MARS' MONTH.

A Record of Lesser Events for the Thirty-one Days.

Hail, gentle spring! Softly now the hills respire Stars and sun serenely shine, While the poet strings his lyre, And the liar strings his line. -Col. Sinnott.

The river is a foot deep over the dock and rising.

The railroad is again in shape between here and Portland and soon through trains will arrive from the east.

Our window is adorned with a large bouquet of wild flowers, of numerous varieties, which our young friends have gathered from the hills adjoining the city.

The Irish people have many friends and well-wishers, judging from the green badges, numerous worn today by citizens of American descent, as well as the plethoric German and even their ancient enemy, the Briton.

Mr. Jasper Gulliford of Crook county sold his wool today to the Joslyn Bros. in this city, for 7 cents per pound. How is this for the Wilson bill and protection? It's free wool with a vengeance.

Mr. Hal French has a very realistic advertisement of the Lion insurance company in his show window. The face of a lion is shown behind iron bars in a frame, giving the dreadful appearance of his majesty, the king of beasts, as often seen in the menagerie.

How much weight is there in a name? That depends on its length, if we are to take the scales for it, shown in Snipes & Kinersly's window. By writing your name on one of two pieces of paper of equal weight, the delicately attuned scales will register the weight of the name, the paper bearing the name descending. But this is a little too fine for ordinary uses.

A very handsome design was carried in the populist "procession" today. Anyone is at liberty to interpret it as best he can. All we can endeavor to do is to describe it, as, even after an explanation, we failed to grasp its meaning. A gold piece is represented at the top and underneath a fish carrying in its mouth a piece of silver. Under the fish is represented a greenback, and over the whole the words "Not to Be Demonstized." What connection the fish has with the rebus is beyond us, but we are somewhat rusty on our "Arabian Nights."

The Populists.

There are not many of them in Wasco county, judging from the parade after dinner and the convention later at the court house. The first event consisted of our genial friend, Seth Morgan, and about a dozen followers tramping along Main street with a picturesque cardboard meaning perhaps something, no one knows what, the leader whistling "Yankee Doodle." At the convention there were a score or thirty in attendance. The meeting was quiet and orderly, presided over by Al. Reese. The Omaha platform was read in a mild voice by the secretary, difficult to hear at a distance of twenty feet. Some one in the audience then read the Oregon City platform in better voice, and then Mr. Curran, an imported populist from Portland, read a set of resolutions framed by himself and others. These had a very calamitous tone, and were very bitter against the old parties, calculated to make a poor devil of a republican or democrat feel that he had been very important in a diabolical way by wrenching money from the populists and throwing it to the birds. Mr. Curran then made a speech, at the invitation of the chair. His howl was for more money and he read excerpts from Hume, more or less foreign to the case. Other speakers occupied the attention of the house, and were feebly cheered.

Don't Know What They Want.

The populist platform certainly will be a grievous disappointment to the populists of the state. It must be proof to them how little they know what they want. They are a thoroughly discontented and querulous sort of people, satisfied with nothing that exists, talking large and wide about the evils and abuses of society and government; but when they come to make a statement of what they think is really the matter, what they actually want, how they would reform political society and regenerate the state, their performance is amusingly barren, jejune, insane. The prophecy was thunder; the result is small beer.—Oregonian.

Last of Earth.

On Sunday last Mr. and Mrs. E. B. McFarland, of Holiday's addition, had the misfortune to lose one of their little girls by death. Their numerous friends throughout the state offer their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved parents in their sad affliction. On Tuesday last the little one's body was taken to The Dalles for interment, the former home of Mr. McFarland. Although the "Little White Hearse" has gone a "glimmering by," carrying the tiny soul to its home on high, the bright smile of the little one is dearly remembered by those who knew her, and papa and mamma well know that there has been added one more bright jewel to the crown eternal whose light will welcome them on o'er life's turbulent seas.—Portland Chronicle.

ARMORY HALL.

A Roomy Building Soon to Be Fitted Up by J. S. Fish.

An opera house is something The Dalles has sadly needed ever since the fire, and it is a pleasure to state that the want is to be supplied.

Mr. Jud. Fish has leased the Baldwin property for two years, a roomy store building, across the street west from the Umatilla house, and proposes to fit it up in thorough style for the use of the Third regiment, and to be thereafter styled Armory hall. Not only is it suited to theatrical performances, but by reason of a portable stage, easily removed, it will make a fine dancing hall, or for entertainments of any public nature whatever. This hall is 50x100 feet and by means of folding doors on each side, annexes can be used which will seat 100 more. The front of the building is partitioned squarely off for other purposes. A hallway is to occupy the center space, on the left an officers' room, and on the right a ladies' and gents' room equal in size. There will be nothing to obstruct the vision in the main hall—no pillars or posts or stationary object of any kind. The roof will be firmly held by a series of trusses, so as to sustain its own weight. The floor will be laid upon a new woodwork foundation to be built underneath, and will furnish the spring which gives zest to a waltz, without the danger attendant upon floors in brick buildings that are imperfectly constructed.

