THE CITY COUNCIL.

Considering the City Marshal's Report, Claimed to be Unsatisfactory.

An adjourned meeting of the council was held Saturday night at 8 o'clock, to consider the report of the marshal for impounding stock for March and April, and any other business that might come up before the meeting.

The report of the marshal was read and referred to the judiciary committee to report at the next meeting. The report shows the selling of a steer for $11, and $7.50 expenses on same, besides the fees, amounting to nearly the sum. Among the expenses was included $125 for laming a horse.

The bill of James H. Blakeney for street work, amounting to $46.75, was ordered paid.

The bill of Saltmarsh & Co. was referred back for dates, and to be properly vouched for.

It was ordered that the Electric Light Co. remove the pole by St. Mary's academy, as it was rotten and dangerous.

In regard to a dangerous pool of water near Mr. Beezley's residence, it was ordered that the committee on streets and public property look into the matter, to see if the surplus water could not be drained off into the sewer on Fulton street.

On motion, the marshal was instructed to be present at a meeting held Monday, April 7th, at 2 o'clock p. m., and in his regular report and to give an explanation and show cause why the marshal's duties had not been attended to. Adjourned.

The council met today at about 2:30 o'clock to consider the business mapped out for it Saturday night. The full council and the marshal were present.

The call was read and the mayor called upon the marshal to show cause, etc., as stated. That officer asked for a more specific question, and said he was ready to explain any part of his impounding report, and as for his regular report it agreed perfectly with the recorder's in regard to police business.

The mayor stated that he exceeded his duties in paying feed bills, etc., out of the cash received from sale of the steer. A look into the ordinances occupied some fifteen minutes of time, with the result that the marshal was justified in paying out the amounts in question.

Mr. Hudson said that in relation to the steer sold, the marshal exceeded his authority in going out of the city limits for it, and that consequently it was a matter with which the city had nothing to do, that it was a matter between the marshal and Mr. Harmon to settle. He then charged that the marshal had disregarded the request of the council by not making a proper report. He also charged that he had influenced prisoners not to work for the street commissioner, and inquired of the marshal if such was the case. The marshal asked for proof that he had done so and subsequently denied it. Mr. Hudson also charged that he had made threats of violence against the council and again asked if it were true. The marshal again asked for proof of the charge, but did not deny it. He was pressed by Mr. Crowe for a plea one way or the other, but this the marshal would not make.

At this point the reporter left, as the hour was late.

SCHEFFLER'S CONTINGENT.

They Are Passing Through The Dalles in Companies.

Companies H and E, of the Portland Industrial army, were the first to arrive in The Dalles on their trip to Washington, with a few stragglers from other companies, under the apparent leadership of Thomas Collehan, the third staff officer of the battalion. When these men first arrived they requested the town authorities to furnish them provisions, saying there would be no more demands of the kind. The mayor and county judge issued the food requested, the city and county to share the expense equally.

Yesterday afternoon Co. M, consisting of 40 more men, arrived under Capt. Dan O'Drain and are yet in the city. They are camped under the brewery grade hill, and beyond them are camped the stragglers from other companies, as before mentioned, under Officer Collehan.

Provisions for all were arranged for dinner. Companies H and E left about 7 o'clock this morning for the east, boarding a freight train.

Mr. Collehan was seen by a CHRONICLE reporter this morning. He charges Col. Scheffler with deceiving the men and misappropriating funds belonging to the army. He says that collections were taken up in Portland sufficient to send all the men to Kansas City, besides furnishing each captain $100 and supplying four days' rations. In the council held at Portland Scheffler made a speech favoring the plan of moving the companies out singly, while Collehan argued that the whole army should proceed in a body and thus preserve their autonomy—that they would become scattered, and in that way very few of the whole would reach Washington City. Under the plan of Col. Scheffler, which prevailed, companies H and E drew numbers from the hat for being first out. Mr. Collehan said they supposed their fare was arranged for and they would have no trouble, but on reaching The Dalles were put off by the train men. Here is where Collehan charges Scheffler with deceit and not using the money he is supposed to have for the use intended.

Capt. O'Drain of Co. M was next interviewed. He takes an opposite view from Collehan, and has implicit confidence in Scheffler, saying that he is now under his instructions and will obey them. He holds Collehan in great contempt, saying he wants to run things his own way. The company was taking things easy at the time, and were lying around on blankets sleeping. For the most part they wear good clothes and seem like very respectable men. O'Drain said his company would leave on the next train. Nine more companies are to follow from Portland—in all about 500 men.

Collehan stated that the chief demands of the army were the free coinage of silver on a ratio of 16 to 1, no more appropriations of money for national banks or railroads, government ownership of the railroads, and the abrogation of the naturalization law, prohibiting any more immigrants from coming to the country. Though disaffected with Col. Scheffler, he is a great enthusiast as to the army, and looks for blood to flow in quantities that will please the most sanguine before very long. He says that thousands are moving to Washington in small squads, of which the people generally take no note, and when they are finally massed they will be an invincible army. He says he finds no fault with the government or the flag. They are all right, but he wants some of the leaders to be removed. Chief of these is President Cleveland, who, he says, favors the money power and the rich.

Collehan intended to leave for Portland on the first train to find out why Scheffler was not doing as he agreed. He charges him with lying to the men and not using the funds for the purpose intended.
