"outlook is favorable." The slight rise at The Dalles amounts to 9 inches a day the outlook is indeed favorable for a very much larger flood when a lake 60 miles long and 20 wide rises 4 inches in 12 hours, it is easily seen that the other put the water here many feet above its valley of considerale magnitude, in present stage. The water in Portland is now 29.1 and it is a safe prediction that it will be from 7 to 10 feet higher. If certainly of a cheerful and hopeful disposition.

SUMMER RESORT FOR DUGS.

Board Costs Four Dellars a Month and the Place Is Kept by a Woman.

Down on Long Island is a summer re sort for dogs. It is a large, old-fash-ioned farm-house, where a few summer boarders are taken to supplement the dogs. The hostess is a woman of fam-ily, but not of fortune, a lover of dogs. The dogs know their friend, and, according to the New York Sun, when she comes up to town after a year of absence they make the most extraordinary manifestations of affection, and will leave the most doting mistresses after a winter of devotion to go with her. She has now about twelve dog boarders. They are chiefly big dogs, kept without the range of the dwelling house. The only parlor boarder is a fox terrier, who does not allow any other dog to set foot on the piazza. The expense of boarding a small dog out of town is four dollars good income on scarcely any outlay, as the dogs, being allowed to run at large, are much less fastidious in the choice of food than in town. Their care is United States. Between January 1, scarcely more of a consideration. They 1831, and November 1, 1864, one thoufind their own diversion, take their conicines in the green things that grow. The expense of a dog in town is a con-sideration. A ported of dog him town is a constitutional all day long, do their own sideration. A pound of dog biscuit will not last a fox terrier over three days. This must be well pounded and moistened with gravy. Twice a week it must have liver "properly prepared. Once certainly, and usually twice a week, it is bathed, it must have medicinal soaps, and the tyranny which its care in the matter of exercise exacts makes one sigh to estimate. In return for this devotion the dog is much happier in the country, where it has none. AN ELECTRIC TRICYCLE.

It Is Due to the Genius of an Indianian and Is Simple. An enterprising electrician in Indiana lately constructed an electrical tricycle, the description of which brought letters of inquiry from all parts of the country. The machine was worked by storage batteries under the seat, and which gave enough current for an eight hours' run. Whether the machine turned out to be impracticable in the form then adopted, or whether its inventor hesitated to undertake its commercial exploitation, is not recorded, but the public, at all events, has heard no more of the Indiana machine. Another inventor, however, is ambitious to be the first to claim the invention of a commercially practicable electric tricycle, and has patented a machine which relies for motive power also on the storage battery.

The singular point in its construction, however, is that the storage batteries are carried around the circumference of the wheel, preferably close to the tire, and there can be any number of cells, according to the power required. It is claimed that in this way the weight of the storage batteries is more equally distributed, and in such a manner as to cause the minimum interference with the efficient running of the machine, while at the same time affording a simple and easy method of construction. The cells are connected by wires to insulated sleeves that carry the current to a motor in the axle of the wheel, which gives the motive power to the machine.

TYPHUS FEVER.

Not Invariably Fatal But Always Very Dangerous.

The word typhus-literally smoke refers to the heavy stupor that characterizes this fever. Formerly the name was used to include also what is now known as typhoid, which was then regarded as only a milder form of typhus. The two diseases are wholly distinct, notwithstanding some resemblance in certain of the symptoms, says the Youth's Companion. Typhus fever prevailed extensively during the sixteenth century in Itaiy, France and England. In England cheriffs, judges and jurymen took the infection from prisoners brought before them and on account of the prevalence of the disease in jails it came to be known as jail fever. Other names have been camp fever, spotted fever, putrid fever and ship fever. In England and a month. This is clear gain, and, with a sufficient number of dogs, produces a great severity within the last two hun-dr d years.

This stream flows toward a large mountain on the east. This discovery was made in a country which has until recently been explored but little, but in their search for claims a party entered the valley containing the lake. The place interested them and they began to inspect it closely. They followed the stream flowing from the lake to the mountain, where it disappeared by entering a hole under-ground. It did not decrease gradually as if seeping into the ground, but flowed into the hole in a strong, bold stream. They searched long and carefully to find where the stream again came, to the surface, but could find no further trace
