has been a chestnut with us for some time.

THE CHESTNUT IS NOW OPENED. OUR NEW SHOES HAVE ARRIVED.

The Steamer REGULATOR, on her Wednesday's trip, brought our Spring Stock of Shoes, for Men, Women and Children. Read carefully here: It was such an immense shipment that the Steamer DALLES CITY, partly on this account and because of the high water, was not successful in reaching her landing at the Cascades the first time; was obliged to put back to Bonneville, unload other freight and try again, when success crowned her efforts, and without unloading any of our shoes. To partly compensate our friends for the delay, we give them the opportunity of selecting from this new stock, this day only, at

FRIDAY, APR 27, 1894

APRIL ANNOTATIONS.

Leaves from the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

"Things are not always what they seem." The boarder said in tones of sorrow "The cold vest left from yesterday Makes chicken-salad for tomorrow."

The Wasco warehouse got in a nice lot of wool yesterday from M. Sichel, Prineville.

The Wasco News' "devil" takes off his hat when speaking to ladies over the telephone.

Mr. W. J. Peddicord addressed a small gathering at the court house last evening on populist issues.

Mr. G. H. Riddell of 8-Mile states that the rainfall of the last two days was very heavy in his neighborhood.

The river raised at Umatilla 1.4 feet in twenty four hours. At Wallula the river is rising and at Walla Walla the river is rising. This means a two-foot rise at The Dalles tomorrow.

Col. Thompson received a dispatch this morning from Adjutant General R. W. Mitchell, Portland, to not, under any circumstances, call out the militia without orders from headquarters.

The Ferris wheel is to find a permanent home in New York city. London, San Francisco and others bid for it, but a New York company secured the contract, and it is proposed to set up the monster cycle somewhere in the vicinity of lower Broadway.

The freight train that came in from the west this morning was a very large one and was drawn by two engines.

We noticed four brass field pieces of ordnance, of 24-pound calibre. It is understood they are en route for the East, on account of being supplanted by the new style of ordnance, which all military posts are supplied with.

Progressive Whist Party.

A most enjoyable progressive whist party was given last evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Crowe. A delicious lunch of several courses followed the card playing, with ice cream and cake for dessert. The score cards were quite artistic. On the front page was hand-painted a bow of ribbon, the ends bearing the date, "Thursday, April 26th 1894," and on the last page the branch of a tree on which was perched two crows. The first prize was won by Mrs. W. H. Wilson, a beautiful vase of Worcester manufacture, and Mr. Hobson the second prize, a natural-looking rooster, which was the result of considerable mechanical genius, and would act as natural as life. The party will be long remembered by those present, who were as follows: Mr and Mrs Myers, Mr and Mrs Eshelman, Mr and Mrs Fish, Mr and Mrs Bradshaw, Mr and Mrs Paterson, Mr and Mrs Houghton, Mr and Mrs Hostetler, Mr and Mrs Brooks, Mr and Mrs Lord, Mr and Mrs W. H. Wilson, Mr and Mrs Glenn, Mr and Mrs Hobson, Mr and Mrs Thompson, Mrs Sinnott, Mr and Mrs Crowe.

Caught with a Pin Hook.

One of our bright young school boys was asked by the teacher yesterday how much was twice 7. "Twelve," he replied. "Since when?" said the teacher. "Since the Coxe army started to Washington?" "No," replied the bright boy, "since you have turned into a populist," and the next thing that boy knew was something in connection with a willow switch.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. E. B. Wilson, of the Northern Pacific freight department, is in the city today.

Mr. A. Noltner, of Oregon newspaper fame, is in the city today. He gave THE CHRONICLE office a very pleasant call.

THE BODY IDENTIFIED.

Alex. Butterly Killed by the Train and Horribly Mutilated.

