News is received in this city today that the present storm is unexampled in its violence in the Sound country. At Tacoma the snow was driven before a 60-mile-an-hour tornado for four hours this morning. The storm is general all over Oregon, Washington and Idaho. The weather bureau predicts a continuance for the succeeding twenty-four hours.

Mr. F. H. Rowe, the saw mill man, now living in The Dalles, has a little 5-year-old boy who is a perfect vision of loveliness. He is as pretty as a morning in May. The rare smile which always wreaths his face parts a pair of ruby lips, disclosing a set of milk white teeth, and the delicate tint of his cheeks rivals the rose. His twinkling black eyes and long dark curls his beauty is feminine in its completeness, and he is naturally the idol of his parents.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Ed Henderson Acquitted—Day Brothers—Trial Today of J. Hull.

The jury in the case of the State vs. Ed Henderson brought in a verdict of acquittal Saturday night. This case was marked by great bitterness on the part of opposing counsel—A. S. Bennett and W. H. Wilson. The battle was over the admittance of certain testimony. Mr. Bennett endeavored by a number of reputable witnesses to establish a reputation for peace and quietude of defendant, and Mr. Wilson as diligently tried to establish the non-existence of these characteristics and others detrimental to the interests of Henderson. Substantially the same questions were put time and again by Mr. Wilson, which were objected to by Mr. Bennett and sustained by Judge Bradshaw. The patience of defendant's counsel finally became exhausted, and at about the same time Mr. Wilson's sweetness of temper gave out. It resulted in a battle royal between the two attorneys, the prosecuting attorney twitting counsel about unfair methods, and Mr. Bennett retaliating by charging him with ignorance of the rules of evidence and abusing his own rights. The case was submitted to the jury without argument. The main witness for the state was Mr. J. H. Jackson, testifying that he was not sure that Henderson intended to shoot at him.

This morning Day Brothers, through their attorney, Judge Stott, endeavored to secure a new trial in the damage case of Smith vs. J. G. and I. N. Day; the appeal was not granted.

The case of State vs. J. Hull was then taken up. Hull murdered Ben Cummings at the Cascades New Years morning. The following jury was empaneled: G. A. Liebe, W. N. Wiley, Geo. Noble, M. A. Miller, C. L. Schmidt, Geo. Patterson, Clark McCowen, D. F. Osborn, Geo. Nolia, Peter Kopke, R. B. Driver, D. A. Stargis. E. B. Dufur was appointed attorney for defendant. Hull was dressed in a faded check suit of light material and appeared very nervous. The following witnesses came up from the Cascades and are in attendance at the trial: W. Lewis, A. J. Knightly, Chas. Stewart, Mrs. John Atwell, Mrs. Stout, Dr. C. F. Candiana and Thomas Lewis. Early in the afternoon Attorney Dufur was addressing the jury with a resume of the case, previous to the hearing of the testimony. The grand jury has indicted Hull for murder in the second degree.

"Sum Chuck's" Newsy Cascade Letter.

(Special Correspondence.) CASCADE LOCKS, Feb. 17th, 1894.

We had a fire here night before last, that threatened for awhile to be quite a serious matter. The small frame building on the north side of the canal, containing the engine and boilers for the air compressor was discovered in a blaze, at about 1 o'clock in the morning. Fortunately the rain was pouring down in a torrent, that materially assisted the small force on hand in subduing the flames. The building was entirely destroyed, but the dynamo house, next adjoining it was saved, while the large stone shed with its overhead "traveller" engine, scarcely ten feet distant was barely scorched. Very little damage was done, but it was a narrow escape.

The first result of the damage suit in your city has been the discharge of every boy under 21 years of age, employed on the works. This seems a little hard on the young apprentices and others who have their way to make in the world. Some of the boys had been employed at the solicitation of parents, who wished them kept off the streets, yet all go alike, for hard as it seems on them, it is harder on the company to be held responsible for accidents resulting from boyish heedlessness.

It is hardly presumable that even the most sentimental jury would find in favor of a grown man who should be hurt while climbing up to an engine on a high trestle, by grasping the rails in front of its moving wheels, out of sight of the engineer. So of course this seemingly special liability for boys has been met by special measures for protection, and the boys must go.

One of the young machinist apprentices, Cliff Gortor, has been taken back, at the written request of his parents, they waving all claims for damages by accident.

The "beautiful snow" still continues, its daily visitations, but not in sufficient quantity, of late, to interfere with work. The force of men has been materially increased and every department is humming.

The Knights of Pythias will have an entertainment here on Monday evening next.

"SUM CHUCK."

MURDER MOST FOUL.

Jack Hamlet Deliberately Kills Ben Gammie at Mitchell.

James Harrison Succumbs to Cancer—J. V. O'Leary's Suggestions Valuable—Weather Notes, Etc.

MITCHELL, Or., Feb. 18.—[Special correspondence of THE CHRONICLE.]—February the 14th was a day that by many will be remembered as one of horror. At a vacant house a mile and a half below Mr. Woolver's the young people had gathered to celebrate St. Valentine's day. But their merry-making was soon turned to grief and fear by Jack Hamlet deliberately shooting Ben Gammie once in the back and once in the back of the head, killing him instantly. There had been a slight dispute between the men early in the evening, but none thought it of the slightest consequence. During the evening Hamlet had threatened and seemed intent on killing some one, and without the least warning committed the fatal deed.

Martin Gray has just returned from the death bed and funeral of James Harrison. It will be remembered Mr. Harrison was at Dufur at two different times during the last two years to be treated for cancer by Dr. Vanderpool, without success. After months of such suffering as only a disease of that kind could create, he is at last free. Happy must have been the release. Do we mourn because he has gone? No, we only grieve that one so true should have suffered so. A true husband and a kind, just father is gone, and a loving wife and children are left to bear the cruel pangs of a hurt that naught but time can heal. Oh, angels of peace, rest your hands gently on the heads of those that are left—the wife and orphans.

Thanks to J. V. O'Leary for his practical and timely suggestions in the interest of the wool growers, and may success attend a convention if sheep men find it to their interest to get together and advise with one another. Please let me suggest a method that might be more feasible than a grand convention, since there are so many that live at such a great distance from Antelope or The Dalles that they could not attend, although they might be desirous to do so. I should suggest that each district, or two or three the most conveniently situated, convene and send instructed delegates to a head convention at some convenient point.

February the 14th zero stood 44 above at 5 o'clock in the evening. Today is several degrees cooler and threatens snow.

Mr. Misner returned a few days since from Portland but little word for his trip.

There is but little snow at present. E. V. E.
