INDIANS REAL AND IDEAL

The Halo Which Romance Has Given Poor Lo.

When the Truth Is Told the Noble Rec Man Becomes Anything But the Grand Creature Imagination

Has Painted Him. The student of ethnology finds no more fascinating branch of humanity than the Indian. Not the race as depicted by Catlin, Schoolcraft and Drake, who have painted him in glowing colors, but the Indian as he exists to-day. The time has come when the truth about Indian life should be told. The gentlemen mentioned gave much thought to the subject of which they are the accepted authorities, but he who goes among Indians as a student will at once perceive that the whole study of the red men has been one of externals to the exclusion of the more secret and inner life that discloses the real character of the race. The following paragraph appears in the intro-duction of Drake's masterpiece:

"There was found in him (the Indian) an unbounded hospitality, a friendship vouched for with life itself, an unfailing remembrance of a kind-ness done him, a nobility of soul that held it firmly to his ideas of honor, filled him with reverence for the sages and heroes of the tribe and inspired in him an ardent longing to emulate their renown. In social and domestic life kindness and self-control were constantly manifested, wrangling and strife being unknown in the Indian dwelling."

It is difficult, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch, to conceive of a more incor-rect statement of the case regarding the mental attributes of the Indian. In addition to the error that has been constant in the minds of the people, through such statements and ideas as romantic and prejudiced writers have has been a fundamental error in the study of Indians in classing or grouping them all together. It is true that there are certain constant characteristics among the Indians, just as there are in the Caucasian race, but it is also true that the mental and physical differences between tribes are more marked than between the European nations.

It is through reading such authors as viewed the outside or apparent life of Indians that the world to-day knows almost nothing about the dominant characteristics of the red man. In civilized circles the belief is current that the perceptive faculties of the Indian are highly developed; that he is acute in all things, and that his mind almost intuitively grasps philosophical subjects; that he is a born orator with a natural rhetoric: that he pierces the fallacies of sophistry with almost divine powers of analysis; that he has evolved a religious system and worships one God under the title of tributes with which he has been way or another. clothed by those who have been accepted as authority. His physical powers State of Ohio, City of Tolebo, are no less those of a demigod. He is supposed to be a bundle of muscles and nerves, capable of almost superhuman endurance. His eye is so true that he distinguishes objects and tells he finds his way over untrod plains my presence, this 6th day of December, It should be borne in mind that the gri and mountains, and notices the slight.

What are the facts? The Indian is with extreme difficulty and in the simplest manner. He has neither rhetorical nor analytical power. His philosophy is of the crudest sort, and he has no religion. He does not worship a great spirit except as he has been taught by the whites. His mental powers have nothing supernatural in them. Physically he is the inferior of the whites as he is mentally. His muscles are weaker and his nerves more easily unstrung; his eye is less keen than that of the white plainsodors, and tastes few flavors. The result is that his whole life is narrow, as the facts presented to him are rew. His perceptive faculties are of a low past, elevated minds among the In-

Women Who Will Have What They Want and Men Who Won't Register.

The average guest at a first-class hotel puts his fist on the register and takes what the lord of the rooms gives him meekly and uncomplainingly. There are rooms and rooms, just as there are hotels and hotels; and when the hotels are crowded it takes an experienced and determined man to get the best-or a woman, says the Washington Post.

No hotel clerk has ever yet stood up before the onslaught of a lovely female bent on having a front room than the third story.

But there is another class of the ersly. dwellers in tents-the men who never register. Every hotel has them, and Washington hotels more than any other city. WHISKY TRULY SANCTIFIED. A Flask Is Walled Up in a New Jersey

Church The distinction of having a quart flask of whisky walled up in the structure belongs to the Sacred Heart church of this city, says a New Bruns-wick special to the New York Sun. Al-though the church has been built for over ten years, this was not generally known until recently. Ten years ago last October the corner stone of the church was laid, and the work of building the edifice was pushed as rapidly as possible, so that before the dawn of the new year the walls were up to the first story. The cold was intense at this time, and some of the masons employed on the building acquired the habit of depending upon stimulants to keep their blood in circulation. Consequently a large quart flask was brought into requisition, and frequent trips were made from time to time to a hotel to keep it filled with the enlivening fluid. The men had their whisky with great regularity until an incident occurred unexpectedly one day that upset their calculations for the time being.

