What is It?

A substitute for lard? Upsetting the customs, habits, and prejudices of centuries? Yes, all this and more. Cottolene is a new cooking product—it is better than lard or butter for cooking, so say such noted housekeepers as Marion Harland, Catharine Owen, Christine Terhune Herrick, Emma P. Ewing, Mrs. S. T. Rorer, Mrs. F. A. Benson, Amy Barnes, Margaret Wister, and many others; it is healthier—so says every thoughtful physician; and it is cheaper as every housekeeper knows when she finds that one-half the quantity answers every purpose.

COTTOLENE

is the purest clarified cottonseed oil mixed with pure beef fat. It is the best cooking material ever devised for frying anything and everything—easily digested and highly nutritious.

Beware of imitations. Ask your grocer for the genuine Cottolene.

ALL WERE DROWNED

A Sunken Vessel Discovered in Lake Erie.

A WOMAN WALKED TO DEATH

Her Terrible Tramp Across the Continent—She Was Picked up Unconscious.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 23.—The sunken vessel discovered a few miles off this port is thought to be undoubtedly the schooner Riverside, missing since the big storm of the 13th. Those on board the vessel were: Captain D. G. Farrington and wife; Joseph Hargreaves, mate, and his son John; John Paige, seaman, and two other sailors. All were undoubtedly drowned.

WALKED HERSELF TO DEATH.

A Woman's Terrible Tramp Across the Continent.

MONTREAL, Oct. 23.—Left destitute in San Francisco, Mme. de Lavalie started for Montreal several months ago with a horse and buggy. She reached here last evening on foot, and is in the Notre Dame hospital in a dying condition from the hardship and exposure of the journey. Mme. de Lavalie's husband died about a year ago, and her three children were carried off by the smallpox. Having relations here, she started on her journey. At the end of a fortnight her horse gave out, and from that time the widow pursued her long walk over the prairies and mountains until Detroit was reached, where she rested awhile. Sometimes she was given a ride by trainmen. For food she depended entirely upon charity, and her shelter at night was as often under a tree as in a shed or farmhouse. When Montreal was reached her clothes were in tatters and her shoes worn out. Still she persevered, and was leaving here for her home in Longueuil when she broke down entirely, and was picked up in an unconscious condition on the wharf near the ferry landing and taken to the hospital. Her skeleton-like appearance and her wandering mind attest her complete physical and mental breakdown.

Sounds a Warning.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 24.—Special to THE CHRONICLE.—In the senate today Senator Stewart has the floor. He arraigns the senators for not agreeing on a 20 to 1 ratio and says the reason they do not is due to the obstinacy of the gold bugs. Another senator thought that the present session would be another billion dollar congress, and said that they are frittering away their time and accomplishing nothing. He believes it will sound the death knell of the democratic party.

A bad wreck occurred on the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago road in a dense fog about 6 o'clock Sunday morning between the second section of a west-bound vestibule train, which was standing at a switch near Monroeville, and the second section of an east-bound passenger. Engineer Cowan was frightfully scalded and Fireman Daly badly hurt. Brakeman Hunt is suffering from wounds which may result fatally. The first car from the engine was not damaged, but the two following were smashed and some of the passengers seriously hurt.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

"If the Republicans Offered the Lord's Prayer the Democrats Would Oppose."

From our regular correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20, 1893.

Senator Sherman truly represented the position of the republican senators when he said in the great speech he made this week: "In times past we never shrunk from responsibility. We were republicans because we believed in republican principles and men and measures. But whenever a question came up that had to be decided, we never pleaded the baby act, or said that we could not agree. We met together in conclave and there agreed, and in that way we passed all the great laws which have marked American history in the last thirty years. Of course democrats opposed us. I think that if the republicans were to offer the Ten Commandments or the Lord's Prayer, the democrats would oppose them. Now we do not stand in that attitude. We ask our brother senators on the other side to meet together and consult with each other. If they do not like the president's plans let them give us some other, in God's name, and let us settle this important question, and then we will take it into our consideration. If we can agree with you we will do so. If we cannot agree with you we will not follow your example, but will give you a manly 'No.'"

"We must decide this silver question one way or the other. If you cannot do it and will retire from the senate chamber we will fix it on this side of the chamber, and do the best we can with our silver friends who belong to us and who are blood of our blood and bone of our bone. But yours is the proper duty; and, therefore, I beg of you, not in reproach or anger, to perform it. You have the supreme honor of being able to settle this question now; and you ought to do it. That is all that I can say."

