JUNE JUNGLINGS.

Leaves From the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

The river passed the 1876 mark on its way down this morning.

An attempt will be made today to bring the Baker up to the Locks.

The Congregational church will hold their prayer meeting as usual this (Thursday) evening at 7:45.

Don't forget the mass meeting at the courthouse this evening, at which candidates for the city offices will be elected.

Our regular weekly issue will be published Saturday. Advertisements should be left for it by noon tomorrow at the latest.

Twenty-two buildings were carried away from Grant by the flood. The machinery of the distillery was all saved except the worm and vat.

Sinnot & Fish have a force of men at work removing the false floors and staging from the Umatilla house, and cleaning up such portions of the walls as can be reached.

Commodore Condon had the Inland Star hauled out for repairs yesterday, getting her back into the water last evening. He is also having a small boat built for use in connection with her.

Karpolis, the Indian shot by Hawthorns, died from the effects of his wounds. Hawthorne was still alive Tuesday night, and, our informant says, may recover. Nothing further has been heard of Rowe.

Mr. Arntzen, special allotment agent, is in the city and will remain for some time. He is assisting the Indians in getting the lands to which they are entitled from the government, and is representing the interior department.

Mr. Jess Crandall has been employed by the directors of the Hood River school district to make the plans and specifications for the school house to be built there this summer. The building furnished will cost between $8000 and $10,000.

Hood River is not having trouble in shipping her berries, notwithstanding the fact that we so asserted yesterday. Our informant yesterday was a Hood River man and he told us the berries were being brought back from the Cascades and given away. The high water did not flood Hood River, so this particular citizen of that charming summer resort, must have had his fund of truth washed away while here. An old proverb states that "Truth lies at the bottom of a well." It seems to lie just as well anywhere in the water. About 400 crates of luscious berries were sent from the town named to Portland by Regulator this morning.

The Fossil Journal says that in putting false floors in the Umatilla house Col. Sinnott placed the floor on the backs of salmon which came in through the windows and volunteered their services for the purpose, as a fitting return for all the Col. has done for their family.

Paying for Dead Horses.

Mr. S. B. Adams has had several Indians at work all day burying a horse. The animal was decidedly dead, and its location could easily be determined without the aid of one's eyes. It was lying in the outer enclosure of the Odd Fellow's cemetery and had evidently been killed where it was found. The carcass was covered with brush and trash but for what purpose is as much of a mystery as the killing of the animal. Mr. Adams tells us it will cost $20 to bury the deceased, which is four times what it was worth when alive.

Concerning Collection Day.

A notice was handed in to us yesterday stating that the merchants had agreed upon the 15th as collection day. It seems that this was not the understanding at all, and that most of the merchants will not collect; at least such is the information we receive today. Since the Umatilla house "floated away" we have lost confidence in every report, statement or rumor, and so print the above for what it is worth; the very indefinite assertion "They say."

The Weather and River.

At Riparia the Snake fell .9 of a foot for the twenty-four hours ending at 8 o'clock this morning, and at Umatilla .7 of a foot. The weather is cool, but warmer is indicated. At Calgary the temperature this morning was 42 deg., at Helena 46, at Spokane 48, at Walla Walla 60 and at Baker City 40. The river will continue to fall for at least six days, even should warm weather set in. The river here at 4 o'clock stood at 51.09.

And He a Preacher!

Here is another high water story given to the Fossil Journal: "Rev. Rigby brings word that the Union Pacific succeeded in bringing their steamer Harvest Queen up over the rapids at the Cascades, and are at last in a position to carry the mail between The Dalles and Portland.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Three of a Kind.

