YOU DON'T KNOW
what a comfort it is to have ready at hand a remedy that never fails to relieve Constipation, and that, without pain or discomfort; and almost immediately cures head-aches, and dispels every symptom of Dyspepsia. Such a remedy is found in Simmons Liver Regulator - not a sweetened compound to nauseate, or an intoxicating beverage to cultivate an alcoholic appetite, but a medicine pleasant to the taste, and perfectly harmless when given to the smallest child. S. L. R. never disappoints. It possesses the virtues and perfections of a reliable remedy of the kind endorsed by eminent physicians.
"It affords me pleasure to add my testimony to those you receive annually in reference to your valuable medicine. I consider Simmons Liver Regulator the best family medicine on the market. I have prescribed it with excellent results."
W. F. PARK, M. D., Tracy City, Tenn.

THE HOME PAPER
The Dalles Evening Chronicle is recognized as essentially the home paper for the Dalles city folks. This is not a bad reputation. Some 2,000 of our best citizens watch the columns of this paper daily for the spiciest local news. It succeeds in pleasing the field, and hence grows in popularity and importance. Take it awhile, you who don't; try some of its premium offers.

ONE MORE IS ADDED
Carter Harrison, Five Times Mayor of Chicago, Killed by a Crank.
ASSASSINATED AT HIS RESIDENCE
The Murderer Surrenders Himself and Is Now Closely Guarded to Prevent Lynching.
CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Another crazy crank has done his deadly work, and Carter H. Harrison, a five-times mayor of Chicago and one of the best known men in the west, lies dead at his home, 231 South Ashland Boulevard. Three bullets entered his body, two making wounds sufficient to cause death. The murder was committed by Eugene Patrick Prendergast, a paper-carrier, who had declared Mayor Harrison had promised to make him corporation counsel and had not kept his word. This, he said, was the only reason for committing the crime. The only person in the house at the time of the shooting, besides Mr. Harrison, was his son, William Preston Harrison, aged 25, and the servants. A little before 8 o'clock the door bell rang, and when Mary Hansen, a domestic, opened the door, she was confronted by a man about 5 feet 5 inches high, smooth shaven and with clean-cut features, lighted up by a pair of dark eyes.
"Is Mr. Harrison in?" asked the man in a quiet, pleasant voice.
"Yes, sir," responded the girl, as she threw open the door to admit his entrance.
"I would like to see him, please," said the man, as he walked toward the back end of the hall.
Mayor Harrison was in the dining-room, which opened into the rear of the hall. Hearing a man ask for him, he stepped into the hall and walked toward Prendergast.
Without saying a word, Prendergast drew a revolver and commenced to fire. He pulled the trigger three times, and every bullet hit its mark. One bullet shattered Harrison's left hand; another passed into the lower right side of the abdomen, making a wound that would have been mortal within a few days, while the third bullet entered the chest slightly above the heart. This wound was the immediate cause of death.
AFTER THE FIRING.
So soon as Prendergast began to fire, Harrison turned and walked rapidly toward the dining-room. He passed through a room into the butler's pantry, where, weakened by the loss of blood, he fell to the floor. Prendergast did not follow up his victim, but replaced his revolver in his pocket with the same deliberation that marked all his actions, and started toward the door. Just as he was passing out, William Preston Harrison came tearing down the stairs and the coachman ran into the rear end of the hall. The cries of Mary Hansen directed the son to where the father lay, but the coachman was after other game. He had a revolver of his own, and as quickly as he realized what had occurred he sent a bullet after the retreating form of the murderer. A second time he fired, but both bullets went wild. Running to the door, the coachman prepared to continue hostilities, but several people entered to learn the cause of the shooting, and by the time the coachman reached the door the murderer had disappeared.
THE MAYOR'S DEATH.
Across Ashland boulevard, directly opposite the Harrison residence, is the home of W. J. Chalmers, a wealthy maker of mining machinery. Chalmers was standing upon the front steps of his residence when the shots were fired. He dashed across the street and met Prendergast at the gate.
"What is it?" said Chalmers. The man walked rapidly away without replying, and Chalmers hastened into the house and reached Harrison almost at the same moment that William Preston Harrison found where his father lay.
"Are you hurt?" asked Chalmers, as he and the son of the dying man strove to raise him.
"I have got my death, Chalmers," responded the mayor: "I'm shot in the heart and a dead man."
A moment later Harrison said with a voice rapidly losing strength:
"Unbutton my vest; there's where the trouble is."
By this time the stricken man was borne to a couch in an adjoining room, and as he spoke Chalmers gently opened his waistcoat. The front of the shirt was soaked in blood, which welled rapidly from the wound.

