SOME HORRIBLE TORTURES.

Four Negroes Mutilated and Murdered by a Mob.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 13.—An almost incredible lynching story comes from Fort White, situated near the phosphate mines and convict camps, 20 miles from Lake City. Henry Boggs and three other negroes, charged with the murder and robbery of W. J. Duncan, a white storekeeper, were the victims of the mob's fury. The report, which is meager, says Boggs was taken from the officer and shot, after which his body was mutilated in a horrible manner. One account says he was not dead when the mutilation began. Members of the mob cut into the flesh with long knives, and when he cried out from the pain part of a blanket was stuffed into his mouth. Another statement is to the effect that slits were cut and his eyes stiched up and then gouged out. As to the other captives, they "escaped," so it is reported, but horrible cries and groans heard in the swamp shortly after the escape cause people to smile incredulously at the report. Some go so far as to say they were treated with much greater severity than Boggs, one of them being burned alive in an effort on the part of the mob to extort a confession from him. Pieces of pitch were set on fire and stuck into his quivering flesh until he died. An absolute authentic account of the affair will probably never be written, as the whole community is implicated, and the region is a wild one, where the people do not stand on ceremony. It would be a dangerous thing for any man to go there and undertake to make an investigation.
