CLUMSY DANCERS.

The Kaiser Forced to Bar Them at Imperial Entertainments.

Clumsiness in dancing has for a long time been regarded as a most unpardonable sin at the various royal and highly-polished and parquetted floors of the palaces and the spurs which form part and parcel of every full-dress uniform render waltzing a matter of some danger. At Berlin accimost obstinate men imaginable, who will not listen to reason." It is fair to will not listen to reason." It is fair to say that once in a hundred times or so imperial courts of Europe, where the Emperor William summoned the general commanding the various troops stationed in and around Barlin and around Rarlin and Rar who were not able to dance properly to table before being allowed to dance at the Viennese court, a young secretary of the Roumanian legation once fell so unfortunately while dancing with one of the archduchesses that he came down in a sitting position on her face, causing her Hapsburg nose to bleed. It is scarcely necessary to add that he left Vienna the next day, and, a week later, obtained his transfer to another post. The duke of Aosta, nephew of King Humbert of Italy, broke his ankle last winter while broke his ankle last winter while help him, whereby had become covered with blood, but when the man divided he had come away and the Belgian minister at Washington, and, a few weeks before the tragedy at Meyerling, the now widowed Crown Princess Stephanie had a nasty fall, due to the gaucherie of a cavalry officer with whom she was waltzing. Emperor Francis Joseph was much anmoyed, and so, too, was the late Crown Prince Rudolph, who spoke his mind in no measured terms to the culprit. Far more polite was Emperor Napoleon III., when at a Tuileries ball, a middle-aged officer and his fair partner came to grief. As the mortified in the drawer before him ready for lancer scrambled to his feet, the emperor kindly extended a hand to help him and, turning to the lady, remarked: "Madam, this is the second time that I have seen the colonel fall; the first time it was on the battle field of Ma-

TROUBLESOME JURORS.

Some Remarkable Cases of Obstinate Talesmen.

One Man May Have the Other Eleven at His Mercy-Flattery Sometimes Used as a Means of Conviction.

Jurymen are sometimes quite unconscious of their own determination of spirit. One of them, says the London Illustrated News, Cronke James tells us, once explained to the Recorder, who had noticed his peculiarity, that his behavior was entirely misunderstood. "No man, sir, is more open eral commanding the various troops a case in which, through the opposi-stationed in and around Berlin and instructed him to direct those officers who were otherwise all for a verdict of guilty, could come to no agreement; abstain from attempting to do so at but on the prisoner being tried again imperial entertainments. the resolution of one man, oc-curred before Chief Justice Dyer. He presided at a murder trial in which everything went against the prisoner, said nothing about it, because he was known to have had a quarrel with the deceased, and feared that he might get trouble. The hay fork with which the man had been murdered had the prisoner's name on it. In other respects his guilt appeared to be clearly established, and the chief justice was convinced of it. When this is the case a judge likes to get a conviction. I have sat beside one myself, who on the second day brought his black cap with him, neatly folded, and placed it use, and very much annoyed he seemed to be when the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty." This was Chief Jus-tice Dyer's case, and when, notwithstanding their being locked up all night without fire and candle, his could come to no decijury sion, and eventually came to the wrong one, he put some searching The international pickpocket art is, questions to the high sheriff. The cause of the acquittal, said that official, was undoubtedly the foreman, a this foreman, for an explanation of the matter I will have." The foreman came, and after extracting from his at once that the prisoner had been rightly acquitted, "for," said he, "it was I myself who killed the man." It had been no murder, for the other had attacked him with the hayfork, and (as he showed) severely injured him; to give the man a fatal wound. He had no fears as to his being found guilty of the murder, but, the assizes being just over, his farm and affairs would have been ruined by a confession, through lying so long in jail, so he suffered matters to take their course. He was horrified to find one of his own servants accused of the matter, supported his wife and children while in prison, managed to be placed on the jury and elected fore-man, and resolutely held out in favor of the prisoner's innocence. He added that if he had failed in this he would certainly have confessed to his own share in the business, and the judge believed him. Every year for fifteen years his lordship made inquiries as to the foreman's existence, and at last, the compact texture of the wood makes the method expensive. The cellulose of pent moss, however, is now reported to have given more favorable results. The cellulose is converted into sugar by boiling the turf four or five hours in dilute sulphuric acid, when the expressed liquor is ferment-ed with yeast and afterward distilled. The dry turf is stated to yield rather more than half as much absolute alcohol as an equal weight of potatoes containing 20 per cent. of starch.

A French physician, who has found that the majority of deaths upon the battlefield arise from the bleeding to death of the wounded while waiting for the surgeon, proposes that each soldier in the French army shall be taught where the arteries of his body are and how to arrest hemorrhages from them. In doing this he has found a use for that most useless of arts tattooing; a small figure of some kind being tattooed over each artery, so that the soldier can at once see where to apply the limature.
