JANUARY JOTTINGS.

Minor Events Which Pertain to City and Country.

I had a girl from Mexico, insect bit her on the toe. Now she's where the illness grew. Name of the insect you may know—Tara-ra-rantula, etc. —Macon News.

A tannery is running in Pendleton.

Mr. H. Ohling of Albany is in the city. There's very little snow on the other side of the Deschutes.

The forecast for today and tomorrow is fair and cooler weather.

One hundred and twenty-three pupils attend the Dufur public schools.

Somebody from The Dalles suggests to the Oregonian for governor the name of Hon. H. W. Corbett.

Saltmarsh & Co. shipped seven carloads of sheep to the Union Packing Co., Portland, Saturday night.

Train orders applying to the road between The Dalles and Portland have to be sent via Spokane, the only wire there is in working order.

The marshal rounded up eleven vagrants last night. To eight of them was decreed the fate of the Wandering Jew and three were held for a bait.

Bunco lightning rod men have been operating in Marion county. Any Oregon man who is foolish enough to invest a cent in lightning rods deserves no sympathy.

A San Francisco dispatch says Forecast Official B. S. Pague will abandon the weather bureau service and take up the practice of law. The state weather bureau will miss Mr. Pague's valuable services, through whose efforts the bureau was created.

Capt. Lewis has received a letter from Louisville, Ky., informing him that that town is making a strong pull for the next annual G. A. R. encampment. It is Mr. Lewis' opinion that the Northwest should make an effort to secure it, either Portland, Seattle, Tacoma or Spokane.

"This," said the attendant, as he led the way through the incurable ward, "is one of the worst cases we have. He was once a newspaper man." "But what is his hallucination?" asked the visitor anxiously. "He thinks he has money," answered the attendant sadly.

Mr. Henry Klindt has the finest garden in the country, and up till the snow storm everything was growing as vigorously as if it was spring. Friday he shipped fifty gunny sacks of cabbage to the Cascade Locks. He believes the snow will not injure his garden.

Over five miles of telegraph poles are down west of this point and no trains are running except passenger. An engine and caboose followed the west bound this morning, containing a crew to put up the poles. They have been in service so long that they were rotten and the weight of snow easily overturned them.

E. M. Harriman has a hen which was in the breeding pen that took second prize at the world's fair, scoring 92½ points. He secured this fowl, with two thoroughbred cockerels, from L. A. King, Sandwich, Ill., breeder of rose comb and brown Leghorns. Mr. Harriman justly believes that he has now the best poultry stock in Oregon.

The Milton Eagle says that Heppner young ladies take poison when their best fellows go to see another girl. Milton girls have got more sense than that, for they realize that such a practice would soon exterminate the female population of the town. When their best fellow goes to see some other girl, they just simply say nothing and chew gum.

As No. 1 was coming down yesterday morning by Cello, a telegraph pole fell striking the height of the locomotive, but doing no other damage than removing it. Ollie Barrett was the engineer. If it had struck the cab a few feet farther behind it would have crashed through it. The accident happened at that exact instant of time in the twenty-four hours it would have done the least damage.

Not a single telegraph wire connected The Dalles with the outside world yesterday, and train orders were sent by telephone, but even telephone wires are demoralized, as the manner of utilizing them is by using the copper wire a part of the way, and then relay to the iron wire, and again back to the copper. No one wire is continuous for any great distance. Line repairers are busily engaged on both sides of us, and telegraphic communication now exists east, and it is expected that by tomorrow the line will again be in working order to Portland.

A very entertaining feature at Dufur is the occasional entertainments given by the public school and managed by Prof. Frazer. They are for the purpose of paying for an organ for the school, which the professor's ambition led him to buy and the exercises given at the hall are always worth the price of admission. Refreshments are always prepared and the singing and recitations are uniformly interesting.

WASCO COUNTIAN

Makes Observations Concerning Various Matters Abroad.

MECHANICSVILLE, Ia., Jan. 10, 1894.

EDITOR CHRONICLE:—I want to tell your readers something about our trip from The Dalles to this place and about the country here.