The Armory hall, when completed, will furnish an incentive to our home talent to continue their occasional plays which have always delighted our people. We have talent of a high order, but they have yielded to the discouragement of an inadequate opera house, since the Vogt block was desolated by fire.

Mr. Baker's Lecture.

The Eugene Guard says the lecture delivered at Villard hall last evening by Hon. Lydell Baker, of Portland, was well attended. His subject was "Caesar and the Rise of Roman Imperialism," and his discourse especially interesting to the students of history. His theme was "The eternal law of compensation made apparent in the history of nations." He carefully reviewed the history of Rome from the time of the patrician fathers to the supremacy of Caesar.

The vivid statements of cause and effect in the several changes of the social and political scale suggested lessons applicable to some existing conditions in our American republic today. Mr. Baker has an impressive delivery and those who missed the lecture last evening lost a rare treat. We regret that space does not allow us to give a comprehensive synopsis.

Mr. Baker will deliver the same lecture in this city on Tuesday evening at the court house. Mr. Thompson drew a large audience, and as Mr. Baker's subject is an interesting one, our people will miss a good thing if they fail to hear him.

For County Treasurer.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for re-election as county treasurer, subject to the action of the republican county convention.

WILLIAM MICHELL,

Notice.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of county clerk, subject to the decision of the republican county convention.

I. I. BURGET.

Pies "Like Your Mother Used to Make."

It is not in the power of human genius to make a pie "like your mother used to make." Take all the cooks in Queen Victoria's kitchen, and give them the finest flour, and the freshest eggs, and the richest butter and milk, and rare fruits ripened in the sunshine, and spices from Arabia, and every delicious ingredient of a royal pie, then bribe them with a coronet apiece and a pension of £2000 a year, and after all they will not be able to make "pies like your mother used to make." The feat is physiologically and psychologically impossible, because nobody but your own mother ever can or ever could give to the elements of a pie that ethereal flavor and that spiritual potency which makes it, for you at least, a memory of home forever. Unless all their ingredients are mixed with her love, touched by her own hands and seasoned with her own spirit, there are no "pies like your mother used to make."—Boston Transcript.

All persons not worshipping elsewhere are cordially invited.

Assassination by Bomb.

Vaillant, who hurled a bomb in the chamber of deputies in Paris recently, paid only thirteen cents for the canister that contained the explosive, says the New York World. There are other deadly missiles which the anarchists have learned to make, and the ordinary cane or umbrella will conceal them. The plan is to take the cane or umbrella into the theater, store or stock exchange and lay it upon the floor or counter. The setting of it up in its natural position will cause it to explode with fatal result.

The head of the cane holds two glass vessels, oblong in shape, and each filled with an explosive liquid harmless in itself so long as it is kept away from the others. The cane is carried by being held horizontally. But when lifted up and placed against the wall the fluid in the upper bottle runs into the lower and the explosion takes place.

MASTER ON BOARD.

A Russian Admiral Who Was Running His Own Ship.

If all the stories of kings and emperors are to be believed, the inference must be that they respect no one so much as the man who has the courage of his own opinions. Admiral Greig joined the Russian navy when a boy, and rose to the command of the Black Sea fleet, which the czar reviewed from time to time.

One fine day his majesty expressed a wish to enjoy a cruise in the flagship. The admiral accordingly set sail, and all went well until a sudden tempest broke, to the great discomfort of the imperial party.

The emperor entreated the admiral to put back, but the wind was contrary and the admiral could attempt nothing of the sort. The emperor then succumbed utterly to seasickness, and imperatorily ordered a return.

"I acknowledge that his majesty is ruler of all the Russias," said the admiral, "but I am master on board. You may tell his majesty that his commands cannot be obeyed."

The ship was actually driven within sight of the Asiatic coast, but only when the storm abated could his autocratic majesty's orders be obeyed.

On finding himself safe on land, the czar begged the admiral's pardon for his impatience, and presented him with the usual gold snuff-box, set with diamonds and suitably inscribed.

The Wives of Two Noted Painters.

Titian's greatest misery was his wife, who was a domineering, dictatorial woman who insisted that he should render an account to her of every item of his expenditures. The wretched man, who was very wealthy, was often put to the worst straits to buy a glass of wine without letting his wife know anything about the transaction. Berghem, the Dutch painter, had a scolding wife. He was lazy, and she was thrifty and insisted that he should keep at work. His studio was over the kitchen, and from time to time Frau Berghem pounded the ceiling with a pole she kept for that purpose, and Berghem responded by stamping to assure her that he was awake and attending to business.