The silver democratic senators thought Senator Sherman's advice to "meet together," good, and prepared a call for a democratic caucus decision. The administration senators mostly refused to sign, knowing that a majority of the democratic senators are opposed to the Voorhees bill and that the caucus decision would consequently be against that bill, but a sufficient number of signatures were secured to compel Senator Gorman, who is chairman of the caucus committee, to call a caucus. But there can be nothing definite about its action, because the democrats who do not attend will not be bound. It may, however, result in getting the silver democrats to agree upon some sort of compromise, which they have not yet done.

If Mr. Cleveland had not called off the administration senators, a compromise would have been reached early this week. How this affected the democrats may be judged by Senator Morgan's criticism of him in his speech. He said: "I am disposed to say to the president, 'When you leave the executive mansion and come here to guide us in legislation, you must not feel at all affronted if we take up the veto power and use it on you. You shall not interfere with us.'" How the two wings of the democratic party can be got together is not at this time apparent.

Many people have been puzzled at the non-action of the state judiciary committee on the nomination of Mr. Hornblower to the supreme court vacancy, which has been costly and inconvenient to lawyers and litigants in cases which the chief justice insists shall only be heard by a full bench, but the secret is now out. It is another case of Senator Hill's peanut politics. Mr. Hornblower was one of the democratic lawyers of New York who openly condemned the criminal acts of Judge Maynard, who heads the recently-nominated democratic state ticket, and Senator Hill is a member of the senate judiciary committee to which Hornblower's nomination was referred. The New York boss thought he saw an opportunity for revenge, both on Hornblower and on the administration, by hanging up the nomination and making a pretense of being able to defeat it. He then sent word to Deputy President Dan Lamont that if the administration would in some public way endorse the candidacy of Judge Maynard he would withdraw his opposition to Hornblower's confirmation. That is the whole story as far as it has gone.

The democratic members of the house ways and means committee say that the imposition of an income tax has been decided upon and that it only remains to determine where it shall begin—the lowest income that shall be taxed—that the rate of taxation shall be and how it shall be collected.

Slowly but surely the democrats are carrying out the threat of Senator Blackburn to repeal every vestige of war legislation. The house this week passed a bill amending the Revised Statutes so that proof of loyalty shall not be necessary in any application for bounty land where the proof otherwise shows that the applicant is entitled thereto. OVER THE ATLANTIC.

Professor Hazen, of the Signal Office, Will Attempt it in a Balloon.

In Monday's Oregonian is a two column profoundly interesting article, of a balloon trip across the Atlantic contemplated by Prof. Hazen, of the United States weather bureau.

The balloon will be a small one comparatively speaking. An envelope containing 100,000 cubic feet should be plenty big enough for a voyage to Europe. The material used is goldbeaters' skin, which is obtained from a part of the intestines of the ox, called the "caecum." It is somewhat more costly than cotton or even silk but it is superior for the purpose in many ways. The main point is that a tight balloon can be made of it, which is not practicable with any other substance hitherto tried. The goldbeaters' skin comes in small sheets, the biggest obtainable being 22x10 inches. It looks somewhat like oiled tissue to the eye, but is not porous. Six layers put together make about the thickness of letter paper, with nearly the same weight as silk. However, four thicknesses will serve for a balloon, the sheets being overlain upon each other in such a way that there are no joints or seams. The balloon will be filled with hydrogen, which has a lifting power of 70 pounds for each 1,000 cubic feet, will thus have a total lifting power of 8,000 pounds. After loading with passengers and necessary equipments there will be a margin of 5,500 pounds, which would be taken along as ballast in the shape of sand in bags.

Speed could be best obtained by traveling as high as 6,000 feet, because the currents at that elevation are two or three times as fast as those near the ocean.

It is most important that the aeronaut should be able to place his balloon at any level of the atmosphere he pleases. There may be an unfavorable wind at 1,000 feet, and at the same time just the right breeze may blow at 10,000 feet. The currents at the latter altitude are always blowing from west to east across the Atlantic, and for that reason there should be no difficulty in accomplishing the trip quickly. Professor Hazen thinks of taking with him a small pilot balloon, which may be run up to the height of a mile above the great gasbag, so as to ascertain the direction of the breeze at a higher level without taking the trouble to ascend in order to find out.

It is an extraordinary circumstance about ballooning that when a man has gone up many times he forgets danger and becomes careless. At the same time, the danger of ballooning has been very much exaggerated. The accidents which occur are invariably caused by mismanagement or carelessness. With proper control there is no more peril attached to navigating the air than in riding on a railway.

Daniel J. White, for some months employed as car repairer by the Monte Cristo railroad at Everett, Wash., locked himself in one of the company's cars at the depot and blew his brains out with a revolver Sunday. He was an Englishman, about 30 years old, and his family resided at Whatcom. No reason can be assigned for the act.
