S. B. MED. MFG. CO., Dufur, Oregon.

Gentlemen:

On arriving home last week, I found all well and anxiously awaiting. Our little girl, eight and one-half years old, who had wasted away to 88 pounds, is now well, strong and vigorous, and well fleshed up. S. B. Cough Cure has done its work well. Both of the children like it. Your S. B. Cough Cure has cured and kept away all hoarseness from me. So give it to every one, with greetings for all. Wishing you prosperity, we are Yours, Mr. & Mrs. J. F. Ford.

If you wish to feel fresh and cheerful, and ready for the Spring's work, cleanse your system with the Hemicure and Liver Cure, by taking two or three doses each week.

“When I was a Boy,”

Writes Postmaster J. C. WOODSON, Forest Hill, W. Va., “I had a bronchial trouble of such a persistent and stubborn character, that the doctor pronounced it incurable with ordinary medicines, and advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and one bottle cured me. For the last fifteen years, I have used this preparation with good effect whenever I take and I know of numbers of people who keep it in the house all the time, not considering it safe to be without it.”

“I have been using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for 30 years, with the most satisfactory results, and can cheerfully recommend it as being especially adapted to all pulmonary complaints. I have, for many years, made pulmonary and other medicines a special study, and I have come to the conclusion that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral occupies a position pre-eminently over other remedies of the class.”—Chas. Davenport, Dover, N. J.

ONCE MORE IN BERLIN

Reconciliation Between William and Bismarck.

A SCENE OF GREAT REJOICING

The Iron Chancellor's Triumphant Return to the Capital—He Lunched With the Emperor.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—No conquering general ever had a more triumphant entry into a city than that accorded Prince Bismarck today. Ever since his reconciliation with the emperor, he has been apparently a new man. His demeanor is entirely changed. He has been happy and light-hearted as formerly. He has greatly gained in general health and strength. The family at Friedrichsruh was astir early and an air of joyfulness pervaded the household. The prince took the train for Berlin at 9:30, accompanied by Count Herbert Bismarck and Drs. Schweniger and Chrysanter. The whole neighborhood turned out to cheer the man of blood and iron as he left the castle. Six young girls presented him with a laurel wreath inscribed “Happy Journey,” and preceded his carriage to the station strewn flowers in the way, while the crowds which lined the way gave cheer after cheer for the veteran statesman. He wore the uniform of the Madgeburger yellow cuirassiers, the corps he loved so well, and whose uniform he has worn on so many notable occasions. He seemed greatly pleased with the reception accorded him by his townsmen, and shook hands with many who crowded around his carriage. Finally, when comfortably seated, the train pulled out amid the plaudits and good wishes of the multitude. The train, engine, station, and all the stations along the route were gaily decorated, and everywhere on the route the people turned out en masse to signify their affection for the iron chancellor. In Berlin itself the streets were soon packed with people bent on seeing the prince's return after four long, bitter years of practical exile. The emperor intended to welcome him in person, but at the last moment was obliged to send the king of Saxony at the same hour at another station. The city was lavishly decorated in honor of the occasion, and large stands were erected at desirable points along the route from Lehe station to the royal palace. Later Bismarck lunched in the emperor's private rooms with the emperor and empress only.

Bismarck's train arrived at 1 p. m., and as soon as the crowd saw his well-known face at the window it set up a great shout, which the waiting throngs in the streets took up and bore away with a thunderous roar to the very gates of the palace.

As Bismarck stepped from the car he was met by Prince Henry and conducted to the royal carriage, shaking hands with many of the officers on the way, many of whom, especially the veterans, were visibly affected at seeing him once more in the city which he had done so much to create. As Bismarck emerged from the station he was greeted by a storm of “Hochs,” which spread away till it was repeated at points miles away. It was a reception which no man could fail to be proud of. Then, led by detachment of cuirassiers, the journey to the palace was begun to the accompaniment of German cheers, which fairly shook the houses. From the windows along the route and from the hands of the gathered multitudes showers of flowers were thrown into the carriage as it passed, while the faces of many of the shouting Berliners were wet with tears in evidence of the genuineness of the welcome to the iron chancellor. Bismarck was evidently deeply moved by the spectacle to which he has so long been a stranger.