We had a nice railroad trip. After leaving La Grande we were anticipating a blockade in the mountains by snow, as the air grew thicker and more dense with the "beautiful," but we were agreeably surprised to find that there was no more snow farther east than at La Grande. We found only two faults with the trip. The first was, the points we wished to see most were passed in the night, and the other was, the car was almost unbearably hot all the way to Omaha, where they had a nice porter who had a more regular system of management.

We passed the Ames monument in Wyoming in the night. We wanted to see the place more from Mr. McGuffey having christened the Eskimo baby there than from any particular interest in the place itself.

We didn't have to make any changes in trains from The Dalles to Cedar Rapids, where we left the overland flyer to board a local to Mechanicsville. We traveled through Nebraska at the rate of forty-five miles an hour. The country along the North Platte is as Washington Irving describes it in "Astoria," very level and almost treeless. The Platte river cannot be navigated on account of its shallow water. The country is noted for the great amount of wild hay grown, and its numerous herds of cattle and horses now, where fifty years ago there were as many buffalo roaming the plains of Nebraska. I would not care to live in Nebraska, where not a hill, cliff or crag meets the eye in any direction to break the monotony of the everlasting plains. Give me Oregon, the grand old state of my nativity, with its fertile fields, its forests of fir, pine, hemlock and cedar, its picturesque scenery, its mild climate, and all its benefits, against any country I have ever seen. I love the wild west, and am contented with my "ain country."

One thing, however I will say in favor of Iowa. This part of the country where we now are is like the country between the Klickitat hills and Simcoes, only more extensive, rolling prairies, dotted here and there with groves of hickory, oak and maple, and here and there groves of evergreens, which were planted and are doing well. I believe at some time in the far past this whole country was a forest, but that in some of Nature's wars was destroyed. The evergreens are easily grown and take to the climate kindly, showing that the soil and climate are adapted to their growth.

The farmers here raise everything on the farm except groceries. This is the secret of their success, and it would be well for Wasco county farmers to, as Cap'n Cuttle in Dickens so often remarked, "when found make a note on't." I have often known the farmers of Wasco county to buy their butter, bacon and potatoes for winter use, when they should raise these articles on the farm, and at all times of the year have something to sell, instead of always buying, and always and forever in debt. Here the principal commodity is hogs and corn. I saw yesterday a herd of hogs of about 150 ready for the Chicago market, which averaged 400 lbs. each, and a good many that weighed 800 lbs. Here the farmers grind their corn and cook it by steam, making a mush for hogs. Every day now we see hog wagons passing taking droves to market. Pork is $5.05 per hundred. In a few days there is to be a big hog hauling by one man of thirty-three wagons. The people in this vicinity do not raise much fruit. Wild plums, grapes and cherries grow in abundance, but this year the apple crop was not very large, either in quality or quantity. I wish I had brought some Oregon apples.

This is an old settled country and been farmed a long time, so I think that when Eastern Oregon has been tilled as long, it will be as wealthy, too. Even now it is not to be "sneezed at." If only the farmers would study the best way to make every "lick count," they would succeed better I believe from observations I have made.

I must close for the present.

WASCO COUNTIAN.

A Bad Road.

Mr. W. R. Cantrell of Dufur, who is in town today, says the roads are in worse shape than he has seen them in twenty years. Between 8-Mile and the top of 10-Mile hill the road is especially bad, being now almost impassable. He strongly advocates using crushed rock between these points and says that many of his neighbors are of the same mind. THE CHRONICLE has been a warm supporter of the policy of making this a good road, for the reason that it will increase the trade between the city and the country, benefitting both. It will enable the farmer to realize better prices for his products, and at a time when he can best spare the time for hauling them to market.

The Public School.

Grammar grade certificates were granted Jan. 19th to Virgie Cooper, Hattie Marden, Frances Fouts, Rachel Morgan, John McNeil, grammar, and Anna Hawthorne, United States history. The last two names are followed by the studies they were not proficient enough in, designated back studies.

Blaine's Handy Manual of Useful Information.

