As far as Wasco county is concerned, It is safe to say that nine-tenths of the voting population is in favor of the reelection of Hon. W. R. Ellis.

It is pleasure to be able to buy one of of the good old carmine two cent stamps of Uncle Sam's series in place of having the "shin plasters" of the unsuccessful Columbian series forced on you.

The utter folly of trials of strength between man and man is shown by the episode of Saturday night at the East End. A hand-to-hand fight never establishes a principle, and only shows the accident of who of the two is the strongest. The evil of it is, in this case, for instance, that one is maimed for life and the other has a brilliant prospect for serving a term of years in the penitentiary. It is a mistake to suppose it is manly to fight.

Coxey the bland, Coxey the impregnable, Coxey the enthusiast has started for Washington with his tatterel "army." People out in Ohio treat the affair as a huge joke but there may be some serious features connected with it before Washington is reached. The fact that some of the sheriffs have decided not to permit the regiment of tramps to cross their a record of which the men should be territories and will call on the troops if proud, if they ever learn about it. The Gothenburg system of regulating the liquor traffic must be pronounced a troops, and their average per cent, for failure in the United States, as the trouble in South Carolina attests. Gov. Tillman himself is antagonistic to the measure, though he is making all the efforts in his power to preserve order within the state. Prohibitionists will realize as never before the extent of antagonism with which they have to contend, when, though it is shame to say it, state troops retuse to be marshaled against the rioters of Darlington and Florence.

The two things are separate and distinct. They should be treated independently. So treated, the income tax should be stamped out as an impositien foreign to republican institutions and repugnant to American sentiment. The tariff bill should then be sent to a joint conference committee without useless debate. That is what the people would imperatively order if a vote could be taken today. Their emphatic command would be to cut short the agitation which is upsetting the business of the country and pass a tariff bill without tolerable when a revival of prosperity is dependent on its action."

Prince Chartes Rewarded.

The Cologne Gazette tells an interesting story about Prince Charles of Hohenzollern, who has just become engaged to a daughter of the count of Flanders. Three years ago the prince, in the course of a tour in the east, came to Constantinople and was the object of much hospitable attention on the part of the sultan. In the company of Abdul Hamid, the prince was ssing through a corridor at Yildiz Kiosk, hung with armor, when a shield somehow at the moment got detached from the wall, and threatened to fall on the Padishah's head. Quick as lightning the prince sprang forward and caught the buckler in its fall, for which act of promptitude the commander of the faithful hastened to confer upon his visitor the gold and silver Intraz medal, which is only given for acts of special distinction.

The Armenians are one of the oldest races in the world. Their country is mentioned by Xenophon and Ezekiel. and in the cuneiform inscriptions of Babylon and Assyria. All the nations that surrounded them have passed away, but they remain, though their country has been harried with fire and sword for centuries. The permanence of the Armenian race has been ascribed to the virtue of their women and the exceptional purity and stability of their family life. Even in their heathen days polygamy was unknown to them. They have been a Christian nation for more than fifteen hundred years, and have undergone perpetual persecution for their faith from the surrounding oriental people.

War Department Reports Give Some Interesting Statistics, Showing the Indian to Be an Expert Pistol Shot.

Reports received at the war depart ment of recent small arms competitions among the troops in the far west show conclusively that the noble red man, as represented in Uncle Sam's military service, does not compare favorably with his pale face brother in the matter of sharpshooting. There is a popular idea, gained from Cooper's Leather Stocking tales, and even more modern literature, about the "dusky denizens of the forest," that all warriors are superior marksmen. Army statistics, examined by the Washing ton Star. prove that this is a romantic delusion so far as the Indian soldier is concerned. In recent competitions the Indians who have been enlisted in the army of the Colorado have had a chance show what they could do side by side with white men. The best that can be said of them in the report is that they have made progress since being enlisted, but it also says that the sights on the rifles are still incomprehensible to them, and that much patience has been necessary on the part of the officers to bring them to any understanding at all of the principles of marksmanship. Troop L of the Second cavalry, that being an Indian company, showed an individual average figure of merit of 42.22, while the average figure of merit of the company was 78.88.

In collective firing the Indian average was 31.57, while the men of the other troops made an average of 62.70. The Indians in the Eleventh infantry made for their company (I) the average individual figure of merit of 25.05, while the figure of the other troops was 62.87. In the Sixteenth infantry there is one company of Indians. Their figure of merit by individual classification was an average of 27.14, while the figure of the white troops was the high average of 93.16. In collective firing the Indian average was 29.39, as com pared with the white average of 70.47.

At pistol firing the Indians do bet-There is a separate report on this sort of firing for the same troops, and troop L of the Second cavalry, being composed exclusively of Indians, made general average for the command of 66.70; at mounted practice their average was far ahead of that of the white all firing was 65.72, as compared with 59.48 for the whole command. The Indians stood first in order of merit for revolver firing for the department. There were some other interesting statistics obtained by this practice. The natives of the United States stood eleventh in order of merit among nationalities, Norway, Austria, Swit zerland, Ireland, France, Denmark, Scotland, Germany, Canada and Belgium coming in order before the United States. The men of six feet in height and over were also highest in order of meritas sharpshooters and the shortest men were the lowest. The men of light with those of dark blue next. Even the the paralyzed condition of report calls attention to the fact that the percentage made by the Indians | milk, hominy, nor broth. What to at revolver practice was greater than partment for the years 1892 and 1893. It was also the highest record made under existing regulations by any troop in the department.

