The average wheat yield per acre in the United States for 1893 is about 11.3 bushels. The greatest yield per acre of any one state is in Montana, which re- ry, though she has cases full of all cords 22 bushels. The lowest is that of sorts of precious stones. Georgia, 7.2. Oregon records a yield of 19.4 and Washington 20.5, while California is 11.2. The Dakotas yield averages a shade of 9 bushels per acre.

It is announced that the world's fair will not close on the last day of October. but will keep open as long as the weather will permit, which will be until Thanksgiving day, or, possibly, the last of November. So many people have postponed their visit to the great exposition until the present month that it is believed the attendance will be great enough after the first of November to warrant keeping the fair open several weeks.

The gold reserve has dwindled down to a point lower than ever, while the expenses of the government have in- dust. creased many millions. This perhaps is democratic economy, but it is not the exact kind understood by the voters of the country when they decreed the to install a republican.

The much-vexed and much-disputed question of the loftiest mountain on the North American continent has at last been settled. John Partridge, secretary for a dose and never gripe or sicken. of the Geographical Society of the Pa- Sold at 25 cts. a box by Blakeley & cific, has received a letter from the chief Houghton. of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, Washington, D. C., stating that Mt. Orizaba, in Mexico, is the highest. Mt. St. Elias, Alaska, has for many years past been considered the highest. but Orizaba has been proven to be the higher by 299 feet. The exact figures. as forwarded to Secretary Partridge, are : Mt. Orizaba, 18,314 feet; Mt. St. Elias, 18,015. "These figures," said Assistant Secretary Trenor, "are authentic: and doubtless it will interest every one to know that the question has been settled by so undoubted an authority."

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, ) GENERAL LAND OFFICE,

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 14, 1893. ) Register and Receiver. The Dalles. Or. GENTLEMEN: - Referring to your letter of 2d inst., transmitting application of ______ for repayment of fees and commissions paid on Homestead entry No. ----, you are advised that said entry was canceled upon relinquishment October 2nd, 1893.

The records of this office show no conflict; nor was the entry erroneously allowed, but it appears that the relinquishment was a voluntary act on the part of the entryman.

The law governing the return of fees and commissions does not provide for repayment in cases where parties voluntarily relinquish or abandon their en-

The application is accordingly denied. Yours Respectfully, S. W. LAMOREUX, Commissioner.

THE art of ragpicking is understood in other places beside Paris. The revenue from the rubbish from the streets of the city of London last year was £1,133; bottles, boots, knives, iron, corks, string, paper, rags, tins and other odds and ends, each contributing their quota. An unopened letter, containing a check of great value, was found among the refuse and was forwarded to the address on the envelope.

H. GLENN,

The Dalles, Or.

Mrs. Lucy Stone, who has just died in Massachusetts, was a pioneer worker for the rights of her sex. When a little girl she became indignantat the way she saw women treated by their husbands, and the laws, and made up her childish mind that the laws must be changed. Her early struggles for an education were heroic, and she finally succeeded in entering and going through Oberlin, the only college at that time that admitted women, earning her way by teaching all the time. She graduated in 1847, and gave her first woman's right lecture the same year. Soon after she was engaged to lecture regularly for the Anti-Slavery Society. But she devoted most of her time to lecturing on woman's rights all over the country. In 1855 she was married, after much persuasion, to Henry B. Blackwell, a young hardware merchant of Cincinnati, who was in full sympathy with her beliefs. It was necessary to send thirty miles for a minister who would marry them without using the word "obey." Mrs. Stone retained her maiden name. Mrs. Stone has helped to organize many societies in behalf of women, and has held prominent office in many. In 1870 she started the Woman's Journal in Boston, which she has edited for many years. She has spent her later years in lecturing, together with her husband, in many states.
