A FORMER WILSON BILL.

Colton's "Life of Henry Clay," Vol. 1, contains a description of the times of 1837, the culmination of the most appalling and disastrous financial revulsions ever known-a period of time following the tariff act of 1833, which was much like the Wilson bill of today:

"The ruln came quickly and fearfully. There were few that could save them- any newspaper items. selves. In addition to a review of the Cleveland administration by ex-Gov. Russell (dem.) of Massachusetts and Senator Cullom (Rep.) of Illinois, the May Forum will contain a discussion of unusual opportuneness and point at a time when "armies" of tramps are marching towards Washington-of the question whether the state should give aid to the unemployed, by Dr. Stanton Colt, of New York, who favore state aid, and by Mr. D. McGregor Means, who argues that state aid means socialism.

What official is to blame for not collecting the road or poll tax from residents of this city? In the country hardly a person escapes paying this tax or working the roads, and yet there are over 500 people in this city who should pay a poll tax. If this tax was collected each year, and expended on roads, it would make them vastly better. The country supervisors are scrupulous about enforcing the payment of this tax. Why is the city direlict in the matter? A few months ago when the city was employing its more unfortunate citizens to work on the rock crusher, $2 in labor was extracted out of each and everyone | Thursday, May 10th, 1894, at 2 o'clock of them to pay this tax. The circum- p. m. for the purpose of electing seven far as known, no one else but these impecunious men at the city's mercy were asked to pay. It is nothing more than simple justice that all should pay this tax. Those who cannot afford to work can pay the money, and those who cannot afford to pay the money can work. Some officer is neglecting his duty.

One of the worst evils connected with the question of dirt roads is the prevalent use of narrow wagon tires on heavily laden wagons, and since it would be such an easy matter for farmers to have wide-tired wagons by simply demanding them, it is surprising they have not already come into general use. Supply always follows demand, the markets respond to the first slight pressure, and if even a very few farmers would demand wide-tired wagons, it would not be six months until they would be found on sale at every implement house in the country. It should require no argument to convince the intelligent man that the tendency of a narrow tire on a heavy wagon is to tear up the surface of a roadway constructed of as loose a material as ordinary dirt, while the tendency of a wide tire is to compress the material under it, and thus serve in a large measare as a road-maker and not as a roaddestroyer. A writer who has made some careful tests has this to say on the "You can start 530 pounds more with a 3-inch tire across fields Greennouse Plants, with the same power exerted than with a 116-inch tire. You can haul 830 pounds more with a 3-inch tire across fields with the same amount of power CUT FLOWERS and FLORAL DESIGNS exerted than you can with a 11/2-inch tire." A sensible move has been taken by the state of Michigan, which might, with profit, be adopted in Oregon, that every farmer using tires over a certain width on draft wagons shall be entitled to a rebate of one-half the road tax.

A lady playing the leading part in a melodrama carried with her a very cross Spanish poodle, which slept in her trunk while she was engaged in the play. The little dog was a sound sleeper usually, but this evening was an exception. He was wide awake and sitting unobserved in the first entrance watched the play when the heavy man seizes the leading lady, shricking: "Then, curse you! I'll strangle you!" The poodle sprang onto the stage, procured a firm hold on the heavy villain's trousers and jerked away at them until his mistress was obliged to arise from her knees, stop sobbing and plead with the villain to 'spare her life," and return the poodle to the dressing-room and lock him in.
