APRIL ANNOTATIONS.

Leaves From the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

There's a little Kansas secret which falls trembling on the ear: Lewelling didn't send Mrs. Lease a valentine this year.

An infant son of Mr. J. T. Johnson of Dufur died very suddenly this morning. The cause of death is not yet known.

The Kingsley delegates to the people's party convention are W. H. Weaver, J. J. Butler, Clyde Butler and J. W. Cox.

Mr. C. W. Cartwright of Wasco has commenced shearing sheep, and Mr. Guthrie of Sherman county will commence next week.

"Si Perkins," a comedy company, will be the first outside theatrical troupe to occupy the new Armory Hall, which opens Wednesday night, April 25th.

The drama "Bread on the Waters," to be given by the Juvenile Temple, will take place in the new Armory Hall Friday evening. Admission to entertainment 25 cents.

Messrs. Moore and Butler arrived in town today with 200 head of choice cattle that average 1,300 pounds in weight, one of them weighing 1,860. They go to the Union Meat company, Portland.

A telegram in the Oregonian yesterday announces that Mrs. Paul Mohr is an officer of a woman's auxiliary to the Seattle branch of the industrial army. It must not be supposed that this is the Paul Mohr of railroad fame, but one much inferior in social position who accidentally bears the same name.

While taking down a partition at the city jail yesterday, Mr. Fouts found a place where some inmate had bored through with an augur, designing to escape. The prisoner had bored through a total of 12 inches of wood and had nearly completed his task when discovered. If he had finished his work he would have been greatly surprised to find himself merely in another cell, instead of the open air.

The lecture last evening by Mrs. Harford, of Newberg, candidate for state superintendent of public instruction on the prohibition ticket, was well attended. She gives a very interesting and instructive temperance talk, and infuses a fair proportion of politics into it. She speaks in a highly complimentary manner of the republican party and stops just short of absolute endorsement. The democratic party she allies with whisky interests and says it is beyond reclaim.

Accident on a Farm.

Bert Conklin, a boy about 15 years old, and small for his age, sustained a painful and serious accident yesterday while harrowing a piece of ground with a four-horse team. The ground was very uneven and in some way he was pitched on to the harrow, one of the sharp teeth piercing his right leg just above the knee. The tooth went clear through the leg just grazing the bone. He did not faint or give way, but with great presence of mind and determination, held the four horses for several minutes until his brother came from the other side of the field. The team was then unhitched and the boy extricated from his woeful plight, taken to the house, and was at once taken to town, arriving at 2 o'clock this morning. Dr. Logan attended to his injuries. The wound laved a ragged gash the width of the leg and was very painful.

The Sheep Outlook.

Mr. R. H. Guthrie, of Sherman county is in the city today and called at THE CHRONICLE office. He says the conditions this year have been exceptionally favorable for sheep. They have done well on the ranges, and are in uniformly good condition. The clip is also of much firmer quality than ever before, the wool longer and of stronger fibre. The lambing season will also show a decided increase and will be 25 per cent. over other years. Altogether the outlook is hopeful, he says, if anything like a price can be received.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Hon. Geo. W. Johnston of Dufur is in the city today.

Mr. John Pashek leaves today for a few days' absence in the country.

Carl Nickelsen of the state reform school returned to The Dalles last evening.

Mr. Fred Frazier of Roelny, Wash, is visiting his sister, Miss Mary Frazier, of this city.

Mr. W. H. Biggs and family arrived from Wasco today to permanently reside. Mr. Biggs expects to assume his duties as receiver of the U. S. land office in a very few days.

Ask your grocer for Columbia Packing Co.'s smoked meats and lard. Insist on their prices and accept no substitute.

There is no necessity for buying Eastern smoked meats and lard when you can secure a better article of home production for less money. Call at the Central Market and examine the Columbia Packing Co.'s meats and prices, and be convinced.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

CHANGE OF PLANS.

Old Question Renewed in the Matter of the City Jail.

In the course of his work of repairing the city jail, Contractor Founts sawed holes in the side of the building next to Third street, and being observed by property owners in the immediate vicinity a protest was at once raised by such individuals. These were Messrs. J. W. French, S. L. Brooks, J. B. Condon and others, and their objections were of such a nature as to call for a special meeting of the city council at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. At this meeting it was decided to call for their presence in the evening and accordingly, at 7 o'clock, the council met the gentlemen to hear their protest.

The council first annulled ordinance No. 202, making it of no force until July 1st, 1894. This is the impounding of stock ordinance, and hereafter, until July 1st, no stock can be impounded. Mr. J. B. Condon then addressed the council in support of his objection, and related considerable interesting history pertaining to the building, new to the council. The building was erected in 1858 for a court house, and besides furnishing a county jail, served for the offices of clerk and sheriff. The cells were on the west, and the only ventilation was through apertures to the corridor, thence through the clerk's office in the southeast corner of the building. The question of cutting holes through the wall on the street side for the purpose of light was then discussed, as it has at various times since that time, but the conclusions have always been that it would not do. The inmates were sometimes very noisy, and would make night hideous. The same fact now presents itself to the city council tonight—a question, which, as I have said, has been discussed thirty years ago, and at intervals since that time.

Mr. Brooks was then asked for. He said his objection was merely as to the openings on the street side of the building, and would have no objection to placing them on the west side, where they would be of much less annoyance. The street, being a public thoroughfare and woman and children constantly passing, if apertures through which noise could escape were left, their ears would be constantly assailed by obscene and profane language, particularly by drunken men. Before the shed was built at the rear of the building and the other buildings near by, which have largely obstructed the sound, I have frequently shut the doors and windows of my residence in summer time to exclude the objectionable noises coming from the inmates of the jail. The most noise and the vilest talk I have always noticed was at night.

Mr. French said he had no objection to make to the jail—it was here when he came and he had no desire to be arbitrary, but like Mr. Brooks, he had often been compelled to close his doors and windows to keep his family from hearing vile language and he had no idea of how vile the human tongue could talk until he had heard some of these prisoners. He believed if the cells were removed to the south side of the building and openings made, it would be almost unbearable, and thought that even if a change in the plans cost a little more, it would be but a trifle to each, and of no comparison to the value of peace and quietude.

Mr. Butts said in justification of the action of the council, that the grand juries had repeatedly called attention to the necessity of repairing the jail, but no one had spoken of the objectionable noise and none of the council had thought of it. The way they had planned was the handiest and cheapest. A conference resulted over the plans, and it was decided not to interfere with the interior plans, only to again close up these apertures and deaden the walls, getting the needed light from the north. There was no further objection.

Long Hollow Notes.

The weather is freezing cold and the wind is blowing a hurricane.

The hills are covered with nice green grass and a great many pretty flowers. Messrs. Moore and Butler passed through here with a nice band of fat beef cattle.

It looks natural again to see the freight teams rolling by, loaded with wool and freight.

The farmers are slowly getting their crops in, but some are through and are making garden.

We have a nice school; Miss Ball is our teacher. The children all like her and are learning fast.
