GOT STARTED AT LAST

Oakland's Contingent of the Industrial Army.

WERE DRIVEN OUT BY THE POLICE

They are Now on Their Way to Join Their Comrades—Frye Stranded at St. Louis.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 6.—Early this morning Chief of Police Schaffer, supported by 250 men, made a formal demand on Colonel Baker's contingent of the industrial army located in the tabernacle to vacate the place and proceed to Sacramento in box cars provided for them by the railroad company. They refused, and the officers thereupon broke into the tabernacle and arrested a number of malcontents, including commander Kelly, one of their leaders. Later on the chief of police addressed the men, asking them once more to leave. They again refused unless commander Kelly was released. Kelly was eventually restored to liberty, and the army formed in line, marched to the depot and left for Sacramento at 4 a. m.

It took considerable time to get the 600 men loaded on the train, but by 5 o'clock about all had been stowed away and the deputy sheriffs began to leave the grounds. About 80 men were put in each car, which did not make traveling very comfortable. The train finally got on its way a little after 5:30 and Oakland was rid of its first seige of an industrial army.

They Arrive at Sacramento.

SACRAMENTO, April 6.—The army was received at the racetrack by the chief of police, the sheriff and their forces. After the men had washed themselves, they were fed with soup, coffee, bread and cheese. The army was worn out, and after eating went to sleep in the grandstand. The men will not be permitted to leave the race track until their departure. The authorities do not now anticipate any trouble, and will pay the cost of transporting the army out of the city tomorrow morning, the expense being $800.

Master Workman Sovereign's Opinion.

DES MOINES, Ia., April 6.—Master Workman Sovereign, speaking in regard to Coxe's army, said it will either result in a failure or a fight, with the probabilities in favor of the former. He thought the imprisonment of members of the army at Alleghany City was prudence on the part of the authorities in dealing with Coxe's followers and the avoidance of any cause for an appeal to the national conscience, which, he said, would rally to his support in less than 30 days an army greater than all the civil authorities of the United States could disperse.

Recruits From Homestead.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., April 6.—Homesteaders have become excited over the speeches of Coxe and Browne. A number of recruits here, estimated at 5,000, camped over night in the ice houses. Several members were discharged for quarreling over a sack of tobacco.

This morning, after a sumptuous breakfast, Camp Homestead was left behind and the army, 500 strong, headed by a local band and an escort of citizens, departed for McKeesport.

Stranded at St. Louis.

St. Louis, April 5.—General Frye and men have been forced to leave the city. They have stopped outside the limits to await developments, as the railroad won't carry them. The men are practically without food.

O. W. O. Hardman, Sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale by Blakeley & Houghton, druggists.

He Knew Too Much.

DENVER, April 6.—Jack Crowder, an associate of gamblers and thieves, known as Aspen Jack, was found dead September 13, 1893, in a lodging house. His face was black and blue and covered with clotted blood as if he had been strangled. It was supposed he was murdered by his criminal associates when they learned he was a Pinkerton detective, as he had evidence on which they would be sent to the penitentiary. Irish Jimmy Sharon, a gambler, who was found dead last week, occupied the room next to the one in which Crowder was murdered, and the detectives have concluded he was also murdered, because when intoxicated he dropped remarks indicating that he knew who killed Crowder.

Dave Hill and Tariff.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The announcement that Senator Hill will deliver his speech on the tariff Tuesday next is received with much interest at the capitol. It is expected that Hill will thrust thorns into the side of the administration. He will undoubtedly inveigh against the income tax and against the policy or lack of such which has been given to the bill. Just how much he will find to object to, and how strongly he will put it, will be one of the factors in determining the ease with which the tariff bill will pass the senate. Senator Hill has maintained just enough secrecy about the nature of his remarks to arouse curiosity.

Plenty of Italian Wines.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Discouraging reports come from consular agent Castellamare, of Italy, as to the enormous wine crop. The grape crop is so abundant in many districts that there are not barrels and demijohns sufficient to hold the juice, and cisterns are filled with wine. The great French wine crop, by reducing the market in that country for Italian wines, will compel large exports to other countries.

A National Bank Robbed.

ELDORADO, Kan., April 6.—The Exchange National bank of this city was robbed of $15,700 a few days ago. The officers kept it a secret until today, in hope of catching the robber, but they have as yet failed to do so. There was no force used on the vaults, and it is supposed to have been the work of some one who understood the combination. There is a reward of $4,000 offered for the thief and the return of the money.

NOT BLOWN OFF BY THE WIND.

Chicken Feathers Disappeared as the Result of Electricity in the Storm.