"It's through the heart," said the mayor again, his voice scarcely above a whisper.
A moment later he sank into unconsciousness, and 20 minutes after receiving the wound Mr. Harrison was dead.
About 25 minutes after the shooting, Sergeant Frank McDonald was standing in the office of the Desplaines-street police station. Every available officer had already hurried out to work on the case and McDonald was preparing to follow. The door was pushed gently open and in walked a small, smooth-shaven, poorly-dressed man carrying a revolver in his hand. He shook like a man with the palsy. His face was white and drawn. Great drops of perspiration chased each other down his face, and his tottering limbs seemed scarcely able to hold him up. Looking McDonald straight in the eyes, he said:
"I did it."
"You did it?" asked McDonald.
"Yes, I did."
"Did what?" said the officer, as he laid one hand on the fellow's shoulder, and with the other took the revolver.
"I shot Mayor Harrison, and that is what I shot him with," was the reply.
"What made you do it?" asked McDonald.
"He said he would make me corporation counsel, and he did not. That is what I shot him for."
Prendergast was trembling so he could scarcely stand, and the officer led him to a chair and asked a few more questions, to which Prendergast would only make the reply he had first given as to the cause of the shooting. He said that after leaving Harrison's house, he had taken a street car and started toward Desplaines-street station with the object of giving himself up, adding:
"The car did not go very fast, or I would have been here sooner."
THREATS OF LYNCHING.
The cell door had scarcely closed behind the murderer when an excited crowd began gathering about the police station. Patrol wagons rattled up to the place, cabs and carriages came by the score, and the occupants crowded and pushed their way into the office. Personal friends of the dead mayor, city officials and the curious crowded against each other in a wild endeavor to learn if the story, which spread like wildfire through the city, was true. An immense throng gathered and the laboring men who had stopped on their way home added their voices to the subdued threats of vengeance, for Mr. Harrison was popular with the masses. The streets were soon filled with blocks, and the officers, as they looked out the station windows upon the surging sea of angry faces, became alarmed for the safety of their prisoner. A hasty conference was held and it was decided to remove Prendergast to the central station in the city hall. The trembling, pale-faced man was led between stalwart officers to the rear door and hurried away into the darkness.
Mr. Chalmers said late last night regarding the shooting:
"After we had carried Mr. Harrison to his couch, he said it was useless to do anything for him, and his last words, as nearly as I can remember them, were: 'Give me water—send for Annie—give me water.' Young Harrison said to me: 'I told father long ago something like this would happen. He was too easy in letting people in to see him, cranks and everybody.'"
Miss Annie Howard, fiancée of Mr. Harrison, was in the house at the time the fatal shot was fired. In accordance with the wounded man's request, she was at once summoned and was present when the end came. Miss Howard's grief was pitiable. She was completely overcome, and was taken to the house of Carter Harrison, Jr., at Jackson Park, who when the news of his father's death reached him, hastened home. Mrs. Heaton Owsley, the mayor's daughter, who resides nearly five miles from her father's residence, received the news by telephone and hastened to Ashland boulevard, but her father was dead fully 20 minutes before she arrived.

FOREIGN FLASHES.
The oldest son of Prince Albrecht of Prussia is now 19 years of age and spoken of as the future husband of the queen of Holland.
During service Friday evening at the Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem a dispute arose in the congregation, which ended in a monk being shot dead and two other monks severely wounded by pistol shots.
Advices from Melilla are to the effect that troops under General Otega engaged the Moors in a sharp fight and succeeded in driving the latter from the trenches. The loss on both sides was very heavy, many Spanish officers being killed, among them General Margillo, commander of the garrison. General Otega demanded reinforcements and two regiments are now being dispatched to Melilla.
There is One Thing Certain.
Call it malaria or what you may and it generally comes without calling, where ill health does exist Simmons Liver Regulator will restore it.
During my term of service in the army I contracted chronic diarrhoea," says A. E. Beneing, of Halney, Oregon. "Since then I have used a great amount of medicine, but when I found any that would give me relief they would injure my stomach, until Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was brought to my notice. I used it and will say it is the only remedy that gave me permanent relief and no bad results follow." For sale by Blakeley & Houghton.
