UNLIMITED CHEEK.

Dr. Morrison, Who Tallies His Loves on His Cane, Still in Town.

The expose of Dr. Morrison in this city by THE CHRONICLE has not affected his equanimity in the least, and indifferent alike to the published details of his flight from Boise with Mrs. Brown...

We will give him the benefit of this much free advertising. We will also herald in advance that it is his intention to soon give a lecture in The Dalles...

The Boise Statesman of recent date will further enlighten the people of this city as to the doctor's accomplishments:

'Dr. Morrison has had a checkered career. His love adventures are so numerous, it is said, he can only keep track of them by cutting notches on his cane. His cane is as full of indentations as an alligator's tail.'

'W. R. Waller, who for over a year traveled over the country with this heart-winning excuse for a man, yesterday told a reporter of several of the brute's scrapes. Morrison was a so-called specialist of female diseases and it is said he attempted to run away with every woman he treated.'

'Waller first met Morrison in Spokane, where it is understood the doctor's wife still lives. The doctor played an engagement there by running away with the wife of an attorney.'

'Morrison soon afterward started out on a specialist tour, Waller going along as advertising agent. Waller says he went along more to get Morrison out of Spokane than anything else, as he, (Waller) had a number of friends in that city who were married.'

'A singular fact in connection with Morrison's career of love is that he is as ugly as a scarecrow and this accounts for the prevalent opinion that he secures control of his victims by the use of drugs or the exercise of hypnotic influence.'

'In Wallace an enraged husband ran him out of town for practising his hellish wiles upon his wife. Whether or not Morrison drugged or hypnotized the woman upon whom he had designs, he was highly successful in most instances and succeeded in winning several women from their devoted husbands.

'Mr. Brown is satisfied his wife was drugged or hypnotized—perhaps both. He cannot make himself believe she would wilfully desert him. Morrison attended one of Brown's children, and, after gaining admission to the house, called frequently, the intervals between his visits being shorter in Brown's absence than when the husband was home.'

POPULIST CONVENTION.

Nomination of County Officers Exhausts Their Strength.

Thirty-three populists from various parts of the county assembled at the court house at 1 o'clock for the sole purpose of nominating a county ticket. At least that was all the committee on order of business reported, but with the peculiar felicity of these representatives of the spirit of Unrest, they departed from the adopted report and managed to nominate two joint representatives after the convention adjourned.

Mr. J. W. Elton called the convention to order and nominations for chairman being in order, L. Henry of Hood River was nomination by acclamation. H. C. Moore of Nansene was named for secretary and Mr. Cheley for assistant.

The committee on credentials were H. L. Howe of Hood River, Mr. Butler of Kingsley and J. W. Elton of The Dalles, who reported a total of thirty-three entitled to sit in the convention. As a matter of fact thirty-four were in the house when the convention opened, as a reporter of THE CHRONICLE was in attendance.

Nominations were at once declared in order for county officers.

For clerk Mr. Elton nominated 'Mr. John Taylor of Dry Holler.' George Brock of Hood River was also placed in nomination. John A. Keeley of S-Mile declined. Taylor received the largest number of ballots.

For Sheriff J. L. Rhodes of Kingsley and J. W. Elton of The Dalles were placed in nomination. A. L. Reese declined, so did Geo. Brock. Elton nervously grabbed a pencil and commenced tallying as the tellers counted the names. When 'Elton' was pronounced the 17th time, an audible sigh escaped from his lips and he turned a shade paler. After this it seemed a very hard matter to nominate anybody.

Whether the fact that the more lucrative offices on the ticket had been filled acted as a cathartic, or whether from excessive modesty on the part of the nominees, no one wanted to be nominated.

For treasurer, W. H. Taylor declined because his son had been honored with the prospective clerkship. Wm. Johnson of The Dalles declined. Mr. Wickham declined. Taylor was a second time urged to take it, but positively declined. H. P. Moore declined.

G. W. Johnson was then nominated by acclamation.

For county commissioner Wm. Harriman was nominated by acclamation. He wasn't there.

For superintendent of schools, Mary E. Frazier was nominated by acclamation.

tion. She wasn't there. She had previously, however, delicately accepted the compliments of the convention, if the nomination was given her.

For assessor, C. L. Morse declined. Al Reese declined. Mr. Kelly declined. H. P. Morse of Nansene declined and so did H. L. Lowe. By this time the convention was in a lamentable shape. The faces grew anxious. They evidently wanted to nominate somebody, but nobody could be thought of who would not decline. All the people's party men in the county were in the court room and not one of them would have it. Mr. C. L. Morse generously came to the rescue by saying if he was nominated he would accept, and he consequently went through by acclamation.

For coroner John Applegate was nominated. Seth Morgan declined, and Applegate was declared the unanimous choice.

For surveyor H. F. Davidson was nominated. He excused himself. Lack of material induced one to move that the choice be left to the central committee, but before the motion was put, someone nominated P. P. Underwood. He couldn't help himself; he wasn't there; and he was elected.

A recess was then taken for nomination of justice of the peace and constable for The Dalles. If they succeed in finding candidates they may possibly name at the same time candidates for joint representatives for Wasco and Sherman counties, but at the present writing (3 o'clock) it looks blue.

LATER.

When the convention reconvened, L. Henry, of Hood River, and W. J. Peddicord, of Wasco, were nominated for joint representatives.

Our Spy in Error.

Charley Heppner says he only went for a day's vacation with the boys to see how Cello was prospering; how their shoe factories and fisheries were getting along and the prospects of a boat railway around the falls, and had no intention of going further; that it was an error in regard to their being taken in ambush, as they were already on their return trip when met by the cavalry.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Geo. P. Morgan returned to the Locks this morning.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.
