HURRYING UP JURIES.

Why Verdicts in District Courts Are Rendered Without Delay.

Give a jury of six or twelve restful men a comfortable, well lighted and cool room, plenty of tobacco and ice water, and there is nothing by which the judge or the counsel on either side can grudge the time of deliberation. Under such circumstances, says the Newark Sunday Call, juries have been known to remain out twelve hours on a case involving one dollar and forty-nine cents, and then come in with a disagreement. There is such a thing, however, as forcing a speedy verdict by making the retiring room uncomfortable. Freezing the jury is said to have been practiced with success in Minnesota, where the counsel for the defense "saw" the janitor, and it is just possible that windows have been nailed down to stow a jury into hasty action in warmer climates.

No such precaution is necessary in the new quarters of the district courts in this city. The jury-room is a narrow apartment, situated directly over the boiler room, with one window opening upon a narrow and breathless alley, flanked by the dead wall of the next building. It has not been insinuated that any lawyer has encouraged the engineer to put on extra steam when a jury was deliberating over a case, but it is said that of late no jury has taken more than five minutes to fry the fat out of any case which has required discussion in this room.

It is used by both courts, and is the only apartment accessible. Of course, the doors must be shut when the jury is deliberating, and then the window does not admit the smallest of the zephyrs which may by accident have found a playground in the alleyway.

It is said that one lawyer announced his intention of appealing a case because the jury found a verdict four minutes after the doors were closed. One of the jurors says, however, that there was a heated discussion over the case during the short time the jury was out.

SEATS AT THE TABLE.

How a Guest Evened Up Things with His Landlord.

A short time ago, between Zanesville and Columbus, the train stopped at a small village.

On the guard crying out, "Fifteen minutes for dinner," the passengers, of whom there happened to be a large number, rushed into the dining apartment and took their seats at the table, one of them depositing his carpet bag on the chair next to him.

At the usual time the landlord, passing around to make his collection, called upon the aforesaid passenger for his payment for dinner.

"How much?" asked the passenger. "Eighty cents," replied the landlord. "Eighty cents for a dinner? Why, that is extortionate."

"No, sir, it is not extortionate. Ain't that your carpet bag?"

"Yes, sir, that is my carpet bag."

"Well, that carpet bag occupies a seat and of course I must charge for it."

"Oh, is that the case? Well, here is your eighty cents."

Turning to the carpet bag, the passenger remarked:

"Well, Mr. Carpet Bag, as you have not had much to eat, suppose we take something," at the same time opening his mouth and turning therein half a ham, a roast chicken, a plate of biscuits and sundry other articles, amid the roar of laughter of the other passengers.

The prevailing opinion among the passengers was that the carpet bag had gained a glorious victory.

Language of the Dog's Tail.

All dogs wag their tails when pleased, and the movement is generally understood by their human associates as an intimation that they are very happy. The chief delight of wild dogs, as with modern hounds and sporting dogs, is in the chase and its accompanying excitement and consequences. When the presence of game is first detected is invariably the time when tails are wagged for the common good. The wagging is almost an invariable accompaniment of this form of pleasure, which is one of the chiefest among the agreeable emotions when in a wild state. Owing to some insensibility of the nervous mechanism the association of pleasure and wagging has become so inseparable that the movement of the tail follows the emotion, whatever may call it forth.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Mackerel Fisheries in Kerry.

A Kerry correspondent of United Ireland writes: Dingle, on the extreme western coast of Kerry, is now the center of very active operations in the mackerel fishery industry. Large takes of mackerel have been taken off the coast, and the recent trade which has sprung up in the curing of mackerel during the autumn season for the American market has brought employment and money to the doors of the the Kerry peasant and shopkeeper. Dingle is, in fact, a hive of industry at the present moment, owing to the curing and packing of mackerel for the American market. Every man, woman and child is employed, and thousands of cases are dispatched weekly to Liverpool and Glasgow for conveyance to American ports. The mackerel are found off the coast in great shoals, and a fleet of boats is engaged in capturing them, landing the fish in Dingle, where they are cured and prepared.
