THE DALLES - OREGON

The Stutz Company.

The Stutz company has played a very successful week's engagement in The Dalles. They came here only to put in time, not expecting to make expenses, but Mr. Stutz informs a reporter that the receipts for the five nights will pay their expenses for the entire week, so that what they take in tonight and at the matinee will be clear. They deserve this much at the hands of our people and both are to be congratulated. Their plays have all been of a high moral tone, and the lessons have benefited many who could not be reached through the pulpit. The personnel of the company are all ladies and gentlemen, and off the stage have carried themselves with a respectful and proper bearing. They have made many friends. The argument that the money paid to traveling show companies goes out of town not to return is bad. The receipts have been paid to our hotel and store-keepers, which is disbursed again to the channels of circulation. What they take in today is for value received and conscientious, tiring work, and they should be greeted with a rousing house. They play "Fanchon," which made Maggie Mitchell, and all may be assured their money's worth.

An Editor Horsewhipped.

For the publication of an article in reference to the character of his father, Henry Liebe, young Alfred C. Liebe this afternoon horsewhipped Bruno Sittig, editor of the Freie Presse, at the corner of Third and Washington streets, with a riding-whip, over the face and body. Henry Liebe, it will be remembered, was recently shot by his nephew, Christian Hess, who claimed to have been a victim of heartless persecution at the hands of Liebe, which drove him to shoot Liebe and kill himself. In referring to this affair the Staats Zeitung did not touch as gently as young Liebe desired on the reputation of his father, and this made the occasion for the horse-whipping administered to Sittig. The two men met about 1 o'clock and Liebe began striking Sittig across the face with a riding-whip. He struck a number of blows over the head and body of the editor before the arrival of Officer Durrenberger, who placed Liebe under arrest and took him to the police station. There he was charged with assault and battery and was released on $20 bail.—Telegram.

SPARROWS ON A SPREE.

An Ingenious Planter Saved His Cotton by Getting the Birds Dead Drunk. The English sparrows have proved a nuisance in the cotton country, for as soon as the pods open they pick out the cotton and carry it off, and some planters have lost, as they claim, hundreds of pounds in this way. There is one man, however, on the Mississippi coast who has not lost much, says the St. Louis Chronicle. When he found the sparrows were committing depredations he procured a quantity of wheat, soaked it in sweetened whisky, and strewed it along the rows. The sparrows found it and thought they had a picnic.

So they had, but in fifteen or twenty minutes were the tipsiest lot of English sparrows ever seen on the face of this earth. They rolled about on the ground, falling on their backs and sides and kicking their heels into the air like a parcel of drunkards, all the while uttering the most comical squeaks. They did not have long to squeak, however, for the boys gathered them up and threw them into bags. The first day they gathered two bushels of drunken sparrows. Three or four days later the experiment was repeated with almost equal success, and from time to time since. They made excellent potpie, but the survivors have evidently come to regard the plantation as hoodooed, for now very few come about it.

For Her Sake.

"It is sad to see the chill of autumn settling o'er the world," she said. "Why—er—yes, I believe it is," said the young man. "Autumn always fills me with sadness," she went on. "Even with you I know I shall be sorrowful when the frost kills the leaves and leaves the world so desolate." "No you won't," he answered positively. "I'll fix that." "How?" "I'll go into the coal business."—Washington Star.

WHAT VANDERBILT LIKED.

The Doughnuts and Indian Puddings He Had Cooked for Him in Newport.

Down in Newport the other day this anecdote of the late William K. Vanderbilt was told: "The husband of a woman, who for many years annually helped the housekeeper at the Vanderbilt summer house pack the goods which it was intended to take back to the winter home, said he went down to the Vanderbilt place to meet his wife one day, and as he was coming away Mr. Vanderbilt came out on the lawn and stopped him, saying: 'Do you know where I can get a good cook for four weeks? I am going to stay here a month longer, and the cook is going to leave to-morrow. Can't you get me one?'"

"I said I didn't know. I would try, and then Mr. Vanderbilt said: 'I don't want any French, fancified cook. I'm going to be here almost by myself, and I want one who can make old-fashioned things. I've been just longing for some Indian pudding, some doughnuts and cheese, and some brown bread.' I knew where there was an old cook, and although she had given up the business I got her to go for the month. She said she got orders to cook all old-style things. One day she told Mr. Vanderbilt sent for her, she went in, and he said: 'Do you know how to make doughnuts?' She said she did, and then he said he wished he could have some such as his mother used to make. Then he said he wanted an old-fashioned Indian pudding, with that amber-colored jelly all round the outside of it. He used to invite other elderly men to come to dine with him and would praise it all, and ask them if it didn't make them think of old times."

"Said the Newport man: 'One day I met Mr. Vanderbilt again, just as he was about to leave for New York for the winter, and he said: 'I'm much obliged to you for sending me that cook. I have had a good time. I've had the best things to eat that I have known in many a year.'—N. Y. Advertiser.

Etiquette of a Practiced Sort.

