A Murderer Hanged.

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., April 20.—Patrick J. Sullivan, who brutally murdered his wife on the streets of San Francisco in November, 1892, was hanged at 11 o'clock this morning in the presence of the prison officials, reporters, doctors and others. Sullivan passed the previous night comfortably and joked and laughed with the guards several hours. He ate a hearty breakfast. After the usual religious consolation by a Catholic priest, a few moments before 11 o'clock he mounted the scaffold with a firm tread. He made a short speech, adjuring those present to be aware of wine and women, "which are man's downfall." As the black cap was drawn over his head he shouted: "You can't say I died like a cur." The trap was sprung, and his death was instantaneous.

Gallinger on the Tariff.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Senator Gallinger spoke on the tariff bill. Gallinger denounced the bill as one nobody unqualifiedly approves except the senators from Missouri and Indiana, McLaurin and Turpie. Even the author entered an apology for the measure. It is strictly a Southern bill, and most of the New England money invested in the South is forever lost if it becomes a law. He took up in turn the various industries of New England that would be injured if passed, and said the increased tax on spirits would benefit alone the whisky trust. Free wool will ruin this industry, and the income tax was denounced as sectional and unjust. The laboring masses of the North had set the seal of condemnation on the bill and no longer stick to the ticket they voted last year, but ally themselves with the party that stands for protection, good wages, happy and comfortable homes.

ASKING FOR AMNESTY

Conference With the Insurgent Leaders.

BUENOS AYRES, April 20.—A dispatch to the Times says an envoy from President-elect Mores has held a conference here with the insurgent, General Martine, for the purpose of arranging peace in the state of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil. General Martine's terms of peace were that the governor of Rio Grande do Sul be deposed and that a new election be held in Brazil; that the insurgent officers be reinstated in the posts they formerly held, and that amnesty be granted to all. It is stated Da Gama will be landed in Buenos Ayres today. It is reported General Saravia, with 5,000 of his insurgents, is on the Northwestern frontier of Rio Grande do Sul.

NEWS NOTES.

The betrothal is announced of the czarowitz, Grand duke Nicholas, to Princess Alix Victoria Helena Louisa Beatrice of Hesse.

The creditors of C. L. Webster & Co. are disposed to help Mark Twain. He is in his 60th year, has aged rapidly the last few years, and his fortune is greatly over-estimated.

It is proposed that the United States congress, in the name of the people, complete the explorations of the north and south polar regions and make an annual appropriation of $25,000 for this purpose.

The reported discovery of a wonderful deserted city in a remote section of the Sierra Madre mountains, in Durango, has been verified by Maurice Lentow and a party of explorers. They found a secret entrance to the city and made an exhaustive exploration. They returned laden with curiosities from abandoned residences and temples. The population of the city could not have been less than 25,000.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

A barber in La Grande named Ankeny is missing. The only explanation is a note posted on the Wallowa bridge stating that he intended to jump into the river. The note reads: "Notice—To whom it may concern: Having drank so much whisky, making myself and everybody else enemies, have come to the conclusion I would end my life by jumping off this bridge. Hoping it will relieve others as well as myself, I go. If my body is recovered feed it to the hogs." Those who were acquainted with him think it is a hoax.

ORIGIN OF DEATH VALLEY.

An Indian Legend Regarding a Queen as Beautiful as Cleopatra.

The Indian legend regarding the origin of Death valley, in Mayo county, California, is an interesting one. From the outer edge of this vast furnace—it is three hundred miles square and one hundred feet below sea level—one may see far off, tremulous through the shimmering waves of heat, a sort of butte that has the form of a ruined castle. The story goes that in the old days, before the Amargosa river ceased to water the valleys, the place was the site of a powerful city ruled by a princess as beautiful as Cleopatra and as imperious as Elizabeth. An ambassador to the reigning Aztec monarch described to her on his return the glories of the king's palace in the City of Mexico.

Resolving to equal the magnificence of her neighbor she began the erection of a vast building. All the laborers and artisans of the city were employed and the work was pushed night and day, for within twelve months the Aztec ruler was to be her guest, and she wished to welcome him to a palace as splendid as his own. She exhausted the resources of her realm, men went mad with toil and hunger, and at last the high priest protested. He was ordered to execution, and, dying, cursed the city for the princess's sake. That night the earth shook and sank, the river dried up and the morning sun poured down a flood of heat. All perished, and now the ruined walls of the palace alone remain.

