NEGROES IN BARBADOES. They Die Rapidly of Consumption-Europeans Safe From the Disease.

In Barbadoes the chief enemy of the black race is consumption, of which many of them die, though it is practically unknown there among Europeans. The cause is simply that all negroes, without exception, hermetically seal up their huts at night, partly from fear of mysterious ghosts or "duppies," partly to keep out mosquitoes, and partly again because they wish to keep out cold. For, strange as it may appear, the naturalized West Indian negro shivers in a temperature of seventy-four degrees, and, on the rare occasions in winter when the thermometer falls to seventy degrees, he is blue with cold and almost incapacitated for work. No doubt he is warm enough in his hut at night, with every shutter closed and every chink and crapny stuffed with rags, but nature avenges herself for this exclusion of her purifying oxygen by colds and coughs. The negro has quack remedies and balsams by the dozen for these, but All The Year Round says they do not save him from the tubercle that soon forms in his lungs and eats his life away.

After all, he is a little missed; he has had a short life and pleasant one. His relatives will feel a pride in covering themselves with crape, of color almost as black as their own complexions, for crape is "de rigueur" among the negresses of Barbadoes. He will probably leave after him six or seven children, mostly illegitimate, since the black ladies have strong objections to the bond of matrimony. But here the question of pounds, shillings and pence does not intrude itself as it does at home. It costs so little to bring up a black baby that there is really no reason whatever for its parents to consider its future. When it grows up, an hour's work or so a day will keep it in food and clothes. So, in the streets of Bridgetown, the happy little black imps swarm like flies, and the island has the densest population per square mile of any place in the known world-that is, if what they say about Chinese statistics be true.

THE LAW AND THE DOG. Two Interesting Decisions of Questions in Blassachusette Courts.

If one interferes with two dogs that are fighting and is bitten by one of them he cannot recover damages unless he shows that he was in the exercise of due care. The full bench of the and even luxuries were introduced into every American home. A few days ago the workmen on the Great Northern system tied the road up from one end of

The three parties live in Dedham. The plaintiff was out riding, accomtrade wages, as compared to old free trade wages, were nearly 300 per cent greater. The lowest wages of the Great Northern men were $1.30 a day, re- one of the plaintiff's dogs. He went luced since the advent of a democratic up to the dogs and seized the defendant's dog, when it turned on him and bit his hand. The suit was brought under public statutes, chapter 102. section 93, and the plaintiff claimed he was not obliged to prove at the trial for protection and against competition that he was in the exercise of due care. The court holds that he was and says: "In the case at bar the plaintiff volun- Chapman Block. Second Street. tarily submitted himself to danger and we have no doubt that the ruling of the court below was right."

Another dog-bite case to call forth an expounding of the law is that of O. Boulester, of Rockville, J. S. SCHENCE, Jesse against Charles W. Parsons, of Walpole. The bite in this case was inflicted upon a horse, which died in consequence and the plaintiff such for his loss. The plaintiff's brother was driving an express wagon, drawn by a pair of horses, along a country road; and in the rear of this wagon was another horse attached to a single wagon. The defendant's dog ran out of his master's yard and bit the horse attached to the single vehicle.

The defendant contended it was negligence on the part of the plaintiff to lead a horse harnessed in a wagon behind as was this one, and thereupon the plaintiff requested the court to instruct the jury in substance as follows: "A man has a right to lead a horse in the way and manner described, and the mere fact that he was so leading a horse is not such evidence of negligence as would preclude the plaintiff from recovering in this action for the bite of the dog." The judge at the trial refused so to rule, and submitted the question to the jury whether the method of traveling adopted was negligent and was such as to induce an attack by the dog. The jury found for the defendant, and to the refusal of the court to rule as above the plaintiff excepted.

The full court sustains the plaintiff's exceptions and says: "We are of opinion that the ruling requested should have been given in substance. While the doctrine of contributing negligence has been often said to apply to an action on the public statutes, apter 102, section 93, and we have no doubt it does apply where the plaintiff incites or provokes a dog, and it may be in other cases, the doctrine has no application to the case at bar. The eading of a horse behind a wagon was simply a condition and not in any sense a contributing cause of the injury. * * * To hold that the question whether leading a horse behind a wagon should be submitted to the jury as evidence of negligence on the part of the plaintiff in inducing an attack by a dog, would render it necessary to submit to the jury the question wheth-er the color of the horse or of the wagon, or of the clothes of the driver might not have induced an attack. The the Flood," Mr. Howerth advances a law does not pay this respect to the

The most needful thing to be done at this time is to restore confidence. If the entire republican ticket is elected that end will have been attained.

Nobody has raised one word of protest against the invasion of this country within the last ten days by a foreign army 1,000 strong, and no wonder; the army is composed of pretty Irish girls who come to make war upon American bearts. It is said to have been the finest aggregation of feminine beauty ever landed in New York.

A woman speaking at a woman's suff-" rage meeting is quoted as saying: "A man goes slowly around a subject, while a woman jumps over." Well, that depends entirely on what the subject is. For instance, a man is not going very slowly around a pretty woman, if there is any chance to get real close to her quickly; and a woman iss't going to jump over a live mouse, unless there are walls in every other direction.

Wm. P. Lord, the able jurist, who now fills the office of chief justice of the supreme court of Oregon, is the republican nominee for governor of this state, and there is little doubt but he will be elected. Wm. P. Lord was born in Dover, Delaware, in 1839. After gradusting with high honors from a school at Fairfield, N. Y., he began the study of law, and his natural taste for his profession made him a most successful attorney. It was not juntil after the war, in which he participated, that he was admitted to the bar. In 1866 he became lieutenant in the 2d regiment U.S. artillery and served in California, Washington and Alaska. In 1868 he removed to Salem, practiced law for some years, became city attorney, state senator and since 1880 has been judge of the supreme court.

In free trade eras of the United States, as many people now living can attest from their memory, wages for ordinary labor averaged 50 cents a day, of mammoths and other large animals in the soil of Siberia. All over this great plain, wherever the ground is frozen hard, are found mammoths and other animals preserved very fresh, sc that the wolves and bears can feed upon their remains.

These mammoths have been found from the castern border clear to the Obi river. They have been found under conditions which make it certain that they could not have lived unless the surroundings and climate had, at the time they existed, been entirely different from the present conditions. The remains of the plants on which they feed are also found, and southern contemporary shells are discovered with the remains, pointing to climatic conditions which no longer exist.

Mr. Howorth believes that this plamate which has enabled the bodies of great beasts to be preserved intact as we find them. He says that unless these animals had been frozen immediately after they died, and remained destroyed them completely. It is known tions which Falconer declared to be absolutely incompatible with their mode of life.

One of the most singular volumes ex-tant is the manuscript diary of James II. It is preserved in the imperial library in Paris and is filled with reflections on the course he should have pur sued in order to retain the English throne.
