JUNE JUNGLINGS.

Leaves From the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

The Oregon pioneers meet in Portland today.

Charley Stones fishwheel caught 3000 pounds of bluebacks yesterday.

The Umatilla house floors are out of the water, but are far from dry.

The water this morning stood at exactly 51 feet above low water mark.

The prize hat will be awarded to the winner at Mrs. LaBallister's tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

Messrs. Farley & Frank have moved their stock of harness and saddlery back into their old place.

There is but little trash and wreckage on First street. The current was strong enough to carry away all floatable stuff and the deposit of sediment was not so heavy. There is plenty of the latter in the houses along that thoroughfare, to satisfy anyone.

Cards have been received here announcing the marriage of Mr. Herbert Glasier, formerly of The Dalles, to Miss Carrie Hefty, the wedding taking place at Oakland, Calif., June 7th. The groom has a large circle of friends here whose best wishes go with him on his matrimonial voyage.

Frank Swift yesterday evening, having finished loading his wagons started up the grade with them, intending to get off early this morning for home. On the way up the grade a wheel dropped in a rut and he was thrown off. One wheel of the wagon passed over his arm, breaking it above the elbow.

Walter Rowe came in presumably some time last night, and this morning accompanied by his father, went down to the sheriff's office and surrendered himself into his custody. Mays, Huntington & Wilson have been retained by his father to defend him, and under their advice he will say nothing concerning his case, until the proper time comes.

Quite a number of horses that have been in training at the track here, were taken down to Portland on the Regulator this morning. Among them were Strickland's horse, "Tommy," McInerney's, "Rockland Boy," Gilmore's, "Jim Crow," and a horse belonging to Ferris. Andy Allen took down a two-year-old and also Phil Brogan's "Deschutes." The horses will be sent up to Salem to take part in the races beginning there on the 23d.

The citizens of the First ward will meet in the old courthouse this evening for the purpose of nominating a councilman to succeed T. A. Hudson and a water commissioner to succeed Mr. Dunn. In the Second ward the meeting will be held in the courthouse, and a councilman will be nominated to succeed L. E. Crowe and water commissioner to succeed H. C. Nielsen.

Douglas Dufur has certainly made an excellent record, and without any disparagement of the very excellent candidates, we can say that the convention made a first-class selection. His books are kept as neat as a pin and in a systematic manner. At a glance the warrants issued, warrants paid and balances can be found; and all other records are kept in a careful manner, written in a plain legible hand. Giving him the place for the second time was the reward of merit.

City Officers Nominated.

The mass meeting for the purpose of nominating candidates for the city offices, was held in the courthouse last night. At 8:30 Mayor Kreft called the meeting to order, stated its objects and declared the first business to be the election of a chairman. Hon. J. I. Story was elected by acclamation, and taking the chair at once proceeded to business. Messrs. Menefee, Crandall, Bayard and Stephens one after the other declined to serve as secretary, and then N. H. Gates performed his duty as a good citizen by accepting the thankless task, as did J. M. Huntington who was elected assistant secretary. On motion the chair appointed two tellers, C. J. Crandall and J. B. Crossen. On motion the manner of voting was adopted, the voters to pass around the table, depositing their ballots as they passed the tellers.

Nominations for mayor being in order, Mayor Kreft, in a few well chosen words, nominated Mr. Virgil Bolton. Mr. Garretson moved that nominations close and that the secretary be instructed to cast the vote of the meeting. This was amended and Mr. Bolton was nominated by acclamation.

For recorder Mr. Story nominated N. H. Gates, Mr. Bayard nominated Douglas Dufur, Mr. Jeles nominated Joel Koontz and Mr. J. M. Huntington F. H. Dietzel. On the first ballot the vote was as follows: Dufur 119, Gates 47, Koontz 72, Dietzel 19. Mr. Dietzel withdrew and on the second ballot Dufur received 135, Gates 46, Koontz 80, necessary to a choice 132. Mr. Dufur was declared elected.

The following were named for marshal: James H. Blakeney, John Crate, W. H. Butts, Sam. J. Klein, Theodore Cartwright and Chris Bills. Four ballots were taken before the matter was decided Cartwright and Butts withdrawing after first ballot. Blakeney 112, Bills 35, Crate 38, Klein 4. I. I. Burget was nominated for treasurer by acclamation, and the meeting adjourned.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.

THE KILLING OF KARPOLIS.

A Clear and Concise Account of the Old Warrior's Death.

SINEMASHO, June 12, 1894.

Special Correspondence CHRONICLE.

