JULY JINGLINGS.

Leaves From the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

Mr. J. M. Smith goes to Grant and Gilliam counties tonight for a two weeks' visit.

The case against Maloney and Snelling went over the Fourth, and is being finished today.

The strike is bringing the newspapers down to the old Deseret News and Valley Tan style, wrapping paper.

About forty good citizens of Hood River valley celebrated the Fourth at the forks of the river, the little town of Winans.

The trout fishing at the forks of Hood River is said to be of the finest. Jack Coon, an Indian, killed a bear at that place Tuesday.

County Commissioner Blowers came up from Hood River yesterday to take part today for the first time in the management of county affairs.

W. R. Winans presented a petition to the county court today asking an appropriation to build a wagon road from Tucker's mill to the forks of Hood River. The petition contained more than a hundred names.

The dance given by the Smith brothers at the Umatilla house last night was a very pleasant and successful affair. The large dining room was filled to its utmost capacity, and when a reporter looked in he saw so many pretty girls that his eyes ache ever since.

A private telephone this morning states that a thousand militia men called out in San Francisco, yesterday, laid down their arms in sympathy with the strikers. Two men were killed by shots from the militia but the shooting was accidental. Rioting was reported in Chicago, but how serious we were unable to learn.

A two-horse rig left this morning with four passengers, bound for points up the river, one of them going to Pendleton, and another to Mt. Hope, Idaho. Thus does the strike revive the primitive methods of travel and emphasize the superiority of the car—Pullman or other—to the stage coach or the upper deck of the cayuse.

There was a bit of a row at Lookout mountain on Mill creek yesterday, which gave Dr. Hollister a job lot of small surgical jobs. Jim Crate got his chin cut, requiring several stitches to put it together; one of the Heater boys got a bad cut in the hand and the other a scalp wound. We understand it was quite lively, even for a Fourth of July celebration for a few moments.

An Untimely Fit.

Yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock Col. Sinnott and some other gentlemen were sitting on the west porch of the Umatilla house, when they noticed an Indian in a small boat a short distance out from the coal bunkers. He was coming from the Washington side, and suddenly he half straightened up and plunged over the side of the boat. He came up but once, and though another boat was on hand in a moment or two, nothing could be done for him. Those who saw the affair thought it was a case of suicide, but John Teo says the Indian, whose name was Jack, occasionally had fits, and it is supposed that a sudden attack caused his plunge into the Columbia.

Railroad Notes.

Superintendent Wade, who has charge of the bridge and trestle work for the U. P., placed three donkey engines along the track yesterday, one here, one at Hood River, and one at some other point. He tells us the trestles are all completed to Celilo, and that the road will be opened to that point just as soon as the rails can be laid, and this will be only a day or so. Between here and the Locks men are at work repairing all such portions of the road as can be got at, and when the water gets a few feet lower the trestles will be put running. Two or three weeks will see trains running again providing the strike is off.

High Water Mark.

The water level was run through from the high water mark out on the corner of THE CHRONICLE building to the government gauge on the wharf this morning, and the extreme high water mark, made June 6th at 11 o'clock, was 59.64 feet. Measured from the high water mark of 1876, in THE CHRONICLE office basement, the water of 1894 was 7 feet, 11 3/4 inches higher than in 1876. This varies only an inch and a tenth from the height as shown by the gauges, the variation being caused by not getting the last gauges set exactly true with the first one.

A Lucky Accident.

Saturday afternoon Mr. Julius Wiley went up to visit the Seuferts, taking with him his wife, daughter and baby, Mrs. Clark, his wife's sister, her little daughter and baby, and Mr. Cook, and riding in a stiff-topped carriage of Ward & Kerns'. After several hours' visit looking over the orchards and going through the cannery, they started for home. Leaving, they passed under a cherry tree a few rods from the house, from which a small limb hung down over the road. The limb caught the top of the carriage, and in an instant the whole top and bed was lifted from the running gear. Mrs. Wiley was thrown out on one side and Mrs. Clark's little girl with her. Mrs. Clark was thrown out over the wheel on the other side, and as she fell the baby, 9 months old, was thrown under the buggy bed, the back of which was on the ground and the front resting on the hind axle. In falling her hair escaped its fastenings, the ends catching in the spokes. Cooke jumped and grabbed the horses by the bits, and thus caused them to back, and consequently to wrap Mrs. Clark's hair, which is very long, around the hub until her head was brought tight against the axle. Fortunately at this point the horses, which were gentle and behaved well, stopped, and a step or two forward released Mrs. Clark from her perilous position.

