

ON TRIAL

That's a good way to buy a medicine, but it's a pretty hard condition under which to sell it. Perhaps you've noticed that the ordinary hit or miss medicine doesn't attempt it.

The only medicine of its kind so remarkable in its effects that it can be sold on this plan is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. As a blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and for sprees. It immediately arrests the flesh-builder, there's nothing like it reaction which makes the toper so sad flesh-builder, there's nothing like it known to medical science. In every disease where the fault is in the liver or the blood, as Dyspepsia, In-digestion, Biliousness, and the most stubborn Skin, Scalp, and Scrofulous affections, it is guaranteed in every case to benefit or cure, or you have your money back.

To every sufferer from Catarrh, no matter how bad the case or of how long standing, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy say this: "If we can't cure it, perfectly and permanently, we'll pay you $500 in cash." Sold by all druggists.

EITHER TONIC OR INTOXICANT. Peculiar Qualities of a Cactus Esten by Prairie Indian Tribes.

The bureau of ethnology has forwarded to Johns Hopkins university for analysis a quantity of the hearts of a certain species of cactus native to the Indian territory. These are eaten by the Kiowas and other southern prairie tribes, producing an intoxication somewhat like that of hash-Used in moderation, they eesh. are said by the Washington Star to be most powerful tonic. Like the famous coca of Peru, they check waste and so stimulate bodily activity as to enable a man to work hard without sleep for days together. The Indians chew these cactus hearts and swallow them. They induce a condition of exaltation. While under their influence a man is lifted out of himself, as it were. He is wide awake, yet dreaming. The intellect is not clouded, but stimulated in a high degree.

The most remarkable thing about this plant is that its peculiar effect is not followed by any reaction. On that account it might be ideally adapted after a "jamboree." At the same time it is neither a narcotic nor an opiate. The southern prairie Indians, with whom the eating of the plant is a religion, regard it as a cure for all diseases, especially for consumption. At their sacred festivals they remain for days in the state of ecstasy described. Each man consumes the cactus hearts at the rate of about one an hour. The songs and ceremonies are of a dreary kind, appropriate to the method of inspiration. Experts at Johns Hopkins university will obtain from the material furnished the active principle of the plant. Thus it is expected that a new medicine, valuable, perhaps, for many remedial purposes, will be added to the pharmacopeia. Dr. Carl Lumholtz has recently discovered that four varieties of this cactus are known to the aborigines in northern Mexico. One greatest medicine, being much more powerful than the plant employed by the Kiowas. They can drink any amount of corn beer, and this remedy will take away all ill effects. The name in use among them for this big sort of cactus is "hicurri."

Queer Clothes in Japan. In an article in Harper's Weekly on Tokio, Japan, the writer has ever so many funny things to tell about the dressing of those natives who want to wear the dress of the Europeans and do not know how to manage it. Sometimes, he says, one sees a man in European boots, a Japanese robe, a loose seignoir appeared, according to etiquette, in a black dress coat, waistcoat | the and trousers, but he also wore socks without shoes, and a waistcoat, cut very low, left the hairy chest of the Daimio exposed to view. This great man knew nothing about shirts or was in correct French get-up." I suppose we do things just as funny with the queer things we bring back from our travels without knowing how to use them. HIS FIRST VOLUME.

Mr. James Payn tells a story which he thinks is new of the manner in which a young poet made money out of his first volume of poetry. The anecdote, it must be said, is much like one that is told of the late James Russell Lowell; but here it is in Mr. Payn's version:

The youthful adventurer had his doubts whether the book would pay for itself, and when good-natured friends -whose good nature, we may be sure, stopped on the wrong side of buyingsaid: "You'll be half ruined," he was rather inclined to agree with them.

At last, in fear and trembling, he wrote to the publisher to know the worst-which he himself had calculated at about eighty pounds.

"Let me know how many have gone off," he wrote in all modesty, "and what is the balance I owe you."

The publisher wrote back: "DEAR SIR: Your whole edition has gone off, leaving a balance of twenty pounds in your favor; check inclosed."
The poet was in the seventh heaven, and yet not satisfied. He rushed to the publisher's to inquire who had bought who? "My dear sir," said the publisher, "I think you had better not ask." "Not ask? Why not? You wrote to say that the edition was all sold; it must have been sold to somebody."

"Pardon me. I wrote that it had 'gone off;' so it had, the whole of it. There was a fire in the warehouse, and the contents were insured."

Great Fighters.

King Lobengula, of the Matabele, a greater man than his people, had the satisfaction of knowing that his men were no mean warriors and that he had trained them to go against, and stand it, too, almost anything but machine guns and repeating rifles con-stantly emptied. British defenses in giant kind is regarded by the Indians South African warfare are the laager, in that part of the country as their a fortification formed by throwing wagons into a circle. In one battle some of the Matabele gallantly pressed up to within fifty yards of the British position, but having poor arms and being poor marksmen, they were no match for the well-armed whites. Within two hours and a half the Matabele attacked the British laager three times. In retreat the Matabele hung some of their wounded to trees and drowned others, it being their principle, apparently, that the only good Matabele is a sound one.

LIKE A BRAVE MAN.

How a Young Poet Made His First Lit-Death of One of Virginia's Most Fearless erary Capital.

John Weitzel was one of the boldest pioneers of West Virginia. "A man absolutely without fear," one of the chroniclers of those times calls him. The manner of his death was worthy of that culogy. In the pursuit of his occupation, that of hunter and surveyor, he often undertook long journeys alone-a reckless proceeding, when time and place are considered-and was never accompanied by more than one or two friends.

One day, while returning in a canoe with one companion from an excur-sion to Middle Island creek, he was hailed by a large party of Indians, and ordered to put ashore. Without making any reply she headed the boat for the middle of the stream, and, with his companion, made every effort to es-

The Indians fired on the instant, and one of the bullets struck Weitzel in the body. The Indians fired another volley, but without effect, and before they could reload the boat was out of range. Weitzel expired soon after reaching the bank, and was buried by his companion. His grave may still be seen, marked by a rough stone on which is traced in rude characters, "J. W.,
