GOETHE AND REVOLUTIONS.

A Well-Known and Very Characteristic Anecdote of the Great Author.

Goethe's wide grasp of the physical sciences of the day and his intense interest in scientific progress were kept up to the last. The weight of four-score years had not the effect of narrowing his outlook. There is a well-known and very characteristic anecdote of him in the evening of his life which may be recalled as illustrating in a few lines what he was and what he was not, says Temple Bar.

It was the 1st of August, 1830. The news of the French revolution had reached Weimar that morning and all was in commotion. On entering Goethe's room his secretary, M. Soret, was accosted with the exclamation: "Now, what do you think of this great event?" "A frightful story," answered Soret, "but with such a ministry what was to be expected but the expulsion of the royal family?" "We do not appear to understand each other," said Goethe, ever indifferent to politics, even when boiling up into revolution; "I am speaking of the contest so important for science between Cuvier and Geoffroy St. Hilaire, which has come to an open rupture in the academy."

Goethe, it must be remembered, considered the question at issue as a matter of the greatest importance to the future of science. He was greatly rejoiced over the fact that the youthful physicist, St. Hilaire, had shown himself so powerful an ally of his own fixed idea of the synthetic manner of looking at nature. It was a fine burst of enthusiasm of Goethe's, when, during this same interview with his secretary, he exclaimed:

"What is all intercourse with nature, if we merely occupy ourselves with individual material parts, and do not feel the breath of the spirit which prescribes to every part its direction, and orders or sanctions every deviation by means of an inherent law! I have exerted myself in this great question for fifty years. At first I was alone, then I found support, and now at last, to my great joy, I am surpassed by congenial minds."

A Bat That Hibernated Six Years.

A queer story comes with first-class recommendation all the way from England. Thirty-three years ago, in 1860, a member of the Chaplin family died at Blankney, Lincolnshire, and was laid in the family tomb. This particular Chaplin was a naturalist, and, among his other pets, had a large gray bat. That bat was permitted to enter the tomb and was sealed up alive along with the corpse of his dead master. In 1893 the vault was opened and to the surprise of all the bat was alive and fat. On four different occasions since the Chaplins have looked after the welfare of their dead relative's pet, and each time it has been reported that the bat was still in the land of the living, although occupying quarters with the dead. He was last seen in 1892.

O. W. O. Hardman, Sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For ease by Blakeley & Houghton, druggists.

REED AND HIS TEACHER.

Young Tom's Quickness at Repartee Saved Him from the Birch.

Ex-Speaker Reed's boyhood was not particularly eventful, says the Hartford Post. He was tall and slender and had not the chubby face of his late years of prosperity and power. He was independent in his ways and decidedly outspoken, a trait he inherited from his mother. I heard a curious story about a juvenile birching that fell to Tom's share long ago; and if the child be father to the man, surely there is a clear insight into the future characteristics of Mr. Reed in the speech he made to the master on this un auspicious occasion.

"If anyone knows of any reason why these apples should not touch the lips of Tom Reed, let him speak now or forever after hold his peace," said the young rascal one day, right under the master's nose. And he gave a great bite at the first red-cheeked apple in his hand.

Quick as a flash, out came the birch, and, with equal skill at repartee, the pedagogue said:

"If anyone knows any reason why this rod should not warm the jacket of Tom Reed, let him speak now, or forever after hold his peace."

"I do!" said Tom.

"Name it!" replied the master.

"Incompatibility!"

He did not get that whipping.
