grave by taking refuge in the trees.

Train Robbery Frustrated.
CHICAGO, Oct. 14.-An afternoon paper says that the night operator on the Milwaukee & St. Paul road at Oak Glen, eighteen miles out, discovered a gang of men acting suspiciously last night. He notified headquarters and a special train was sent out in advance of the fast mail. The robbers with red lanterns had prepared to flag the train a short distance above Oak Glen, but, discovering a special with armed officers on board, they fled in the darkness and escaped. The fast mail would have proved a rich haul for them.
Compromise to be Made.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.-Today was pregnant with rumors of compromises and agreements on the silver question. Enough is known to lead to the conclusion that mutual concessions have been made, and statements of senators justify the hope that before next week has passed there will be a movement toward the settlement of the question. Just what the compromise will be cannot be said, but that which meets with most favor contemplates about the same provisions as Harris' amendment combined with a bond provision.

THE EXCLUSION LAW.
It is Again the Principal Topic of Discussion in the House.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.-At no time during the day were more than 100 members present in the house, and the discussion on the bill for the suspension for six months of the provisions of the Geary Chinese exclusion bill was rather dreary and uninteresting. Maguire was the first speaker. In continuation of his speech begun yesterday he said that those who understood the destructive influence of the Chinese were in perfect accord with the people of the Pacific coast. Speaking of the religious protests he said that for every pagan which had been converted by missionaries, numerous children of our own had been won from Christianity by contact with the Chinese and dragged down to degradation. Onthwaite of Ohio, in his report on the Geary bill, said that unless the Geary act was extended congress must provide $7,000,000 for deporting the Chinese. Dr. Everett of Massachusetts defended the course of the attorney-general in not enforcing the Geary act. Geary here interrupted to call attention to the fact that in 1892 Secretary Blaine dismissed a remonstrance on the ground that the Chinese themselves were responsible for it. Hermann of Oregon criticised the administration for not enforcing the Geary law, and Williams of Mississippi supported the Geary amendment. He said the Chinese had taken over $300,000,000 from this country, and no other state but California could stand the drain. Without disposing of the bill the house at 5 o'clock adjourned.

IN THE DAHOMEY COUNTRY.
A Fight with the Amazons and Subsequent Suffering for Want of Water.
Much has been added to the literature of soldiers' sufferings in war by the recent expedition of conquest on the part of the French against Dahomey, an independent and warlike kingdom of western Africa. Gen. Dodds, the French commander, took the straightest course with his expedition to Abomey, the capital. He was met by the Dahomeans with a splendid and desperate resistance, in which the famous corps of Amazons, or women soldiers, of the king of Dahomey held a prominent part. The assaulting French did not spare these feminine warriors. A letter from the expedition written to the Paris Journal des Debats contains this note:
"We were in the midst of an expanse of tall grass, so high that a man on horseback could not be seen in the midst of it. This made us the victims of countless ambushes and surprises. But our Lebel guns made havoc among the Dahomeans! Many a brave Amazon paid with her life the penalty of her warlike ardor."
"At first we were filled with pity when we came upon the bodies of these women warriors slain by our hands. It seemed shameful to fight against women! But they were furious creatures, and we knew what fate was in reserve for us if we fell into their hands. The struggle for life came to mean more than considerations of gallantry."
The courageous Amazons left the Frenchmen no rest, harassing them day and night. The early engagements of the campaign thinned the ranks of the famous corps terribly, but they fought on with increasing desperation.
"We had routed the Dahomeans," the same writer records, "and expected no further serious resistance; but it was at Koto, where we encountered the remnant of the Amazons, that they left us no respite."
Near Koto the French were unable for a long time to obtain water, and suffered intensely from thirst. A captain of cavalry volunteered to undertake, with a squad of men, a dangerous expedition in search of water, and Gen. Dodds accepted the offer.
"That night of the 16th of October," writes an officer to another French journal, "I shall remember all my life. No one slept in the tent where we were piled up together, panting. From time to time I flicked the metal handle of my revolver, to produce in my mouth and throat an illusion of coolness and thirst slaking."
"At about four o'clock in the morning I heard a hubbub over toward the cavalry quarters. It must be Capt. Cremieu-Foa coming back with water! Seizing a coffee pot, I hid it under my coat like a thief, and crept over to the cavalry. I was on good terms with a lieutenant there. Cremieu-Foa had really come; and I got of the lieutenant - blessings on him forever - about a

The Mad Dog.
There are a great many mistakes current as to the nature and symptoms of hydrophobia. It does not occur most frequently in the summer, but in the spring, nor has the rabid dog, as a rule, a dread of water, nor does he refuse to drink. On the contrary, even after the disease is fully established, the mad dog often tries his best to drink, sometimes plunging his nose deeply under water in his effort to swallow, but is unable to do so on account of spasms which affect his throat. Rabies is a disease the course and symptoms of which are as well known as any other. The first symptoms are a restlessness and uneasiness on the part of the dog; then he begins to have hallucinations; he will run to a particular spot as though he saw some one there; he will turn his head and snap and bark in one direction at an invisible enemy. A well-marked symptom is his tendency to gnaw and swallow hard objects, bits of wood, stones and such like. But the bark of a rabid dog is a thing which once heard can never be forgotten; it is impossible to mistake it, and if the dog gives no other symptom than a hoarse, muffled bark, followed by three or four gurgling efforts from the bottom of his throat, there can be no uncertainty after that.

quart of muddy water in my coffee pot. "Back to the tent I went with it, and we rationed it out drop by drop. Each one of us got about a mouthful of this mire. How delicious it seemed!"
"But about an hour later a terrible rainstorm burst upon us; and then we had a water orgy. Everything that would hold water - bottles, calabashes, cracker boxes - was set out, and all were filled in less than sixty minutes."
"I think that on the day that followed I drank about twenty quarts of water."
