JUNE JUNGLINGS.

Leaves From the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

The wire king will be at Pease & Mays tomorrow only.

The Spokane is again rising, but slowly.

The grand jury today indicted Dan Maloney and Snelling.

Wanted, by a lady a position as clerk in store. Inquire at this office.

The grand jury expects to conclude its labors either tonight or in the morning.

A few gentlemen may secure room and board with a private family by applying at this office.

Charley Hall lost one of his fish-wheels yesterday. It is lodged at the old Regulator wharf.

The Regulator will land at the bluff this side of the old Laughlin farm residence, above the brick yard.

D. C. Herrin is taking a series of photographs of high water scenes, with some of our prominent citizens fairly in it.

By common consent, owing to high water and everybody being moved, collection day has been postponed until Monday.

As we go to press Orion Kinnersly is fishing in the street in front of his drug store. He does not seem to be catching enough to lower the river.

A telephone message from Arlington at 9:30 this morning says the Snake has not risen in the past 24 hours at Lewiston. This tallies with the message from that point yesterday and indicates the Snake has reached its flood and will go down. It is to be hoped that it will recede rapidly enough to make room for the increasing volume of the Columbia.

Many of our people having nothing else to do are catching drift wood and storing it up for winter. As we write several big poles that have drifted from the upper regions are being chopped into pieces that can be handled, in the street in front of our window. It is quite probable some of this drift came in from British Columbia, without paying the customs duties.

A statement has been circulated to the effect that Capt. A. S. Blowers, republican candidate for county commissioner, will not carry his precinct. This is the veriest nonsense. Captain Blowers will not only get his party vote, but he will also receive one-half of the democratic vote of that precinct. He will have not less than 100 majority in Hood River besides.

Our old townsman Mr. Drews came up on the Regulator Wednesday. He has been developing a coal prospect on the Clackamas, but was driven out by the high water. He thinks he has a down-hill haul on the world, and we hope he has, but he should remember that man proposes, God disposes, or as the French put it: "Man appointe, God disappoints."

Those of our subscribers who get their paper delivered by carrier, and who do not get it, are requested to let us know of the fact, and also their new places of abode. In the numerous changes hurriedly made, the carriers naturally make many mistakes, but this being a part of the flood experience, we hope it will be taken like all other inconveniences, as good naturedly as possible.

A dispatch from Wenatchie, a point on the Columbia 130 miles above the mouth of the Snake, received this morning, says the river at that point has been on a standstill for two days, but another rise was expected. At the same time a dispatch from Lewiston says the Snake is beginning to rise. This should give us a day or so with the water at a standstill, commencing tonight.

Mr. Judd Fish invites all those visiting the Umatilla House, especially the ladies, to register, that in the future the hotel records may be a souvenir of the high water we did not want. Already the register contains the names of many of the handsomest ladies in The Dalles, and therefore Oregon, and consequently the world, and when all The Dalles ladies put down their names it will be a record indeed.

It is quite probable the Hood River county bridge has gone out ere this. Wednesday morning the approaches were afloat, and the bridge like some of our democratic friends was bobbing on the waves, uncertain what was to become of it. A telephone message received just as we reached the preceding period tells us the bridge is all afloat but secured with ropes so that it cannot float away. There is no current and it may be saved.

Judge Condon has some handsome young elms growing in front of his residence, although of rather slow growth, the elm is one of the most beautiful of trees, and on this coast one of the rarest. Mr. Condon had a very handsome big fellow brought from Hartford, (if we remember rightly) but it was destroyed in the fire. While up that way this morning the judge asked us to come in and examine his handsome roses, which having done we came away with a beautiful bouquet which now is mingling its perfume with that of our pipe in the editorial sanctum.

The Flood at the Locks.

Mr. Balfe Johnson, who visited Cascade Locks yesterday gives a graphic account of the situation there.

The bulkhead which keeps the Columbia out of the upper end of the lock has been in danger of going out for several days, but a gallant fight has been made and is being made to save it. A dam has been built across from the railroad track to the bulkhead, the bulkhead itself raised, and all that human efforts could accomplish or ingenuity suggest has been done. Superintendent Borie, of the U. P., generously donated 1,000 sacks, which are filled with sand and ready to be dropped into any crevasse that may occur. The water yesterday when Mr. Johnson left was well up to the top of the bulkhead, and those who were protecting it stated that six inches higher water would destroy it. Should it go out, it will, quite likely, destroy all the riprap work and possibly destroy the entire works, entailing a loss of over a million dollars.

The Union Pacific is also in bad shape in that vicinity. Just below the mouth of the canal, where the current strikes the bank alongside of the railroad, the sliding mountain is again moving, resembling a huge glacier. Immense masses of the bluff are continually falling into the river, while the big fir trees as they tumble over the bank, hang for a little while top downwards, reaching half way down the face of the bluff, and then go sliding and plunging into the wild whirlpools of the raging floods below. For a quarter of a mile the river has cut into the mountain, and the mountain crushed into the river, until the bluff where the railroad formerly ran now presents a face three hundred feet in height. The U. P. track is not alone gone, but its right-of-way has gone with it. The mountain is moving down so rapidly that the old Dalles and Sandy wagon road is now almost ready to topple over into the Columbia.

The telephone line had been moved down until the poles were within a few feet of the bank, and as communication with Portland over the telephone ceased last night, it is reasonably certain that the poles went down the bank some time during the night. Until this landslide stops it will be impossible for the U. P. to lay tracks over or around it. And when it will stop no man can conjecture.

Water Probabilities.

The water question is reduced to a matter of guessing; but from all reliable reports received, we fail to yet see any bow of promise. The following is the substance of reliable dispatches received today: At Lewiston, on the Snake, the river had been at a standstill for forty-eight hours, ending at 6 o'clock this morning, at which time it began to rise. At Wenatchie, on the Columbia, 130 miles above the mouth of the Snake, a dispatch this morning says: "The Columbia has been at a standstill for forty-eight hours, but the weather is extremely warm and a further rise is anticipated." Yet another dispatch says the Spokane is again rising. From all of which we conclude that a check should occur tonight, last from thirty-six to forty-eight hours, after which a still further rise must be expected. From all points the snowfall is reported as unusually heavy, and the high water limit is simply a question of weather conditions, which so far seem to be perfect for an overwhelming rush of water. We confess to a feeling of dread of
