FAMILY TRADITION COUNTS.

Dominant Force in the Politics and So-clety of Little Delaware.

No resident of a great state can easily guess the feeling of local loyalty and of almost clannish pride commor throughout the commonwealth of Delaware, says the New York Sun. When Wilmington is left out of account the remainder of the state is peopled chiefly by a rural community, native to the soil and descended from ancestors often settled for two centuries within the bounds of the state. There are many families still holding lands under seventeenth century patents, lands that have descended from father to son all those years without the passage of title deeds. It is only a few years since a Delawarean about to remove to the west sold a piece of land that his ancestors had purchased from an Indian chief as the representative of his tribe. Long descent in Delaware is confined to no self-constituted upper every one includes within its congregation some families descended from those that took part in organizing the church. Rural communities throughwhich a man comes is easily guessed Family traditions are jealously treas-

There is a lem any better than I did before!" numerous family in the northern county famous from the fact that nearly all its male members have red heads and heavy red beards. The character is said to belong even to distant Branches members a little better than just everyday newcomers whose conduct is no office because it was recalled that he had been born out of wedlock. Genealogies are carried in the heads of hundreds and old ladies often know the intricate family relationships of half the community. According to tradition, the Du Ponts, who have been making powder for a century, used to remember with satisfaction that an early Bayard had been a hatter. Every community has local traditions of this sort and every man lives with the knowledge that his family history is known to all who have good memo-

GASTRONOMIC GEOMETRY.

A Problem That Was a Poser for a Per-plexed Student.

In the Massachusetts institute of technology the students of architecture have to solve som every abstruse problems in descriptive and analytical geometry in connection with architec-tural forms; and the shades and shadows cast by a certain ring at the bottom of a column called the torus, and the angles and intersections made by supposititious sections of this ring, are exceedingly perplexing to new students.

One day a student came to another student, a young lady, who had a reputation for knowing about these things, and confessed his inability to understand the first principle of a certain problem.

"Oh, it is easy enough," said the young lady. "All you have to do is to consider the torus a doughnut, which you bite so and so, and you will see what the sections are."

The young man went away, reflectively, and next day came back, looking very pale and miserable. "Why, what's the matter?" exclaimed the young lady student.

"O Miss II.," the young man gasped,
"I've eaten a whole dozen of doughnuts, and I've bitten them in oblique and transverse sections, and up and down and crossways and every way. and I've made myself sick at the stomach, and I can't understand that prob-

A PLEASANT EXPERIENCE.

An Old Lady's Story of Being Held in Washington's Arms.

In Dr. Mines' volume of reminiscences, "A Tour Around New York," the author devotes a paragraph to the attractions of Battery park, and adds a pleasing little story of a time before his own:

I remember a dear old lady who loved to talk about this park and tell of the people she had met here and the scenes she had witnessed; and of these one man and one morning's adventure stood out most prominently.

A little thing in white, her nurse had brought her to the park to witness a civic ceremony, and the crowd prevented her from obtaining a good view of the pageant.

As, with a child's impatience, she tried to press through the throng, a talkand handsome elderly gentleman, clad in a suit of black velvet and with a dress sword at his side, stooped down to her, inquired pleasantly about her trouble, and then lifted her upon his shoulder and held her there until the procession had passed.

Delighted with what she saw, the child thought little about the gentleman who had brushed away her trouble, but thanked him when he released her with a kiss and set her down upon the ground. As he moved away, the nurse, in an awestruck voice, asked the child if she knew whose arms had held her, and then told her that it was President Washington. The little eyes watched him out of sight, and never forgot his stately ap-