The flask had just been replenished, and the men were making ready to enjoy it, when they were startled by the sudden appearance of Father Mulligan in company with several other ecclesiastics, who had come to make an inspection of the progress of the work. The man who had the flask happened to be quick-witted, or the secret would have been out. Without a moment's hesitation he quickly stowed the flask in between the inner and outer walls, while the other men went on with their work, consoling themselves with the thought of the good cheer that awaited them when the visitors de-parted. They reckoned in vain. Father Mulligan and his friends remained close to where the men were working for a long time. Although the wall was gradually inclosing the given out as ethnological data, there precious whisky bottle, the masons did not dare stop work for fear of exciting suspicions. When the party finally took its departure, to their dismay the masons found that the flask was out of sight, and all efforts to get it were unavailing. They did not dare tear the wall down to get it, so the whisky remained in the wall, and the filling of cement sealed it securely.

The men who were engaged in erecting the building lived out of town, and the story of the flask was recalled several days ago, when one of the men, who was visiting this city, went to the church to attend service, and thus had the incident brought to his memory.

THE ELK PLAYED POSSUM:

Surprise Awaited the Hunter Whe Started In to Skin the Beast. 'An elk beats the dickens for mischief," said an old hunter to a writer for the New York Sun. "One time I was hunting on the Yellowstone river with Uncle Pete McDougall and a squaw man named Jackson, and every kind of game that you ever saw was found there. We shot no end of buffalo, deer and antelope, and thought the list complete when we struck a band of elk in the open valley. The squaw man said that the only way to kill an elk was to bury yourself in a clump of bushes and wait for him to come to you. I knew better, and so we herded up the group and tried to close in on them in a circle. Well, they all got away except one bull, who was cornered until I could get a shot at him. I was flattering myself that it was a great shot when I saw him fall flat on his side and never move a hair.

'You know all about killing elk,' I said, sarcastic like, to the squaw man. " 'You killed him, you skin him,' he "'All right,' said I, 'but you don't get any of the meat.' And with that I get any of the meat.' And with that I out with my knife and walked quickly over to the dead elk, never noticing where he was hit. I got square over on his neck, and was just reaching with my knife to strike the skin from his head when of all surprises I ever got that was the worst. That bull elk just raised up in the air with me on his neck, and, tossing his head, caught me squarely on his horns. I came down like a piece of lead ore in a thousand foot shaft. I tried to hang on to his fight that I tried to hang on to his left and out of the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Waseo County, upon a decree and judgment made, rendered and entered by said Court on the 16th day of February, 1894, in favor of plaintiff, in a suit wherein Maximilian and Augustus Bunnell, John R. Foster and David Robertson, partners as Foster & Robertson, and Mrs. D. E. Price were defendants, and to me directed and delivered, commanding me to levy upon and sell all the lands mentioned and described in said writ, and hereinafter described. I did on the 1st day of March, 1894, duly levy upon, and will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, on Saturday, like a piece of lead ore in a thousand foot shaft. I tried to hang on to his horns but he jerked my grip and threw me high in the air and on the ground, where I lay with the breath knocked out of me and too scared to move and thinking he would trample me to death in the sage brush. Finally my friends got in their work. The elk had so much fun that he did not see them coming, and Uncle Pete put a ball in his heart just as the beast was about to jump on me with all four feet. The elk tumbled over on me, and under his crushing weight I fainted: The next I remembered was the smell of smuggled Canadian whisky and the squaw man saying with a laugh: "'It takes a long time to learn an elk's ways.' "Like Gen. Grant in the interview 'I had nothing to say on the subject.'
