FRIDAY, FEB. 2, 1894

Partisan colors are prismatic in the shadow of personal interests.

The biggest crowd ever gathered together on the Pacific coast is on record for the opening day of the mid-winter fair. During the fourteen hours the gates were open 72,248 people passed through the turnstiles. Of these about 60,000 paid 50 cents each, making the gate receipts for the day $30,000.

The strong opposition that was shown in the house to the sugar duties makes it plain that the Wilson bill will be a bill for deficit only. It is not probable that even if the bill passes the senate it will become a law. The president is known to be bitterly opposed to the income-tax feature, and he will doubtless veto the bill. If he does so there is but one course left for the democrats, and that is to reconstruct the bill and raise duties again, to provide for meeting the expenses of the government.

The Wilson bill passed the house yesterday and the close of the long debate was marked by an oratorical battle which has seldom been exceeded in brilliancy and fervor. Though it was not a matter of surprise, nearly all of the democrats who had stubbornly fought points in the bill, voted for it as a whole without hesitation, Geary of California being a notable exception. The fight in the house will seem tame compared to what it will be in the senate. It is the last stronghold of the protectionists and the only thing that stands between the free trader and victory (in a measure). It will do the cause of protection no harm, however, if the Wilson bill passes the senate, the republicans meantime fighting it with all decorous vigor. The bill is a hermaphrodite measure and commands no respect with either party. Dissatisfaction over it will increase as the months advance. The Wilson bill will be short-lived, even if it passes the senate and is not vetoed.

Math Becker, writing to the Oregonian from Sunnyside, Or., says: The relation of free trade to commercial crises is one about which there should be no dispute. It is an economic fact or series of facts, open to abundant historical proof, and part of the experience of many persons now living that repeal of protection to farmers in England in 1846 was the sole cause of the English crisis in 1847. Free trade, in the degree that it existed in 1816 in the United States, produced the crisis of 1817-20, costing the country more in losses and destruction of industries than the war of 1812 to 1815 cost it. Indeed the period of the war and its preceding period of interrupted foreign trade was one of growth compared with which the subsequent period of peace was one of stagnation and decline. The period of free trade from 1847 to 1861 cost the country in the destruction of its industries far more than the war with Mexico. Although the influx of gold from California began in 1849-50, and was at its height in 1851 to 1852, yet as early as the fall of 1853 general dearth of employment prevailed among artisans, manufacturing establishments of many kinds were closing, and in the spring of 1854 hard times came, and came to stay until 1861, when the war began. The writer of this remembers the times very well between 1847 and 1861, when rye was worth from 20 to 30 cents per bushel; wheat from 30 to 40 cents per bushel; pork 2 cents per pound alive. A laboring man got 50 cents a day, and boarded himself, and he was in luck when he got work at all. This was in the city. A good man got 37 1/2 cents a day working on a farm, clearing land and splitting rails, and got his dinner. I have seen stout young men, between 20 and 24 years of age, get $5 per month for five months in summer. Those were democratic free trade times. I have seen a farmer borrow money, and he had to pay $20 bonus, besides 12 per cent, and it was not a banker, but a brother farmer he borrowed from. This was in the Eastern states.

EASILY EXPLAINED. ist the Kind of Dog for That Particular Business.

"Speaking of the dog show," said the man in the slate-colored trousers to a New York Tribune reporter, "reminds me of an astonishing proof of canine intelligence which came under my observation in the year 1879. I was at that time residing in Binghamton, Broome county, N. Y., and had a considerable amount of live stock, some poultry and a superb setter dog. I tell you, he was a fine animal. I never see a dog with such gentle ways. Gentlemen, you could have pulled enough hair out of that dog to stuff a sofa pillow and he wouldn't 'a' bit a bald-headed baby. One day he was running around the yard and somehow playfully snapped the head off a hen. Gentlemen, I never knowed how he did it, but somehow or other the dog found out that she was a settin' hen, and blamed if the critter didn't go and set on them eggs himself till he hatched out nine chickens."

There was a significant silence as the man in the slate-colored trousers finished and toyed suggestively with his glass.

"How do you explain such a remarkable occurrence?" at length inquired the man on the end.

"Setter dog, gentlemen," and then he man in the slate-colored trousers rolled away.

Privacy of European Homes.
 The Spaniard, however courteous he may be, never invites a guest to dinner. In Italy, too, the privacy of the family is seldom invaded at the dinner hour; the Frenchman is delighted to entertain, but prefers to do it at his club, while the Englishman is never so genial as when seated at his own table with company surrounding him.

THE DALLES
 Wasco County, Oregon,
 The Gate City of the Inland Empire is situated at the head of navigation on the Middle Columbia, and is a thriving, prosperous city.

ITS TERRITORY.
 It is the supply city for an extensive and rich agricultural and grazing country, its trade reaching as far south as Summer Lake, a distance of over two hundred miles.

The Largest Wool Market.
 The rich grazing country along the eastern slope of the Cascades furnishes pasture for thousands of sheep, the wool from which finds market here.

The Dalles is the largest original wool shipping point in America, about 5,000,000 pounds being shipped last year.

ITS PRODUCTS.
 The salmon fisheries are the finest on the Columbia, yielding this year a revenue of thousands of dollars, which will be more than doubled in the near future.

The products of the beautiful Klickitat valley find market here, and the country south and east has this year filled the warehouses, and all available storage places overflowing with their products.

ITS WEALTH.
 It is the richest city of its size on the coast and its money is scattered over and is being used to develop more farming country than is tributary to any other city in Eastern Oregon.

Its situation is unsurpassed. Its climate delightful. Its possibilities incalculable. Its resources unlimited. And on these corner stones she stands!
