INDIANS ON THE TRAIL.

Wonderful Work Done by Utes, Apaches and Other Redskin Trib

While Indians are better trailers than whites, it does not follow that all Indians are equally expert. The best tribes in this respect are the Delawares, Co-manches and Apaches. The best trailer I ever saw, says a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, was an Apache -all the peculiar troubles that who was in the employ of the governbeset a woman. The only ment during the Crook campaign in the southwest. During that campdign guaranteed remedy for them a report came in that a band of Indian is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Pre- raiders had made its way down the scription. For women suffer-ing from any chronic "female" valley, almost under the very noses of the troops, and had robbed several ranches, killing the settlers. In order complaint " or weakness; for women who are run-down and overworked; for women expecting to become mothers, A troop of cavalry and a company of infantry were sent out after the raidand for mothers who are nursing and exhausted; at the change from girlhood to wo-thange from girlhood to womanhood ; and later, at the ready to start the scouts were ready to critical " change of life "- it follow a trail that was believed to be the one that led to the"rancheria" or vilis a medicine that safely and lage of the Indians. The trail was carecertainly builds up, strength- fully followed over the stony ground and through the underbrush, the scouts actually feeling their way with If it doesn't, if it even fails their hands. They seemed to experience no difficulty in tracing the trail with their fingers in the dark, but suddenly there was a halt. Word was sent back that another trail crossed the original, and it was a fresher track. A light was procured, and it was discovered that the cross trail was that of a bear, which had passed along after the Indians. The original trail was taken up again and followed steadily through the night, and the rancheria found and captured early in the morning.

The most remarkable bit of individual trailing that ever came to my knowledge was the finding of a lost child in the Gunnison valley. The little girl, four years old, wandered away from a cabin on Tumiche ereek, and was not missed for several hours. Hundreds of men in the valley turned out and searched all that day without finding a single sign of the girl. At last it was proposed to send for some Ute trailers at a camp about twenty miles away. The Indians did not get on the ground until twenty-four hours after the child was missing, and then the whole country had been so searched over that all hope of a trail was seemingly gone. Three Indians went to work, stimulated by the promise of a big reward, and before dark they found the child, unhurt, but almost dead from fright and exposure. They did their work in a most systematic manner, and covered the ground so thoroughly that they soon found the direction taken, and then began an ideal bit of trailing. Foot by foot they went over the ground, noting a broken twig here, a turned stone there, or a small impression in the damp earth. Sometimes they would go for a mile without finding a single thing to indicate that they were on the right trail, and then they would find a perfect impression of a little bare foot in a mud spot. The child was found eight miles from its home, and hid so close when the Indians approached her that they were almost at fault when they were at the end of the trail, and were compelled to double back several times be-

CARIBOU HABITS.

Vegetable Growths That Form Their Principal Food.

In summer the caribou feeds chiefly on common plants; it is especially fond of a broad-leafed grass, growing in wet places and around the barrens which are so numerous in various places in the interior of New Brunswick. In September, says Forest and Stream, you will find them on the barrens, feeding on the reindeer moss, of which they are very fond. They wil! dig for it when the snow is nearly or quite four feet deep. They have been seen at this work when only their backs were visible above the surface of the snow. When there is a crust on the snow, their operations at once cease, as they are no longer able to work. Then they betake them-selves to the black moss which hangs from the trees which skirt the barrens. This they will, however, never eat so long as they can get the genuine reindeer moss. Toward spring they ascend to the high lands and hardwood ridges, where they remain until the snow has left. The dark and white caribou are often seen together in droves.

Not one out of every ten female caribou has horns; when they do have them, they are much smaller than those of the bull. The horns of the female have, however, in general, many more branches than those of the bull, and they are much more regularly and finely formed. The cows carry their horns much longer than the bulls: they have been seen with their horns in the month of April. The old bulls shed theirs from the 10th to the last of November; they hardly ever carry them after the month of Novem-The young bulls shed theirs from ber. the 1st of December until the middle of February; the younger the animal the longer he retains his horns.

CURIOUS USE OF TOBACCO. People Who Smoke from the Age of Five

Years. All the Lushal smoke inveterately, ven children of five years of age, and heir children reek with rank tobacco molte, says a writer in Gentleman's dagazine. The men use short pipes nade of bamboo; the women use nore elaborate one, the bowl of elay communicating to a stem with a receptacle for water, through which the smoke passes to a long, slender mouthpiece of ornamental metal. The water in the receptacle, when fouled by tobacco juice, is emptied into small gourds stoppered with a plug of wood. These gourds are carried by the men in cotton bags with other necessary articles for traveling, and a mouthful of the contents is occasionally sipped and the mouth rinsed therewith, when it is spat out.

It is considered polite to offer a sip from this gourd to a friend, as a pinch of snuff was formerly in Europe. A friendly native will do so even to an Englishman, but the writer has never heard of anyone except Maj. Lewin who has had the courage to accept the compliment. That officer, when deputy commissioner of the Chittagong hill tracts, rendered himself thoroughly familiar with the habits of the border tribes, and is probably the best authority on all matters regarding those dwelling near the Chittagong frontier. The writer purchased and brought to England one of the small gourds which are here spoken of, the contents of which, with disastrous effects, were spilled over the papers con-tained in his dispatch box.