MONEY IN A MONKEY FARM. But the Ignorance of a Banker Prevents Its Establishment.

"The funniest thing I witnessed during the brief but exciting period known as the boom, in Birmingham, Ala.." said Dr. Everett to a St. Louis Globe-Democrat reporter, "was the formation of a company to establish a monkey farm. About the time the excitement was at its greatest two bankcountry and pass a tariff bill without ers from a country town came with delay. The delay of the senate is inwere very anxious to get into the little group of capitalists who were making big money. They haunted two or three of the leading investors until finally Dr. Jackson, who stood at the head of the local financial world, told them he had a friend with a scheme in which he himself was putting in twenty thousand dollars, and if they really wanted to invest he could, as a personal favor, secure a like amount if one-half was paid down, the other half to be paid in at a meeting to be held in a few days.

"The banker wrote a check for ten thousand dollars, and felt jubilant that family use to be sold cheap. at last he had been admitted into the charmed circles of financiers. In a few days he was notified to attend a meeting of the stockholders, which he did. Then the promoter of the enterprise explained it. His plan was to buy an island near Mobile, send an expedition to Africa and South America to secure monkeys, stock the farms with one hundred thousand monkeys, and raise them for the market. "An elaborate array of statistics was given, showing the cost and market price of monkeys and figuring out immense profits, but it was necessary that the entire amount subscribed should be paid at once. The banker jumped to his feet. 'I don't want no monkey farm. . I knows nodings about dose monkey business. You can keep dawtf my ten thousand dollars if you releas me from that subscription.' This was done, and he swallowed his chargin and disappointment at the loss as best he could. In a few weeks the money was returned to him, and it was explained that it was all a joke, but the banker the postoffice.

"I have never told you," he said to

"Indeed?" she responded, so sincerely that his heart beat faster, and her face blushed at the compliment. 'Ves, and it came about in a remarkable way. Just for fun, one day, I consulted an astrologist, and she told me that I would never care for any woman until I had met one who was then only a schoolgirl, a beautiful, golden-haired creature, with wonderful brown eyes, whose home was toward the setting sun. I laughed at the prophecy, but I found that the words of the seer were true, for I never cared for any woman until I saw you."

Then he stopped, embarrassed and palpitating, thinking she would fall into his arms. But she did not; on the contrary, she snickered.

"Are you sure your astrological friend spoke of a golden-haired schoolgirl?" she asked.

"How could I ever forget?" he responded, intensely. "You couldn't, probably, " she twittered; "only, when I was a schoolgirl I wasn't golden-haired. I've only been using blondine for the last year, don't you know?" And then a heavy weight seemed to fall on him and he staggered

The Surprising Experiences of Piones Life in the Eastern States.

Rev. Joseph Doddridge, in his "Notes on the Settlement and Indian Wars of the Western Parts of Virginia and Pennsylvania," gives a detailed and realistic account of the pioneef life of that region. He was born in 1769. His mother died six or seven years afterward, and his father sent him to Maryward, and his father sent him to Maryward, and his father sent him to Maryward. land to school. On his way thither he saw some wonderful things and had some surprising experiences, which he J. S. SCHENCE.

thus describes: At Col. Brown's in the mountains I for the first time saw tame geese, and for bantering a pet gander I got a se-vere biting by his bill and beating by his wings. I wondered very much that birds so large and strong should be so much tamer than the wild turkeys. At this place, however, all was right except the large birds which they called geese. The cabin and its furniture were such as I had been accustomed to see in the backwoods, as my country was then called.

Sight and Telegraphic Exchange sold on New York, San Francisco and Portwas then called.

At Bedford everything was changed. The tavern at which my uncle put up was a stone house, and was plastered inside, both as to the walls and the ceiling. I was struck with astonish-I had no idea that there was any house in the world which was not built of logs, but here I looked round the house and could see no logs, and above I could see no joists. Whether such a thing had been made by the hands of man, or had grown up of itself. I could not conjecture.

When supper came on, my confusion was worse confounded. A little cup stood in a bigger one, with some brownish stuff in it, which was neither with these little cups and the little spoons belonging to them 1 could not | Can be found at Jacobsen's Music store, No. 162 tell, and I was afraid to ask.

This circumstance distressed me very much, but looking attentively at the grown persons, I saw one man turn his cup bottom upward and put his spoon across it. I observed that after that his cup was not filled again, and I followed his example with a like happy

The Gate City of the Inland Empire is situated at the head of navigation on the Middle Columbia, and is a thriving, prosperous city.

ITS TERRITORY.

It is the supply city for an extensive and rich agricultural and grazing country, its trade reaching as far south as Summer Lake, a distance of over two hundred miles.

The Largest Wool Market.

The rich grazing country along the eastern slope of the Cascades furnishes pasture for thousands of sheep, the wool from which finds market here.

The Dalles is the largest original wool shipping point in America, about 5,000,000 pounds being shipped last year.

ITS PRODUCTS.

The salmon fisheries are the finest on the Columbia, yielding this year a revenue of thousands of dollars, which will be more than doubled in the near future.

The products of the beautiful Klickitat valley find market here, and the country south and east has this year filled the warehouses, and all available storage places to overflowing with their products.

ITS WEALTH.

It is the richest city of its size on the coast and its money is scattered over and is being used to develop more farming country than is tributary to any other city in Eastern Oregon.
Its situation is unsurpassed. Its climate delightful. Its possibilities incalculable. Its resources unlimited. And on these corner stones she stands.