The Amargosa, by the way, is a most erratic stream. It flows south ninety miles from its fountain head in the western Sierras, vanishes at Resting Spring mountain, is in evidence again for fifty miles, disappears for a space, then bobs up and runs along turbulently for one hundred miles. All trace of it is lost at Death valley.

Excess of Etiquette Killed Him.

The rigid etiquette of courts has more than once come near making a martyr of the person whom the rules prevented from aiding off-hand. In Spain these notions of etiquette were carried to such an extent that Philip III. met his death in direct consequence of them. The king was one day gravely seated by a chimney where the fireman of the court had kindled so great a quantity of wood that the monarch was being suffocated with heat. His grandeur would not suffer him to rise from the chair to call for help; the officers-in-waiting were not within call, and the domestics could not presume to enter the apartment, because it was against the etiquette. At last Marquis de Pobat appeared, and the king ordered him to damp the fire; but he excused himself, alleging that he was forbidden by the etiquette to perform such a function, for which Duke d'Asseda ought to be called upon, as it was his business. The duke was gone out, the fire burned fiercer, and the king endured it rather than derogate from his dignity; but his blood was heated to such a degree that erysipelas broke out in his head the next day, which, being succeeded by a violent fever, carried him off.

"Now good digestion wait on appetite, And health on both."

To assure both the above ends, good, wholesome, palatable food is demanded. It is next to impossible to present a sufficient variety of appetizing bills of fare for our meals without a liberal allowance of pastry and other food in which shortening is required. How to make crisp, healthful, digestible pastry has puzzled the cooks. A difficulty in all good cooking in the past has been lard. Always hickie, never uniform, most unwholesome—lard has always been the bane of the cook and the obstacle to "good digestion."

THE MIDWINTER.

"Sing Three" Sees Beautiful Things and Rides a Camel.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 16, '94.

Editor CHRONICLE:

Sometimes we are compelled, no matter how much we resent it, to take back what we have said so often that we have come to believe it the whole truth and nothing but the truth, and such is the case at present. The Dalles is not the windiest place on earth, for if yesterday's wind storm is a fair sample of San Francisco breezes, no place on the globe can compare with it. However up till yesterday we had fine weather and ought not to complain though we were so "blowed." Well, we have not changed our minds in regard to the merits of the Midwinter fair, and the more we see of it the better are we pleased. Through the influence of Mrs. Barton, who is a sister of Mrs. French and in the office of Mr. DeYoung, and the kindness of the executive secretary, Mr. Badlam, I was allowed a pass into the grounds without other recommendation, so have had a good opportunity to see all that is to be seen. The best plan is to spend a day at a time on the grounds, so that you may miss none of the fine music by Sousa's band and also enjoy watching the illumination in the evening, which is grand, all of the principal buildings being fringed with electric lights. The principal object of interest is the electric tower, about 200 feet high, and on which are arranged different shaded lights to represent shields, stars, diamonds, etc., and on the very top is a powerful search light. This tower is in the center of the court and around it are walks fringed with flowers and plants. Directly in front of the administration building is the allegorical fountain, which I do wish I could describe, for I think it one of the most interesting things to be seen. One statue particularly took my fancy, that of a mining shaft, in front of which are two miners at work, one holding in his hand a large hose from which flows a powerful stream of water. Near the top of this fountain, below a beautiful statue, are the words, "California, the land of sunshine and flowers." The electric fountain is situated in front of the liberal arts building and plays at about 8 o'clock every evening, when all other illuminations are suspended for the time. It must be seen to be appreciated, for it cannot be described. Those who attended the world's fair say this is one of the things which fully come up to what was to be seen there.

The exhibits of the different counties in California, of course have a sameness, but are none the less interesting. The orange exhibits of Southern California are especially fine, comprising among other things, houses, arches, Ferris wheels, etc., of oranges. The Examiner and Chronicle of this city have offered prizes to be given by vote to the county having the best exhibit. Saline county so far has the most votes for the gold cup to be given by the Examiner, but as usual, it seems to me does not deserve it as much as many others.

The attendance at the fair is increasing every day, but in spite of the efforts
