You've Read E. P. Roe's "Opening of a Chestnut Burr."

THE CHESTNUT IS NOW OPENED. OUR NEW SHOES HAVE ARRIVED.

The Steamer REGULATOR, on her Wednesday's trip, brought our Spring Stock of Shoes, for Men, Women and Children. Read carefully here: It was such an immense shipment that the Steamer DALLES CITY, partly on this account and because of the high water, was not successful in reaching her landing at the Cascades the first time; was obliged to put back to Bonneville, unload other freight and try again, when success crowned her efforts, and without unloading any of our shoes. To partly compensate our friends for the delay, we give them the opportunity of selecting from this new stock, this day only, at Leaves From the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

He's mortgaged out his mule. An' the children's took from school. An' his wife-he's left the plowin' all to her. An' he open's the time a jawlin'.

The local train was delayed today by switching cars at various points on the road.

Officer Robert Austin shot and killed a burglar in Portland last night while attempting to rob Jacobs' second hand store at 281 Front street.

The Columbia river is on its annual rise and has already attained a height of 25.6 feet. Present indications point to higher water than last year.

On May 1, says the Pendleton Tribune, John C. Leasure will remove with his family to Portland to reside in the future as a member of a law firm recently organized. The firm will consist of John C. Leasure, Fred Page-Tustin and A. D. Stillman under the firm name of Leasure, Tustin & Stillman. The firm will retain an office in Pendleton under the care of Mr. Stillman.

The hazy weather of the past few days culminated in a fine rain, which began about 4 o'clock last evening and continued quite steady until about 9 o'clock this morning. The rain gauge recorded .49. While vegetation was in no great need of moisture it was beneficial. The tree foliage has assumed a different hue.

Reports from the farming districts indicate a wonderful growth of grain this spring and the outlook is more promising than ever known in former years.

The Coxe army are encamped at Troutdale, sixteen miles this side of Portland. They took possession of the telegraph office this morning, driving the operator out, and furnishing one from among their own ranks. They threaten to take the very next train which stops there, whether it is going east or west. If going west they will reverse the engine. The Union Pacific company are determined, if possible, not to carry them, and it is rumored are arming their trains with deputy marshals to repel invasion.

"Si Perkins."

"Si Perkins" lacks every element of refinement and is a play for the galleries. Its comedy for the most part is of a degrading sort, and at times approaches vulgarity. It is not suited to The Dalles. The play is apparently patterned after the "Alvin Joslin" of the famous W. H. Davis, but the title role departs from the rustic simplicity, but true morality, of "Uncle Josh," and substitutes an obnoxious and unnatural character for the simple countryman in urban society. "Si Perkins" as a character was overdrawn, is not true to life, and has a demoralizing predilection for "sport," in the sense as understood by gamblers and rounders. The orchestra was a redeeming feature of the performance, but subtracting from it the mechanical tricks to imitate the start of a train, under full headway, the slacking down to a full stop, etc., there was not so much real merit in the orchestra as is possessed by our own, which is one of the best in the state.

It covers a good deal of ground—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. And when you hear that it cures so many diseases, perhaps you think "its too good to be true."

But its only reasonable. As a blood-cleanser, flesh-builder, and strength restorer, nothing like "Discovery" is known to medical science. The diseases that it cures come from a torpid liver, or from impure blood. For everything of this nature, it is the only guaranteed remedy. In dyspepsia, biliousness; all bronchial, throat and lung affections; every form of scrofula, even consumption (or lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages, and in the most stubborn skin and scalp diseases—if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Chronic nasal catarrh positively cured by Dr. Sage's Remedy. 50 cents; by druggists.

4,000 rolls wall paper, fresh goods and new designs, with borders and ceilings to match, just received, will be sold at hard times prices. Jos. T. Peters & Co.

THE COXEYS.

Royally Entertained in Troutdale, but Can't Get Out.

The local train passed the Coxe army at Troutdale at a terrific rate of speed this morning, the army having again been outwitted. The baggage was taken in a roundabout way to a point about a mile beyond Troutdale, and here the train stopped to take the baggage and the passengers. All that they could do was to look on in astonishment and chargin as the train sped by with the swiftness of a rocket.

The army is being royally entertained at Troutdale. The meat company there furnishes plenty of meat, the grocery stores furnish plenty of potatoes and the barns and outhouses furnish plenty of sleeping room. The Western Union superintendent, in company with the U. S. marshal, went to Troutdale about 3 o'clock this afternoon from Portland, and in the name of the law took possession of the captured telegraph office by serving an injunction and reinstated the company operator. The army went back to camp in perfect order.

An Unknown Man Killed.

When train No. 22 had passed the Des Chutes bridge this morning, the engineer discovered the body of a man lying on the track just west of the Des Chutes bridge. He had evidently been run over by a train, as the body was badly mangled. His pockets had the appearance of having been rifled, and it is thought he was murdered. His identity is not so far known. The remains were given in charge of the watchman, awaiting further investigation. The coroner was notified this morning, who instructed L. S. Davis, with Jim Blakeney and team to proceed to the Des Chutes and bring the body to The Dalles. They will arrive late this evening.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

NO WHISTLING IN BERLIN.

One of the Many Nuisances Forbidden in the German City's Streets.

The Berlin police are permanently under instructions to repress whistling, whether recreative or utilitarian, with the utmost rigor, and display unrelaxing energy in carrying out their orders to the letter. Whistling in public is not only repugnant to the German apprehensions of "di bohre Bildung," or "higher culture," says a writer in the London Telegraph, but actually constitutes a minor misdemeanor, and as such is punishable by fine, with the inevitable alternative of imprisonment. The former penalty was recently incurred by a hall porter of a fashionable hotel, Unter den Linden, who persisted in sounding his whistle to summon a cab for a client of the establishment after having been forbidden to do so by an agent of the law. Appealing from the sentence of the police authorities to the judgment of a civil court, the porter pleaded that from time immemorial it had been the custom in Berlin to whistle for droschies, once, twice, thrice, or four times, according to the relative quality or capacity of the vehicle required. This plea, however, the judge rejected as irrelevant to the point at issue—to wit, the illegality of whistling in a public thoroughfare—and further mulcted the appellant in the sum of three marks "for making a noise that disturbed the repose of the public."

The Prussian police authorities—to their credit and praise be it admitted—are inflexible in prohibiting the performance of street bands; they only grant organ grinding licenses to a few infirm old soldiers, who, moreover, are not permitted to work their instruments of torture in roadways or sidewalks, but only in certain prescribed open places, or in the court yards of private houses at the special request of their inmates. On the other hand, they are overtolerant with regard to all manner of street cries and to the distracting clamor raised by the children on their way to and from school at certain hours of the day. Prussia is conspicuously a music loving and a music making country. As the inhabitants of its cities, however, for the most part live in flats, they are not allowed to play or sing in their apartments after ten o'clock p. m., unless with the express consent of the persons residing immediately above or below them, whose innate right to enjoy unbroken rest "o' nights" they are bound to respect. Nor may they keep on their premises any furred or feathered animals addicted to the nocturnal utterance of sounds that "murder sleep" and give rise to irritation of temper. The conscientious dog prompted by a sense of duty to bark all night, if notoriously vociferous, has to be severely eliminated from the precincts of a Prussian townhouse.
