Professor Joseph B. Witherbee, writing in the Popular Science Monthly, calls for universal reform in penmanship. He says the demand among business men now is for style of penmanship that can be written rapidly and that can be easily read. The present fashion, with its sloping letters, is so far from meeting

The kind of hand that will fill the bill Professor Witherbee finds in the straight up and down style, the letters being written without tendency to slant in any direction. He claims that this is the natural style, and that the slanting chirography is only obtained after long and painful effort on the part of the pupil. The vertical handwriting is much more easily read than the sloping one. just as the plain letters of ordinary print are more easily read than italics.

In England the reform has so far progressed that the civil service examiners require the upright writing on the part of applicants and will accept no other. This is on account of its greater legibility. Vertical style copybooks have already been published in England, and on the whole we may look upon this as the handwriting of the future.

The application of power through triple screws in large ships is an innovation, and its results in the Columbia are watched with intense interest by the entire civilized world. Essentially and avowedly a commerce destroyer, and not a fighting ship, the armament of the Columbia will be comparatively light. The Columbia has been in a special degree the work of Engineer-in-Chief G. W. Melville, U. S. N., of the bureau of steam engineering, under whose direction the designing of her machinery was done. When the estimates were made for this ship, the speed fixed was twenty knots, but after the naval appropriation bill was passed, it was found that in conference the speed had been raised to twenty-one knots, and Mr. Melville decided that the ship should have from 20,000 to 21,000 horse power, and at once began to lay out the engines and boilers. It soon became apparent that twin screw engines would not do, because of their size and the fact that they would be very extravagant in the use of steam at the ordinary cruising speed. Besides this the space that could be given up to machinery was restricted, and would not be satisfactory for twin screw engines. Mr. Melville then decided that triple screw engines were the only ones that would do, and at once set about the preliminary design. Through the course of her construction he has watched the machinery carefully, and the auccess which she has achieved marks a new era in marine propulsion.

THEDALLES

Wasco County, - - - Oregon.

The Gate City of the Inland Empire is situated at the head of navigation on the Middle Columbia, and is a thriving, pros perous city.

ITS TERRITORY.

It is the supply city for an extensive and rich agricultural and grazing country, its trade reaching as far south as Summer Lake, a distance of over two hundred miles.

The Largest Wool Market.

The rich grazing country along the eastern slope of the Cas-cades furnishes pasture for thousands of sheep, the wool from which finds market here.

The Dalles is the largest original wool shipping point in America, about 5,000,000 pounds being shipped last year.

ITS PRODUCTS.

The salmon fisheries are the finest on the Columbia, yielding this year a revenue of thousands of dollars, which will be more than doubled in the near future.

The products of the beautiful Klickitat valley find market here, and the country south and east has this year filled the warehouses, and all available storage places to overflowing with their products.

ITS WEALTH.

It is the richest city of its size on the coast and its money is scattered over and is being used to develop more farming country than is tributary to any other city in Eastern Oregon. Its situation is unsurpassed. Its climate delightful. Its pos-sibilities incalculable. Its resources unlimited. And on these corner stones she stands.
