AMERICANISM TRIUMPHANT.

Americans throughout the length and breadth of the land have cause for sincere rejoicing today over the result of the contest in two great representative the oval dish. states. Ohio is representative of the distinctive American policy of protecin Illinois is contained the heart of the giant." foreign riffraff who assume to dominate the native born in the law-making and executive functions. Both have given such majorities as are unmistakbly indicative of the spirit and the ability to yet govern their interests. The sweeping victory in Ohio gives assurance that Mr. McKinley will be the republican standard bearer in 1896, while a majority of 8,000 in Chicago shows that even in that hot-bed of anarchism there are still a majority of citizens who do not favor dynamite as their arbiter and the red flag as their token. The election of Altgeld, who got in with a small majority by an overwhelming vote in Chicago, has proven a salutary lesson, and hereafter in Illinois the qualification of native birth will be demanded to win the greater number of suffrages for a gubernatorial candidate. It will stand as a lesson for all time. A clear menace to the December congress is found in the handsome majority rolled up by Ohio. A rigid enforcement of the tariff rider contained in President Cleveland's last message would mean ruin to the democratic party. Hence the fear of tariff revision, which has closed manufactories and depressed trade, will be ended and the healing process will date from today. Of course values cannot be restored in an instant. The panic was too widespread and too long continued for that, but we greatly mistake if staple

Further cheering news comes from the Empire state, which elected Bartlett judge of the court of appeals and a majority on joint ballot in the legislature. Iowa returns an old-fashioned republican majority and our dispatches tell the story of victory all along the line. This should be a proud day for

"Mark Twain," when in New York, lives at the quiet Players' club. He has a room in the top of the house, and there he works and smokes as free from interruption as when at home in Hartford. Mr. Clemens' hair, which was once as black as a crow's feathers, is now silvery, but still abundant. At the dinner given him by the Oxford Club in Brooklyn last Tuesday evening "Mark" was exceedingly facetious. He told good stories, and laughed at other people's stories immensely. He has spent considerable time in Europe of late and fun there, as Americans understand it, is as thoroughly unknown as it is in the inner recesses of the Egyptian pyramids.

Mr Van Allen, outside of his monocle, his Prince of Wales beard, his marriage into the Astor family, his tally-ho coach and his $50,000 contribution of last fall, has not made any mark in the world. For the first time, a man absolutely without qualifications, in return for a money consideration, has been named as our minister to the foreign court, which at least has the right to expect, If we are going to be represented there at all, that the representative should be a man of some public reputation at home. If the Van Allen episode is to be in any way a precedent, it would be far better for us to abolish our whole diplomatic service than to farm it out to men whose only title to consideration is their money, and who are about as much at home as ambassadors at foreign courts as a hanger-on at a stage door would be if selected for the leading part on the dish,' said the waitress. "Then, as I looked the other way on the table, I saw another dish of eggs. But they looked precisely like those in the first dish, and I wondered how anybody could tell them apart if they should ever get mixed up. As long as they were kept at the ends of the table where they were first placed it would be very simple; but suppose some polite guest should say to his neighbor:

"'Will you have the eggs?" "And suppose the man should say: 'Yes, thank you,' and take them, and suppose one dish should in this way work along the table until it was alongside the other; or, for that matter, suppose the dishes should change places, as they might easily do, who could tell then which was hard and which soft? I found myself rather amused by this idea, and I asked the waitress how they could tell which was which.

""Why, the soft boiled are in the square dish and the hard boiled are in