There has just been published in Chicago a most valuable book with the above title, compiled by Prof. Wm. H. Blaine, of Lancaster University. Its 500 pages are full of just what its name implies—useful information—and we fully advise all our readers to send for a copy of it. It is a compendium of things worth knowing, things difficult to remember, and tables of reference of great value to everybody, that it has never before been our good fortune to possess in such compact shape. Our wonder is how it can be published at so low a price as is asked for it. It is handsomely bound in flexible cloth covers, and will be sent to any address, postpaid, on receipt of 25 cents in postage stamps, by the publishers,

POUNDED THE DOG TO DEATH.

How a Monkey Made Good Use of a Billy Like a Policeman's Club.

"The most novel fight I ever witnessed," remarked a traveler to a writer for the Cincinnati Enquirer, "was between a bulldog and a monkey, down in Cuba. A friend of mine had a bulldog that had licked every canine on the island, and he was very proud of him. A gentleman from South America said that he had a monkey that could whip the bulldog and the owner of the latter laughed at the idea. After some talk a wager of five hundred dollars was made and the only advantage that the monkey was to have was that he was to be allowed the privilege of using a baton, about the length of a policeman's club, but not so heavy. The fight was in a public place, and in a pit that was surrounded by an iron grating. There was a big crowd out to see the fight. Of course everybody thought the dog would chew up the monkey. After a few minutes, however, the audience was surprised at the sagacity displayed by the monkey. The bulldog would make a rush at the monkey, and the latter would jump aside and allow the bulldog to hit his head against the iron gratings. This was kept up for twenty minutes or more, and then the dog began to get tired. The monkey began to fight. He would let the dog make a rush and then jump on the dog's back and strike him several times with the baton. This was kept up for an hour or more, and finally the dog fell on the floor completely exhausted, and the monkey actually pounded him to death. The monkey would strike the dog several blows and then place his ear to the canine to see if he still breathed. Finally the owner of the dog agreed to give up the fight, but the owner of the monkey told him that he was too late, as the monkey would not quit until he had killed the dog. This was one of the peculiarities of the monkey. They always kill their victims. The owner of the dog said he did not want his dog killed, and insisted on taking the monkey off. While they were talking the monkey belted the dog several times with his baton, placed his ear on the dog, and with a sudden jump leaped on the shoulder of his owner and commenced to use monkey language. The dog was examined and found to be dead. The people applauded the victory of the monkey, and it looked as if the monkey understood it."

The readers of this paper will be much pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. ## THE SWINE AND THE FLOWER.

I shrank to meet a mud-enrusted swine, And then he seemed to grant, in accents rude, "Huh! Be not proud, for in this fat of mine, Behold the source of richness for your food!" I fled, and saw a field that seemed, at first, One giant mass of roses pure and white, With dewy buds 'mid dark green foliage nursed. And, as I lingered o'er this lovely sight, The summer breeze, that cooled that southern scene Whispered, "Behold the source of Cottolene!" —M. E. Willmer.

HORSEPLAY IN ENGLISH SOCIETY

Coarse Jokes and Risky Dancing Being Indulged In by Smart Girls.

Skirt dancing, high play and the perpetration of practical jokes seem to be the leading amusements of country-house parties in England, according to a recent chronicler quoted by the San Francisco Argonaut. He says: "November is preeminently the month for big shoots, and the country houses are full to overflowing at that time of the year. In quiet houses moderate hours are kept, gambling for heavy stakes is at a discount and a certain sobriety prevails from sunrise to sundown. In other houses, however, the fun waxes fast and furious. No dancing is considered 'sport' unless it be of a nature imported from the Gaiety, such as the unforgettable pas de quatre. A few smart girls go so far as to take unto themselves the voluminous skirts of the serpentine frock and try to imitate Miss Lettie Lind's dexterities." After explaining that the serpentine skirts are made of "no less than a hundred yards of the very finest Chinese silk or crepe cut in triangular pieces to give the appearance of an infinity of yards," our authority resumes: "It is regrettable to add that under some roofs pretty heavy gambling is indulged in, and baccarat and nap with high stakes have as many women as men votaries, to say nothing of practical joking of a suspiciously rowdy sort, such as apple-pie bed-making booby-trapping. A certain most distinguished lady amused herself one whole evening by standing in a gallery and throwing pillows on the men's heads as they passed in and out of the smoking-room."