THE GOSPEL REVISED.

The Country Prospered Under Benjamin.

The following article is reprinted from the Gallipolis, O., Tribune. It is well worth your careful perusal:

CHAPTER III.

1—Now it came to pass in the days when Benjamin, the republicanite, ruled the land, certain wise men who were of Benjamin's council, among whom was McKinley of Ohio (a region wherein dwelt many wise men) made many righteous laws, insomuch that Benjamin's subjects grew rich and prosperity overspread the land.

2—And the laborer received gold and silver for his hire, and greenbacks without stint in those days.

3—And the hum of the spindle and the clang of the hammer could be heard day and night, and no one went and languered for bread.

4—And the cattle multiplied and the shepherd grew his flocks upon a thousand hills.

5—And the eyes of the inhabitants stuck out with fatness.

6—And the nations of the earth were made to pay tribute to the Americanites on the iron, and steel and fine linen which came in ships of the sea.

7—And many of the demmies of the land were displeased because it enriched the nation and the people gave honor to McKinley and Blaine who had done this thing.

8—And Grover, the king, when he was seated on the throne, having great confidence within himself and being filled with envy, spake boldly unto the people, saying,

9—Behold, I will cause a great change to come upon the people, and free trade shall bring us greater prosperity, and the nations of the earth shall not be vexed against us because of the tariff, and gold shall grow as it were on the trees of the forests.

10—And there shall be no more silver shekels among them.

11—And he caused to be discharged all the wise men who had been of Benjamin's council, and the honest men who had sat at the receipt of customs in Gotham and elsewhere, and all the officers who gave out news among the people in those days.

12—And he filled their places with the scallawags of the land, sons of Belial, men who feared not God, neither heeded they the traditions of the fathers.

13—And fear and distrust fell upon the people, and some said: Behold! the giant is possessed of a devil. Others said, He is Belzebub, the prince of devils.

14—But he heeded them not and went and abode for a time at the Buzzard bay.

15—And a dearth overspread the land and no man had confidence in the king's decree.

16—And the fires of the smelting furnaces refused to burn, and the workers in iron and steel and every kind of handiwork ceased to show their cunning.

17—And the shepherd threw down his crook and the wolves devoured the flock; the soup houses were filled and the children of the laborer cried for bread.

18—And many of the sufferers who had been of the king's following made open confession and said: Would to God I had not done this thing!

19—And the Lord spake and said: Because ye have been discontented with my servant Benjamin and overthrew him, and set up in his stead Grover, the wicked giant, I will suffer it to be thus for the space of three years and three months longer.

20—Then forthwith if ye repent and cry mightily unto the Lord, I will again restore the righteous to power.

21—And McKinley whom I love shall be set upon the king's seat and shall restore prosperity to all the people.

22—And the dragon of democracy shall be bound a thousand years. Selah.

23—How be it if ye repent not nor cease your democratic ways, nor teach your sons the ways of republicanism, then will I have no compassion on you and I will set upon you the giant and his followers, the brigadiers, the Tammanyites, the Greshamites, the Hokeites,

24—And the loyal people of the nation were grieved, and the old veterans who had been deprived of their pittance, shook their heads and said,

25—Behold, are we not well stricken in years, and when the time of prosperity shall come again many of us will be gathered to our fathers, and others who live long in the land will be smitten by Hoke, the Giant's henchman, and our wives and children will go down in sorrow to their graves.

26—And all the people bowed their heads and spoke one to another.

27—And the giant, Grover, ruled with a rod of iron, neither cared he that the children cried for bread.
