THE MARKETS.

Trade Quiet—Freighting Begun and Wool Buyers Increasing.

FRIDAY, May 18.—The condition of trade is rather quiet for the season, although there is a tendency to activity, some lines showing an improvement.

Interior freighting has begun, and with it receipts of wool have been quite liberal at the warehouses. We have heard of but three sales of wool during the season, and one was on private terms.

The produce market continues very quiet. All kinds of products are in great supply, especially potatoes and butter.

In the egg and poultry line, eggs are retailed at 10 cents per dozen, which are bought at 8 to 10 cents by dealers.

Coming Events.

Messrs. C. L. Gilbert and John Mitchell will speak at Endersby Saturday night.

There will be a republican picnic at Antelope Saturday. Messrs. A. A. Jayne, T. R. Coon and M. P. Ieenberg left this morning to participate and may be depended upon to deliver themselves of some good republican doctrine.

Will Soon Begin Work.

Mr. W. H. Shearer is in the city today. In conversation with him he says he shall go at once to the Currant creek section and will begin work on the proposed new road to Antelope not later than Tuesday next, and will push it to completion with all the energy he can bring to bear.

AN EQUITABLE ARRANGEMENT.

He Bore an Envied Name, While She Possessed Coveted Riches.

The lady was a widow and rich—very rich—as the French novelist says, richissime. The gentleman was a widower, past sixty; extremely, even ridiculously, poor, and the last of a most noble and most historical house.

Whichever side they took, it always ended in their being captured and decapitated for high treason, or else killed in battle. From father to son, from generation to generation, for long centuries none of them ever went out of the world from an inglorious feather bed; it was always from the grassy field of honor or from a scaffold.

The lady, besides being a widow and richissime, was of ignoble origin, and her late husband had made his money in trade. Reflection upon this point made her unhappy. She was so rich that she thought she ought also to be noble, just to correspond. It is a common confusion of thought. She desired, above all things, to connect her riches with an ancient name, and she heard of this old nobleman, and she made a proposition to him. "Marry me," she said. "Give me that right to use your name. In return I will give you as handsome an annuity as you can possibly desire. You shall have the means of living as you please, and of obtaining all that you can desire. I will not ask you to live in my house. You shall live where you please. I will only ask that, for appearance sake, you will take your place at my dinners, and that you will show up as the lord of the house, at my receptions."

'Twas arranged in this sense. The lady took and furnished for herself a great hotel, writes Walter Besant in London Queen. She had the rooms decorated in honor of this and that illustrious ancestor. The arms of the house were everywhere; the portraits, busts and statues of the house were in all the rooms; the pictures represented scenes and episodes in the history of the house. The servants wore the ancient livery, the well-known livery of the house.

The hotel became the museum of the house, and at dinners and on reception nights the duke himself was always present, grave, dignified and stately, with the look of one who had stepped out of a picture frame five hundred years old, and had put on the clothes of the nineteenth century, but not its manners. When madame, the duchess, was not at home he lived in his own chambers, at the club, after his own fashion. An excellent bargain, was it not, and one that seems perfectly fair to both parties.

In at the Finish.

Crossing a field one day President Lincoln, it is said, was pursued by an angry bull. He made for the fence, says Life's Calendar, but soon discovered that the bull was overtaking him. He then began to run around a hay stack in the field and the bull pursued him, but in making the short circles around the stack Lincoln was the faster, and instead of the bull catching him, he caught the bull and grabbed him by the tail. It was a firm grip and a controlling one. He began to kick the bull, and the bull bellowed with agony and dashed across the field, Lincoln hanging to his tail and kicking him at every jump, and as they flew along Lincoln yelled at the bull: "Darn you, who began this fight?"