Mr. Wiley lifted the buggy bed and the baby was taken out from under the wreck unharmed. Mrs. Wiley injured one of her ankles and is somewhat bruised, but is perfectly satisfied to know that the results are not more serious. Mr. Wiley and Cooke put the top of the buggy back on the running gears and came into town, while Mr. Seufert brought the ladies and children in. Mrs. Clark found that her hair pins had been twisted into all imaginable shapes and knots, but is fortunate indeed in escaping without serious injury, as had the horses backed another foot, she would have lost her hair. And all this caused by a cherry limb less than an inch in diameter.

Fish and Firecrackers.

Mr. Cathcart made lots of the small boys happy Tuesday evening. He had a big two-horse-load of salmon, which the canneries, being already overstocked, sent word not to bring up. Mr. Cathcart at once proceeded to give them away to the small boys, every boy getting a big fat salmon. It was amusing to watch the little fellows. Each one as he received his fish made a straight shoot for the China stores to trade fish for firecrackers, and a lively trade was carried on until the Chinamen were overstocked. It isn't often that The Dalles boys get their firecrackers and Fourth of July out of the Columbia, but they did this year. Mr. Cathcart will be remembered years hence, when the little fellows who popped his fish are old men.

Where They Went.

Quite a number of Dalles people went down to Hood River yesterday on the Regulator, but we were not of them. We got there later; but that is not what we arrived in to say which was that on their arrival they were met by the Hood River people and all went up on the hill back of town to the ball ground. Hon. E. L. Smith read the declaration of independence and a few five minute speeches were made, after which everybody amused themselves as best suited them. There was a yacht race, horse races, a walk-around by the Hopod River Indians in costume, and a ball game between impromptu clubs of The Dalles and Hood River, the latter winning by a score of twenty-five to five. Many repaired with their lunch baskets to the big spring in Coe's field where Hood River gets her water from, and spent a larger portion of the afternoon there. It is one of the prettiest spots on earth. It was very quiet, but the weather was fine and all seemed to enjoy the outing. Quite a number visited the Cascades and the Washington portage and a goodly number went to the picnic on 3-Mile and on private picnics.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Miss Gertrude French returned to Portland today.

Mr. Van Woodruff of Tygh Valley is in the city.

Miss Clara Story was a passenger for Vancouver this morning.

Mr. G. M. Irwin, superintendent of public instruction, came up on the Regulator last night.

Mrs. O. Kinerly and children and Miss Mary Frazier left for Cannon beach this morning, for a summer's outing.

Miss Urania Ruch went to Portland this morning, where she will remain for a week or two, and then visit in Salem.

Mr. Hal French, who has been confined to his home with a very bad felon on the right hand, is again able to be out.

Mrs. A. M. Williams and Miss Grace Williams went to Hood River this morning, where Miss Grace will spend a few weeks.

Mr. Joseph G. Wiley is visiting his brother, Julius, of this city. They have not seen one another for six years, and the present visit is principally accident.

Mrs. W. J. Spillman came up on the Regulator Tuesday evening on her way to Pullman, where her husband has been employed to take charge of the Agricultural college. She is visiting Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Cooper, her husband being Mrs. Cooper's brother, and will go on to Lewiston, probably tomorrow and from there by private conveyance.

ATOLE, which a Mexican physician prescribed for William L. Wilson, is said to be very nutritious. Corn is ground by hand, the meal is then parched and sifted into boiling water or milk, as mush is prepared in the United States.

Pallor, languidness, and the appearance of ill-health being no longer fashionable among ladies, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is most largely resorted to as a tonic-alterative, nervine, stomachic, and builder-up of the system generally. This is as it should be. Ayer's is the best.

Farrell & Co.'s table syrups are easily digested by children.