The mystery of the dead man found on the track by the Des Chutes bridge was solved today. His name is Aleck Butterly, and he fell off the east-bound passenger train, from between the baggage and mail cars, where he was stealing a ride, while partially intoxicated. Butterly has been working at the Cascade Locks, and being thrown out of work, concluded to go eastward by beating his way. He came to The Dalles on the same passenger train he was riding at the time of his death, and while the train was waiting for a change of engines, went into the Baldwin saloon with a comrade, where both took several drinks. At this time Dick Nolan was close to the two men while they were standing at the bar and he saw Butterly, the deceased, take out of his pocket a pass book, which was afterwards found on his person. He said to Nolan that he had been working at the locks, and was discharged, and said he would not join the Coxe army, but would go on east in advance of them. The other man had a black whisky flask containing liquor. Both were pretty drunk.

These facts were developed at the inquest. The other witnesses were railroad men, who testified as to the condition of the body when found. He was fearfully mangled and torn. One arm lay 100 feet away. A foot lay 25 feet from the body. The trunk was cut in two in the region of the hips, and the brains were scattered all along the track. Death was almost instantaneous.

In a pants pocket was found $2.55 in silver, wrapped up in a white silk handkerchief, with the pass book before mentioned, and in his left vest pocket was found a $5 greenback.

The following is the verdict of the coroner's jury:

In the matter of an inquest on the body of an unknown man found on the U. P. railroad at Des Chutes bridge, Wasco county, Or., we, the jurors empaneled, in the above-entitled case, in our deliberations, find that the name of the party was A. Butterly, and we further find that said Butterly came to his death by falling from and being run over by the east-bound passenger train leaving The Dalles on the night of the 25th of April, 1894; that we further consider it to be purely and accidental death, and from no cause of negligence on the part of the railroad company.

THE MARKETS.

Business Still Quiet—Opening of the Wool Season.

FRIDAY, April 27.—This week just closing is a continuation of the previous one. A general degree of quietness prevails in all kinds of business in the city. The wool has commenced to arrive from the sheep ranches, which is an omen of activity, not only in trade circles, but in all kinds of business in the near future. Produce and provisions are in usual demand, and receipts are fully up to requirements.

The egg market is steady on last quotations, but a falling off in receipts is noticed.

The butter market is unchanged. The poultry market, while there is a falling off in receipts, former quotations are adhered to.

The potato market is quite lifeless. The receipts have almost ceased and a bare market is only a question of a short time.

The cereal market is as quiet as formerly. There are no changes to record in quotations of feed grain or wheat.

The condition of the hay market is of a weak character. Timothy hay is said to be unsalable on account of the large quantity of other kinds of forage on hand.

The wool clip has commenced to come to the warehouses, but the season is early for the wool movement. The market has not assumed any spirit of interest. Some buyers talk of a probable quotation of 8 and 9 cents per lb for extra clean and fine staple, and 4 to 6 cents for heavy and dirty fleeces. We understand a very small amount will be shipped on consignment this season, but on the other hand it will be sold at The Dalles so as to clean up old scores which, owing to the paralyzed condition of the country, were carried over on to 1894.

Wool bags are in moderate supply at 40 cents for 4-pound bags. The live stock market is very weak and has a declining tendency.

He Didn't Like Coons.

A northern visitor in Florida recently asked a native negro as to the character of the sub-tropical raccoon, and this was the reply: "Coons is a mighty curious leetle animal, but Ah doan lak coons, an' Ah tell yo' why. Onct Ah ketcht a leetle coon an' Ah tuk 'im home, Ah did. Ah lef 'im in de house whal Ah went out in de ya'd, an' w'en Ah come back dat leetle coon had koun' de m'lasses jug. Ah watcht 'im, an' dere he sat a-puttin' his leetle han' daown in de jug, an' a-drawin' it up, an' a-swippin' it across his mouf. Den he'd lick off his whiskers, an' he'd put his leetle han' down in de jug, an' he'd draw it up agin, an' he'd swipe it across his mouf agin. He kep' dat up tvel he had all de m'lasses he wanted. Den he jes' jump upon de baad an' he walk right across de pillows, he did. No, Ah doan lak coons, Ah doan'."

FOLLOWING on the success attending the recent trials of the Heilmann electric locomotive in France, comes the news that M. Heilmann is designing a still more powerful electric locomotive. The peculiarity of this form of electric locomotive is that the machine makes its electric power from steam.