It is natural for man to smile, ye verily! at times to laugh at the lighter misfortunes of others, hence it is proper to put in print the minor woes, of such as are afflicted with them; so here is three of a kind, and a bad kind too. Andy Osborne made the first break just after dinner yesterday. In walking over the staging in the Umatilla house, he stepped on a board that had retired from business and when he went back foremost into four feet of water he was, to draw it mildly, surprised. Soon after this our old friend Jack Donohue visited his building on First street. After seeing as much mud as he cared to look at at once, he stepped out of the door on to the doorstep. Finding this solid he stepped down on to the submerged sidewalk, and as it wasn't there, Jack went on down into the basement, leaving his hat only to mark the spot where he disappeared. The third man was Tony Fisher. He met his Waterloo at Mr. McInerney's corner, on his way home after barberizing Ed. Martin. The only way of getting out of the upper story of that building is to come down the electric light pole at the corner. That was the route Fisher took, a fine one for scenery but not for safety. When he got to the last iron foot rest, he leaped lightly into the boat awaiting him. As his foot left the iron the bottom of his trousers leg wasn't ready, and so he held on. As a mighty fir yielding to the woodman's ax sweeps grandly to the earth, so his head described a half circle, and with a dull sickening thud disappeared beneath the surface of the water. Seeing nothing further was to be accomplished by holding on, the pants let go sending the feet down after the head. The only dry spot on any of the three was on the fellows that helped pull them out.

A Tedious Trip.

Mrs. A. S. Macallister and Mr. F. Peaslee arrived here Tuesday from the Macallister ranch on the John Day, bringing with them their mother, Mrs. Peaslee, who has been seriously ill for some time. The distance is seventy-two miles, and the trip occupied seventeen days. Mrs. Macallister first started with her mother in a buggy, but before going far found the streams so swollen as to make the trip dangerous. Coming up the creek soon after they had left home they found a cloudburst had occurred above them and a vast volume of water was coming down. Mrs. Peaslee was placed on top of a load of wool and Mrs. Macallister beside her, and thus the creek was crossed. This was done at three different crossings. The teamsters brought the ladies buggy team over, and they came on to Cold Camp. There they remained until a covered hack was sent out to them by Dr. Suddall. The trip was an exceedingly tedious one; first one thing and then another, but principally washouts, delaying them. They are at their old home, corner of Fourth and Laughlin.

Losses by the Flood.

The heaviest losers by the flood in the city, are the Union Pacific, Jos. T. Peters, Sinnott & Fish and Moody's warehouse. The Union Pacific has lost heavily in damage to the shops and machinery, and among other items, a hundred or more tons of wheat left near the Wasco warehouse. Sinnott & Fish lose not only by the expense they have been put to to keep their business running, but in the great amount of painting and papering required to put the lower story of the Umatilla in shape. Jos. T. Peters has lost heavily. Between First and Second streets is a medley of rustic, ceiling, dressed stuff, redwood shingles and rough lumber, all covered with sediment and ooze. His loss will probably reach $2500 or $3000. At Moody's warehouse it is hard to estimate the damage. An immense amount of wool is in storage, and though it was moved some of it got wet. This portion of it has been taken from the sacks and spread out to dry. August Buchler being above high water kept his brewery running all the time. The Wasco warehouse came through without loss. It stands high, and as the water advanced the big stock of wool was hastily sent to the upper floors, and the only loss was the expense of moving. Damage to sidewalks, building of trestles, loss of business and the expense of moving and of re-painting and re-papering constitutes the measure of damages for most of the town.

Cleaning Up.

The scraper and the scrubbing brush, broom and shovel, hose and hydrant, and every other article or combination that will remove dirt, are being vigorously used in getting buildings again in condition to occupy. The flood has been strictly impartial in distributing its favors, and each and every house in the flooded district received its full share of what is called, in the poetic language of '49, slumgullion. This word will require no explanation for such of our readers as are engaged in wrestling with the stuff, and those who desire to understand its exact meaning can get the desired information by helping their neighbors who have been in the swim.

A Trick of the Storm.

That Sherar cloud-bust cut some very queer capers. The latest story concerning it is that a teamster had just fed his horses, before the storm commenced, using nose bags for the purpose. As the rain began to fall he took shelter a short distance away. The rain came in torrents and in a few moments he saw his four horses begin to struggle. Two of them managed to get their nose bags off, but the others could not do so and soon fell. Running to them, he found the nose bags had become filled with water, and that his horses were drowning. Had the owner not been where he could watch them, they would have drowned without being in the water.

PERSONAL MENTION.