The following is a more definite account of the affray between Karpolis and the outlaw, Hawthorne, which took place on upper Quartz creek, about ten miles west of this place, Sunday morning:

Karpolis, together with his assistants, Thompson and old man Charley, tracked the outlaws, Hawthorne and Rowe, to their camp on the above-named stream, just above its confluence with Beaver creek. Sunday morning, while the men were yet sleeping, the Indians tied their horses near by in the timber and crept up to the camp. They were led by Karpolis, who sought to surprise the robbers and secure them without firing a shot. Karpolis told Watchkath, or Charley, to go and see if the white men's horses, which were not far away, tallied with the description of those belonging to Hawthorne and Rowe. He next instructed the younger Indian, Thompson, to creep up to the tent and ascertain how many men there were, and if it was safe to attempt securing their arms. Thompson did so and soon signaled to Karpolis that there were two men in the tent and that they were asleep. Karpolis immediately joined Thompson, having a Winchester and side arms with him. He saw that the men were fast asleep, and attempted to reach over and get one of the outlaw's guns, for both had their rifles and side-arms close beside them. He was unable to reach far enough, so Thompson crept around and took one of the belts with three revolvers, but, in doing so, slightly touched Rowe, who turned over, awakening Hawthorne. The latter instantly grasped his Winchester, and Karpolis told Thompson to get out, for the white men would shoot. Karpolis, being a little behind, was shot as he attempted to get away, running to the right. Hawthorne fired a second time from the door of the tent, again hitting Karpolis, who, as the former turned toward Thompson on the left, fired and wounded Hawthorne in the back. The robber yelled with pain and sprang back into the tent. Old man Charley, returning at once, upon hearing the first shot, witnessed the last two shots and the retreat of Hawthorne. Karpolis secreted himself in the brush and the other two Indians, neither of whom were armed, got out of harm's way. Rowe ran in the horses, saddled, bridled, and packed up the whole outfit and helped his wounded companion to mount. They rode off, passing within a few feet of the poor old scout as they did so.

Then Thompson started for Sinemascho to get help, while Watchkath remained with Karpolis. But Hawthorne, having lost a great deal of blood, soon found that he could not escape, so he told Rowe to go on alone, while he turned and succeeded in reaching an Indian camp at Coyote Springs, about three miles nearer this point. Karpolis also tried to ride in, but was unable to do so.

Superintendent Hertzog, the industrial teacher, Peter Klama and Mr. Ackey, together with Deputy Surveyor Campbell's party, reached Coyote Springs about the middle of the afternoon, when they found Hawthorne lying in the wigwam alone, though there were a number of Indians outside. The latter were thoroughly aroused and would, beyond all doubt, have dispatched Hawthorne summarily, but for Mr. Klama, who reached the camp first and quelled the angry spirit of the Indians. Three of the latter were gone in pursuit of Rowe, and it was afterwards ascertained, followed his trail unsuccessfully as far as Wamic. Karpolis, on a rudely constructed litter, and accompanied by a large number of Indians, was found by the relief party not far this side of the robbers' camp, slowly making their way in. The wounded scout was placed in a hack and brought back to the springs, where Hawthorne was lying. Karpolis was unable to ride farther, and was removed from the hack, the wounded outlaw being put in his place and brought to this point, where the party arrived about midnight.

Dr. Richards, of the agency, was called and reached Karpolis about 10:30 p. m. the same night. The old warrior and scout was beyond human aid, however, and died at 9:40 a. m. Monday, June 11th. Hawthorne's was found to be only a flesh wound, and there are fair chances for his recovery. The remains of Karpolis were brought here and an inquest held under direction of Junior Parish, acting agent, and under authority vested by the Indian department. A verdict was found that Karpolis came to his death by a gunshot wound inflicted by one J. S. Hawthorne on the morning of June 10th, 1894. The latter has since been removed to the agency, and will be there held until orders are received from the United States attorney at Portland, affecting his disposal.

Today, Tuesday, the 12th, services were held in the United Presbyterian church as this place by the Rev. Mr. Spear, and a large procession followed the old-time scout to the grave.

The foregoing is a correct report as gathered on the ground and at the post-mortem examination by your correspondent. G. R. C.

The Markets

FRIDAY, June 15—The recent high water has so thoroughly paralyzed business in the city, that the markets are not in the question at all.

Eggs, butter and all other kinds of country produce are in good supply and we are told that there are no changes in former quotations.

There are, practically speaking, no wool buyers in the city, as the stage of the river precludes a movement of freight, except in limited quantities, and as a consequence there have been no sales since transportation was interrupted. There seems to be a disposition to hold back by buyers and wait further developments.

Berries for Denver

Mr. Henry Hibbard, representing the Hood River Fruit Growers Union, came up on the Regulator last evening bringing with him 180 crates of berries which he sent over the road to Celilo this morning, from which point they will be sent up on the Almota, to Umatilla and thence to Denver. Mr. N. C. Evans, another prominent berry grower, came up and made arrangements today for sending 150 crates over the same route. They will be taken through tonight in time to catch the Almota, which leaves tomorrow morning.
