THE REED GEYSER.

It Has Broken Out Again and Is Worse Than Ever.

After the east-bound passenger train had left Bonneville last night a mammoth slide from above came down and covered the track for a distance of two hundred feet, and estimated at twenty to forty feet deep. This is the scene of the same trouble that has occurred for the last two years and has been designated by the press as the "Reed geyser."

There is nothing of the geyser about it, however, except that it is intermittent. The push-outs occurred at regular intervals of about a half hour at first, the time gradually increasing between them after the first twelve hours. The slide of last night is as extensive as the one two years ago, and will cause a delay of several days before freight can again be handled by the Union Pacific company.

This slide is the biggest one on record, and is little less than a convulsion of nature. The following diagram, as explained by an engineer, will illustrate its nature. A canyon formed by two high walls converges to a narrow point, through which emerged a tiny creek. The rock sides of this canyon are decomposed and soft, and the rains wash down its slopes considerable quantities of material which choke its mouth.

Mr. Reed had taken up a ranch on both sides of the track here, had built a house, barn and shed on the north side of the railroad, and had a thrifty-looking orchard started, when the slide of two years ago came. This occurred in the night, blocking up one door and reaching half way up the windows. The family escaped through the upper half of the windows. In the morning the outlook was discouraging. The east half of the orchard was gone, the hay stack had disappeared and the house was moving slowly and surely down toward the river.

This point on the railroad line has damaged the Union Pacific company many thousands of dollars, and the worst feature is that it cannot be satisfactorily repaired. It is said that the company will build their line in a curve, following the water's edge, and thus be beyond the reach of further slides.

Don't Hurry to the Midwinter Fair.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 9, 1894.

I wish through your paper to inform the people of The Dalles and vicinity that accounts of the progress of matters at the Midwinter fair grounds in San Francisco papers are misleading, and far from being correct. None of the buildings are entirely finished, very few exhibits are in place, an army of workmen are rushing the work fast as possible, but people who wish to see all the fair better not come here before Feb. 15th, and March 1st will be better. The large buildings are grand and the fair will be a great success and also a big humbug, as only the state and part of the county exhibits will be free. All else will be extra charges and it will cost about $10 to see the entire show, including the Eskimos, black people from Egypt and dirty Arizona Indians. Our Warm Spring Indians are kings compared to these people.

Please publish the foregoing, as many people are coming here who cannot afford to stay here a month and must do so or go home and not see the fair at all. M.

Oregon's Branch Asylum.

The location of the branch insane asylum in Eastern Oregon hangs fire and there is gnashing of teeth in Pendleton, The Dalles, Union and other aspirants for the plum. Salem newspapers and politicians are working in every way to delay the matter and finally down the scheme. The conditions in Oregon are the same as in Washington, and that state would be as greatly benefited by a branch asylum at some point east of the mountains as we are by the Medical Lake institution. The board of physicians have examined the sanitary conditions of various towns in Eastern Oregon and have submitted their report, and we believe the board of commissioners—Governor Penneyer, Treasurer Metchan and Secretary McBride—will in a few days locate the asylum, notwithstanding the hard fight made by Salem, which is unreasonable in its desire for the whole hog, and does not consider the enormous expense of transporting patients, the long distance travelled and the inconvenience to relatives of patients, as at present.—Walla Walla Statesman.

THE CHURCHES.

The Baptist church, Rev. O. D. Taylor pastor, will hold service tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Sunday school follows this service. There will be no evening service. If the weather is cold or inclement the service will be held in the prayer room, as the furnace is not completed.

Gen. 3:22; of the evening sermon, Salvation, what and how obtained? Sunday school immediately after the morning services. Meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor at 6:30 p. m.
