RECTIFYING INADVERTENT HONESTY.

Tuesday evening's Mountaineer contained an article adverse to the action of the city council, though expressed weakly and with great fear and trembling; and last night, in an excess of zeal to set itself straight, it goes to the other extreme and arrays itself squarely against the farmer. With this new ally, THE CHRONICLE feels that it has a heroic battle upon its shoulders, but being on the side of right, has no fear of the outcome. In the first place the article in last night's Mountaineer is contemptible, not merely because that paper retreats from its own sentiments, but because it ignores the point of contention standing boldly out all through THE CHRONICLE's article of Tuesday. Here is the yelp referred to in Tuesday's Mountaineer: Oh, reader, defend this weakling with a broad mantle of charity: The ordinance was passed at the earnest solicitation of citizens, and we learn this morning that the mayor instructed the marshal not to enforce it too strictly. This community desires to be a city, but not to such an extent as to drive trade away. The beach is an available place for teams to be fastened, and it will in no way interfere with the public thoroughfares.

How pitiful it is that we have an ordinance that the marshal is instructed not to force "too strictly." Perhaps the mayor was afraid some indignant farmer might take a shot at the retreating marshal leading away his horse. He would certainly have that right. The next sentence is the only honest one in the paragraph, and will be hard to reconcile with what the Mountaineer said last night. Here it is in all its diplomatic leniency: "This community desires to be a city, but not to such an extent as to drive trade away." But, as if afraid of having said too much, it dismisses the whole matter by telling what a good place the beach is for teamsters, whereas the beach is infested with tramps, hobos and thieves who would steal everything out of the wagon, including the end gate, while the farmer was up town doing business.

The criticism of the Mountaineer last night is equally senseless. Here are the principal points, sentence by sentence: During the last two or three months, by reason of teams standing in the streets, there has been several disastrous runaways. If anyone can find where THE CHRONICLE has advocated country teams standing loose in the streets we will offer a receipt for a year's subscription.

The council have rented a vacant lot for the purpose of hitching and feeding animals, and this place is as convenient and a great deal more cleanly to feed a horse hay and grain than on the sidewalks.

No farmer has ever fed on a sidewalk, but if he had we will cite the foremost city for beauty and cleanliness, the capital itself, Washington, D. C., and that most popular and fashionable street, Pennsylvania avenue, as an instance where negro lunksters drive to the very heart of the city, and feed their teams their noonday meal from boxes on the curbstone.

Furthermore the lot the Mountaineer speaks of is sadly insufficient to accommodate all the teams which drive in at this season. They would be packed as tight as sardines in a box, and to hitch up four or six horses to a wagon and drive out would be a practical impossibility.

The repeal of the ordinance would allow cows to prowl around at night, feast themselves on shade trees, break down fences, etc.

Not to say that cows do not do this and have for months, we do not contend for repeal of the ordinance, and would like to see it enforced, in every particular, but do contend (and herein the Mountaineer's absence of argument is so conspicuous) that it is unlawful and against the spirit of the ordinance, as originally drafted, that teams are to drive out of the city at nightfall or patronize a feed yard. These are all the points touched upon by our cotemporary, other than the ill-advised epithet of referring to the editor of this paper as a moseback. But as our rival lives in a very large glass house, we will let him enjoy the consciousness of an occasional visit to Portland and Heppner.

Why does not the Mountaineer attack us on our main standpoint which is prominent all through our article, that

The Dalles is destroying itself by legislating against the farmer in favor of feed yards? Simply because it is unanswerable. In arraying itself against the farmer, the Mountaineer is keeping up with its former record in its spiteful kicks against the citizens, bemoaning their lack of enterprise and snarling at them continually. With the Mountaineer in opposition to both the city and country its field of usefulness is indeed small.

DOWN WITH DESPOTISM.

The Telegram says: Crush the one-man power. This is a constitutional government with fixed limitations upon the several departments. Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, has assumed power and authority which the constitution does not confer upon the executive department. He was guilty of usurpation in suspending the Geary law. He was guilty of usurpation in suspending the purchasing clause of the Sherman law before the repeal bill passed. He was guilty of conspiracy and usurpation in using the power of patronage to force the people's representatives into supporting the repeal bill. He is now guilty of usurpation and a gross violation of both the spirit and the letter of the constitution in making war on the provisional government of Hawaii without the concurrent action of congress. These are high crimes and misdemeanors which must go unpunished.

For once the Telegram has struck the keynote. Though the succeeding paragraphs are rather far-fetched, ending with the usual hysterics, the premises are correct. Mr. Cleveland has not once, but often in the last few months, grossly exceeded his authority, which would be a burning shame for the people longer to tolerate. Impeachment's the thing.

THE DALLES
 Wasco County, Oregon.
 The Gate City of the Inland Empire is situated at the head of navigation on the Middle Columbia, and is a thriving, prosperous city.
ITS TERRITORY.
 It is the supply city for an extensive and rich agricultural and grazing country, its trade reaching as far south as Summer Lake, a distance of over two hundred miles.
The Largest Wool Market.
 The rich grazing country along the eastern slope of the Cascades furnishes pasture for thousands of sheep, the wool from which finds market here.
 The Dalles is the largest original wool shipping point in America, about 5,000,000 pounds being shipped last year.
ITS PRODUCTS.
 The salmon fisheries are the finest on the Columbia, yielding this year a revenue of thousands of dollars, which will be more than doubled in the near future.
 The products of the beautiful Klickitat valley find market here, and the country south and east has this year filled the warehouses, and all available storage places to overflowing with their products.
ITS WEALTH.
 It is the richest city of its size on the coast and its money is scattered over and is being used to develop more farming country than is tributary to any other city in Eastern Oregon.
 Its situation is unsurpassed. Its climate delightful. Its possibilities incalculable. Its resources unlimited. And on these corner stones she stands.
The California Winehouse,
 Is now open, and its proprietor will sell his home-produced Wine at prices in the reach of everybody. Also, best Peanuts to be found. Goods guaranteed to be Pure and First-Class in every respect.