About a year ago the telegraphic dispatches contained an account of a windstorm in Missouri which not only blew down houses and fences and caused great loss of life but actually stripped the feathers from a rooster. The correspondent stated that not even the pinfeathers were left, and his description of how the cock next morning strutted forth, flapped his naked wings and crowed with a somewhat disfigured but still in-the-ring style caused considerable merriment. It was reasoned that a wind of such force would have blown the fowl to Jericho, and the writer was set down as a Munchausen. Scientific research, however, sustains the story, but ascribes the rooster's condition to another cause. A writer in Der Stein der Weisen says: "Among the most astonishing effects of whirlwinds must be reckoned the well-supported facts that on their cessation birds exposed to them have been found stripped of their feathers, and people with every shred of clothing torn from them. These effects cannot possibly be ascribed to the wind. The force necessary would have sufficed to transport the objects away bodily. Numerous similar occurrences were observed in France in the tornadoes which prevailed there three years ago, and these were gradually brought under investigation. Over the whole region affected trees were found rent in a manner which could not possibly have resulted from the wind. These were, first, oaks split down the center for a length of twenty to twenty-five feet; second, poplars and beeches for lengths of six to twelve feet were shivered into sticks of uniform thickness (for example, a beech tree sixteen inches in diameter was split into more than five hundred sticks a centimeter thick, two centimeters broad and three and a half centimeters long); third, firs and other resinous trees had their stems cut clean through, leaving almost even surfaces. These phenomena and others of kindred nature can be ascribed only to electricity."

PIZZARRO A BAD MAN.

Peru's Conqueror Was a Criminal If Phrenology Counts for Anything.

A new argument in favor of incineration appears in the recent discovery that the cranium of Pizarro, the conqueror of Peru, has such peculiarities as to warrant scientists in forming the lowest opinions of his moral character. Some three hundred and fifty years ago, says Harper's Weekly, Pizarro was assassinated in Lima and buried in the cathedral there. Reports made to the bureau of ethnology at Washington say that his remains, when lately disinterred, were found to be unmodified, and were identified as his by unmistakable marks. Sad to say, his skull reveals to modern science all the craniological signs and tokens of a bad man. One bump proclaims him murderer; another, thief; a ridge verifies all the stories of Las Casas of his cruelties to Indians; a hollow shows where his bump of philanthropy fell in. His skull has even the notorious "fossa of Lombroso," "which," says Mr. Rene Bache, "modern criminologists have never discovered except in confirmed and habitual enemies of society." History has dwelt more upon Pizarro's energy than his benevolence, and has never pictured him as a bland gentleman who went about doing good. But not even Las Casas makes him out such a malefactor as his surviving skull does.

It is too bad the south didn't have Tillman 33 years ago coming the 12th of this month.

A CEMETERY FOR PET DOGS.

London Has One—Many Gravestones with Tender Inscriptions.

London has a pet-dog cemetery. In this town when a very dear and beloved doggie dies he must be buried all alone by himself, because the regular cemeteries have officials and lot owners who object to receiving other than human corpses within their gates.

The London dogs' cemetery is near the Victoria gate in Hyde park. In the rear of the gate-keeper's lodge is a plot of ground which looks like a tiny garden. In the midst of the flowers, however, are a number of small marble tombstones. Arranged in rows, each bearing some tender inscription, with tiny gravel paths between and an arch of ivy to greet the spectator, one counts about forty of these pretty tokens of remembrance. "Poor Little Prince" is the inscription over the grave of the duke of Cambridge's dead-and-gone pet. Others among the dead have the names of Jack, Tip, Topsy, Flo, Sprite, Vie, Darling and Zoe. Each grave has its well-trimmed bushes of evergreen, and here and there are ornaments in the shape of large white shells.

Very few people in London, apart from those whose pets sleep their last in this peaceful little spot, are aware of its existence. Should it be duplicated on this side of the Atlantic, there is no doubt the tiny burial plots would be readily sold. The Pet Dog society, for instance, would naturally be interested in such an institution, and many tender-hearted women and some animal-loving men would be glad to bury their dead pets in just this sort of a place.

Remains of a Prehistoric City.

A party of prospectors who were recently on the Colorado desert in search of a lost mine found the ruins of a prehistoric city. There were walls and remains of stone buildings. For a distance of four hundred and twenty feet in length by two hundred and sixty feet in width gigantic pillars quaintly carved to represent dragons' heads and serpents stood in the sand, supporting on their tops huge slabs of granite weighing many tons. The ornamentation resembled Egyptian sculpture and showed a great degree of skill. The ruins are to be carefully examined by an exploring party, and it is thought that important discoveries will yet be made.

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm and that she has also used it for lame back with great success. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton, druggists.
