THE SANTIAM TEMPLE.

As a Mausoleum a Fake, But as a Natural Curiosity a Success.

The Salem Statesman gives us a sane and intelligible description of the reputed temple of the Santiam. It is located, it says, about 10 miles east of Melhama on the little north fork of the rushing, roaring Santiam river, by whose icy, clear waters its base is washed. The monument rises about 40 feet above the level of its rocky surroundings, and probably 80 feet above the river. It is of solid rock, pyramidal in shape, and its to this fact and the regularity of the formation of its layers that its construction is ascribed to man. It was stated that the several layers of stone were cemented closely together but this is not the case, as examination demonstrated. The temple is nothing more nor less than a natural formation, an upheaval or displacement of several solid strata of rock, and in the upheaval and by the subsequent action of the water and the elements and erosion, its mystical shape has been wrought. While its form is irregular and composed of irregularly shaped stones, it is still symmetrical. Some of the rocks are octagonal, while others have six faces, and still others five. On one side there are regular steps, at irregular intervals, and by these the ascent to the apex is easy, while on the other sides the walls are perpendicular, apparently built by the piling of one large boulder upon the other.

The entire structure is moss-grown and bears the marks of age, but recently the discoverers, believing their find to be a valuable one, have filed a mineral claim upon it and commenced the work of development. The side, consisting of steps, has been laid bare, but all endeavor to find an opening or a keystone has of course proved futile, for nature does not build that way. Efforts were at first made to drill into the stone, but as nobody could hope to accomplish anything by blowing off a few layers of the solid rock, no powder was wasted and the beauty of the smoother surface of the black granite mass is defaced by nothing more objectionable than a few drilled holes of shallow depth. As a temple, ancient ruins, tomb or pyramid "Temple Rock" is a fake, but as a valuable curiosity it is interesting and well worthy the effort that a visit to its secluded resting place entails.

DIED.
At Boyd, May 12th, of pneumonia, Sons Underhill, daughter of Mrs. Clara Underhill and James Underhill, deceased.
At Cascade Locks, on May 11th, Frank Henry McCary, aged 22 years.
A Strange Conflagration.
A street was literally set on fire at Bada-Pesth, Hungary, a short time ago. A glass carboy, filled with benzine, accidentally fell from the car in which it was being hauled. Of course, it broke, and the benzine ran over the street and through the slot into the conduit of the electric railroad. An electric car passed just at that time, a spark flew out between the trolley and the conductor in the conduit, and the benzine burst into a sheet of flame. The frightened passengers escaped somehow, and then everybody had to wait until the fire burned itself out.

"Enlisted for the War."

One of the most pleasing, taking plays ever presented to the people of The Dalles, outside of strong classical productions, will be given tomorrow evening at the opera house. A traveling company, having actors of equal merit, would advertise it as an all-star company, for each character is well sustained, and the plot is of profound interest. "Enlisted for the War" is one of the higher class dramas, and gives ample scope for good playing. It is needless to say that the demands are fully met. While the play is first-class in every regard, the admission price is low, and we confidently predict a full house. The cast is as follows:
Robert Trueworth, a soldier... G. D. Snowden
Wilder Howell, guardian of Gally... H. H. Lonsdale
Hosen Jenks, Auctioneer... M. T. Nolan
Hiram Jenks, "A Mere Boy"... J. Hampshire
Pimp, Colored... N. J. Sennott
General Grant... H. H. Riddell
Lieutenant-Colonel Boxer... Gus Bonn
Gayle Gifford, an Heiress... Rosa D. Mitchell
Mrs. Trueworth, Rob's mother... Mrs. G. Blakeley
Mattie Trueworth... Elizabeth Fitzgerald

Observation Time Service.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. will establish in The Dalles about July 1st the observatory time service. This is a service which is in operation in all the larger cities throughout the country and is a great convenience to jewelers and all who value absolutely correct time. The telegraph company, in connection with their service, furnishes an electric self-winding clock, which is connected by a time wire with the local office and transmits time every day at noon from the Lick observatory. This is the official standard time, regulated by observatory signals and absolutely perfect. They are self-winding and self-setting and are in every way a unique contrivance. The establishment of this service will give the people uniform time and place The Dalles abreast of the times.