A housewife of the East end concluded that the only solution of the servant-girl problem was to teach a green girl herself. She had experience with girls who thought they knew something, with no success. Accordingly she engaged a girl from the country who professed to know nothing, and commenced training her. One of the new servant's duties was to attend the door, and the lady of the house tried in many ways to impress upon her mind the necessity of taking a tray or salver with her when she answered the bell to receive cards, letters, etc. During the afternoon the bell rang and shortly afterward the servant appeared at her mistress's door, saying: "If you please, ma'am, the vegetable man is at the door and wants to know if you want any good potatoes." The lady looked up from her sewing, and then fell into a fit of laughter. The servant was standing as she had been taught, holding the silver tray with three large potatoes on it in the most proper manner. The servant's sense of the fitness of things was evidently undeveloped.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Who Their Sweethearts Are.

"My sweetheart," said a diamond dealer in Maiden lane, "is a jewel of a girl. Her eyes are as blue as sapphires, her cheeks are like the carnelian, she has lips of coral, teeth like pearls, her brow is white as Persian marble and her hair is the color of old gold. Her name is Ruby. She has a dreamy look like the moonstone. Her wit sparkles like a diamond. Her father is a connoisseur in gems. I adore her!" "A rare flower," said the Fifth avenue florist, "is my sweetheart. She has eyes like bluebells, cheeks like pinks, a brow like the lily and hair the hue of yellow roses. When I saw her last she wore a bunch of brown chrysanthemums at her throat and held a fox-glove in her hand. She was born in Posey county, Ind. Her name is Rose. She is the flower of her sex."—N. Y. World.

A Costly Church.

The total cost of the Mosque of St. Sophia, at Constantinople, has been variously estimated. Ancient authorities give the sum as equal to one million six hundred thousand dollars of either gold or silver—which is not expressly stated. Gibbon inclines to the latter, and puts the total cost, at the least computation, as over five million dollars. A later writer on the subject (Neale) expresses his belief that gold was intended. According to this supposition, the expenses, if this can be believed possible, would have reached the enormous sum of sixty-five million dollars. It is also stated that the dome of the tabernacle was of pure gold, and surmounted by a cross weighing seventy-five pounds and encrusted with precious stones. All the sacred vessels were of gold. The altar cloths were embroidered with gold and pearls, and the altar itself was composed of a mass of molten gold, into which were thrown precious jewels, and every object which could raise its costliness to the highest imaginable degree.—Golden Days.

He Made the Bishop Sit Down.

Prompted by a feeling that it was his duty, the bishop remonstrated with one of his clergy for attending a local hunt.

"Well, your lordship," replied the offender, "I really do not see that there is any more harm in hunting than in going to a ball."

"I presume," answered the bishop, "that you refer to having seen my name down among those who attended Lady Somerville's ball. But I assure you throughout the whole evening I was not once in the same room as the dancers."

"That, my lord, is exactly how I stand. I was never in the same field with the hounds."

Then the bishop sat down.—Pearson's

Great Potato Eaters.

Contrary to the general belief that Ireland leads the world in its fondness for "praties," statistics show that the people of Germany and Belgium are the greatest potato eaters; the consumption in these countries annually exceeds one thousand pounds per head of population.

Mr. J. P. Blaize, an extensive real estate dealer in Des Moines, Iowa, narrowly escaped one of the severest attacks of pneumonia while in the northern part of Iowa during a recent blizzard, says the Saturday Review. Mr. Blaize had occasion to drive several miles during the storm and was so thoroughly chilled that he was unable to get warm, and inside of an hour after his return he was threatened with a severe case of pneumonia or lung fever. Mr. Blaize sent to the nearest drug store and got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, of which he had often heard, and took a number of large doses. He says the effect was wonderful and in a short time he was breathing quite easily. He kept on taking the medicine and the next day he was able to come to Des Moines. Mr. Blaize regards his cure as simply wonderful. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton.

Notice is hereby given that unless the delinquent taxes of Dalles City are paid within ten days from the date of this notice the names of the delinquents will be published.

By order of the common council of Dalles City, made December 2d, 1893. Witness my hand this 7th day of December, 1893. DAX MARSHY, City Marshal.

Notice.

To All Whom It May Concern:

By order of the common council of Dalles City, made and entered on the 3d day of November, 1893, notice is hereby given that said city council is about to proceed to order and make the improvement of Second street in said city as hereinafter stated, and the cost of such improvement will be levied upon the property adjacent thereto, and said improvement will be made unless within fourteen days from the final publication of this notice, the owners of two-thirds of the property adjacent to said street, about to be improved, shall file their remonstrance against said improvement as by charter provided.

The improvement contemplated and about to be made is as follows, to-wit:

To improve Second street in said city, from Union street to the foot of the brewery grade by filling the same the entire length thereof between said points with crushed rock, so as to bring said street up to the established grade thereof, as heretofore established by ordinance No. 247. Which grade in the middle of the street is supposed to be of the same elevation as the side walks along said street, except where said side walks are not on a uniform grade from square to square, and said street shall be filled in such a manner that when said improvement is completed the center thereof shall be on the established grade and shall slant to each side to an elevation of 8 inches below said established grade.

Said improvement shall be made with rock of such size as shall be furnished to the property owners by the authorities of Dalles City, and shall be hauled and placed on said street at the expense of the respective property owners abutting upon said street, and spread on said street so as to be of even surface and as directed and under the supervision of the committee on streets and public property.

DOUGLAS S. DUFFIE, Recorder of Dalles City.
