NO BOUNTY ON SUGAR

The Amendment Abolishing It Passed Today.

OTHER AMENDMENTS VOTED DOWN

Peckham Succeeds Hornblower—Boutelle Again Tries Obstruction Tactics in the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—In the house, the fight to amend the sugar schedule of the Wilson bill was made today. It opened at once under the agreement of Friday, setting apart three hours for the purpose. Some time was spent in arranging the details of the discussion by the various interests. The sugar men finally asked that an hour each be given to the advocates of the bounty provision of the Wilson bill, to the advocates of the retention of the McKinley law bounty, and to the advocates of a duty on sugar. It was objected to this that it gave no opportunity to the advocates of free sugar to be heard. It was finally agreed that the Louisiana members, as the ones most interested, should have an hour and the remainder of the house should take its chances of recognition thereafter. McRae, democrat, of Arkansas, offered an amendment to abolish the sugar bounty, leaving it on the free list. He thought it was no time to be paying bounties when the treasury was bankrupt and borrowing money at 5 per cent.

The bounty would cost the country, said McRae, as it stood, $50,000,000. The bounty last year cost $10,000,000. He contended the bounty was unconstitutional and should be abolished.

Meikeljohn offered an amendment to that of McRae the sugar bounty provision of the McKinley law. That provision of the McKinley law, he said, had been passed to afford an opportunity for American capital. The purpose of that act has been fulfilled. It had resulted in a vast investment of capital, $150,000,000 in Louisiana, $15,000,000 in California, and $10,000,000 in Florida. All they wanted was a chance in the race of life.

Cannon, republican, of Illinois, supported Meikeljohn's amendment. The free-sugar clause of the McKinley law had saved the people of the country, rich and poor alike, annually from $10 to $1.25 per capita.

After the reading of the Hawaiian correspondence, Boutelle demanded recognition. He charged that it was apparent from the three successive messages sent to the house that the government was engaged in fomenting an insurrection in a country with which the United States was at peace. He desired to call up his privileged resolution. Hot words followed. Hatch asked that Boutelle's words be taken down, and Boutelle was ordered to take his seat. He refused to do so, and the sergeant-at-arms was called upon to support the speaker's authority. Great excitement followed. The rule was read, and then the speaker recognized a motion to resume consideration of the tariff bill. On a division, Boutelle made the point of no quorum. The republicans refused to vote. Tellers were appointed, and it looked as though no quorum could be found, and that the tariff debate would be suspended. Finally, however, a bare quorum was got together and the sugar debate continued.

Dockery withdrew his amendment. Harter of Ohio offered a substitute to abolish the bounty and impose a duty of 1 cent a pound.

Gear, the new senator from Iowa, spoke in favor of an amendment to make the reduction of the bounty begin in 1898, instead of 1895.

Bryan of Nebraska spoke for the committee on the bounty.

The first vote was taken on the Meikeljohn amendment to substitute the 2-cent bounty of the McKinley bill for the bounty provision of the Wilson bill; lost, 32 to 153.

The next vote was Price's proposition to substitute the duty contained in the Mills bill of 1.2 cents on a pound below the 13 Dutch standard; 2.20 above the 16 Dutch standard; 2.30 above the 20 Dutch standard; lost, 19 to 140.

The third vote was on Harter's proposition to abolish the bounty and substitute a 1-cent duty; lost without division.

THE BOUNTY ABOLISHED.
McRae's amendment, abolishing the bounty entirely, carried, 135 to 69.

Captain Sweeney, U. S. A., San Diego, Cal., says: "Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy is the first medicine I have ever found that would do me any good." Price 50 cts. Sold by Snipes & Kinersly.

Peixoto's Plan.

New York, Jan. 22.—A correspondent at Pernambuco sends an interview, under date of December 31st, had with a prominent official of the Brazilian cruiser Niteroy relative to Peixoto's plan of action against the rebels. It reads: "We have orders to cruise off Pernambuco until we are joined by all the other vessels purchased in Europe and the United States for the loyal navy. When these are here and all in commission we shall proceed southward, probably to Bahia, and there join the Tiradentes, thence sail direct to Rio Janeiro and make one final and determined attempt to dislodge Meilo and Da Gama's forces from the positions they now occupy there. And we shall win. It is not our purpose to fight the Aquidaban or the Republica north of Rio. If either of them come to look for us, why, we'll simply run away from them. The Aquidaban belongs to Brazil, and it would be a pity to sink so fine a vessel. We prefer to possess ourselves of Rio bay first. When we are undisputed masters of that, then the Aquidaban will soon surrender to the legal authorities."

Buried Coin and a Massacre.

ARLENE, Tex., Jan. 22.—A farm-hand employe on the Hamon farm, twelve miles from this city, has found a buried pot of gold and silver coin, amounting to $3,100. The finding of this treasure vividly recalls to the memory of the oldest settlers the story of a horrible massacre when this was a part of the wild frontier. At the end of the late civil war many bought new homes in the West. Among them was one named Weldon of Alabama, reputed to be of some means, who first settled in 1873 in eastern Texas. About two years later, being dissatisfied, he converted all his belongings into cash—some $9,000—and resumed his journey westward for New Mexico with his family of five. None of them reached their destination. They were overtaken on the trail by the border ruffians and massacred on the banks of a little creek near this city, now Deadman creek, where they had camped for the night. A few days later their mangled bodies were found by cowboys, and buried not far from the spot where the pot of coin was found. The cowboys followed the track of the robbers to Jim Ned creek, where, it is supposed, they separated.

Peckham for Associate Justice.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The president today sent to the senate the nomination of Wheeler H. Peckham of New York to be associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, the place for which Hornblower was rejected. Peckham is president of the State Bar Association and an anti-snapper.

Chairman Wilson Broken Down.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Chairman Wilson, of the ways and means committee, has broken down under the strain of preparing the tariff bill. His friends do not believe he will be able to take a further part in the tariff fight.
