Last June, Dick Crawford brought his twelve months old child, suffering from infantile diarrhoea, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and being sickly everything ran through it like water through a sieve. I give it the usual treatment in such cases, but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used, a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. MARLOW, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. for sale by Blakeley & Houghton Drug-

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condi-tion, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an in-flamed condition of the nucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ONE OF LIFE'S MYSTERIES.

Why Some People Pass Empty Car Seats and Crawd Those Partially Occupied. "There is one thing that has always Pellets come. been more or less of a mystery to me, said a traveler to a writer for the New important point York Sun, "and that is the motive that than you think, prompts some passengers in a car in It keeps them al. which there are entirely vacant seats to take a seat with somebody. In some cases the reason for this is simple ordinary pills in takes the first seat he comes to and is satisfied: it may be pasteboard boxes. | entire seats are at the other end of the They're put up car and not seen at a casual glance; in a better way, sometimes a person unaccustomed to and they act in a travel rather timidly takes the first sent at hand; but the person that I have in mind is the one who either deliberately, or with what one might call deliberate thoughtlessness, takes a seat with somebody when there are vacant entire sents in plain sight. I tion afterward have seen, for instance, a man sitting that sometimes by a window, alone in a seat, in a car leaves you worse in which there was plenty of room, In that way, they reading. Knowing that there was plenty of room he had perhaps sort of reempted that seat, and was making himself comfortable in it, and was thinking of nothing but his reading. Along comes a rather stout lady, who, though there is more room elsewhere, for some to me utterly incomprehenmoves silently. She halts in the aisle at the end of the seat, and slowly moves in so that she can sit down. She says nothing to the man. She does not even look at him; she has not looked at him since the moment that she decided to take that seat, and he is as yet unconscious of her presence. Looking straight ahead with great calmness, she sits down deliberately. Then the man looks around with a pained sort of look. He moves closer to the window and goes on reading, but he won't regain his inward composure for an hour. Now why the lady should have taken that particular seat is one of the things that I don't understand."

FISHES ON THE MARCH. Peculiar Varieties That Travel Across the

Land Travelers in South America are sometimes regaled with wonderful stories about the overland trips of certain fishes, and in many instances the accounts have been substantiated, especially in the cases of the Doras and Callichthys-catfishes common in the tropical South American streams. These fishes exist in vast numbers in the streams and pools, and, like their East Indian allies, they start in a body overland, presenting a most singular appearance, especially to those who have never seen a fish out of water by its own volition.

Another eatfish, known as the l'angsa, in South American waters, is often seen on partly submerged logs, apparently having the habits of a frog or lizard. In England the familiar little fish known as the blenny has a curious habit of basking in the open air at times. This was first noticed by a naturalist named Ross, who kept everal of the fishes in an aquarium. He had great difficulty in making them stay in the water. At certain times during the day they would make desperate and often successful attempts o get out. Finally, upon the advice of a friend, he placed a stone in the tank so that part of it was exposed, and out upon it climbed the blennies. they seemed to require air, and from choice spent part of the time out of the water. Singularly enough, this was during the cbb tide, the period when they would naturally be left high and dry in the pools along shore.

AN ENGLISH SNAKE STORY.

The Weird Tale of the Terrible Dragon of Sockburn Downs.

In the old English "chop" book and S. B. Med. Mrs. Co., folklore stories the Yorkshire dragon Dufur, Ore is always referred to as the "Lampton Worm," the word "worm" meaning smake or dragon; Lampton being the name of the man who finally succeeded in slaying the hideous creature. Another old-time English myth, scarcely less popular than that of the Lampton worm, is that of the "Dragon of Sockburn Downs." The name of the man who slew the Sockburn nightmare is still preserved, and is that of one of the best known "North-Country" families. His tomb is still to be seen in the is always referred to as the "Lampton lies. His tomb is still to be seen in the rains of the church at Sockburn, where also he lay in effigy with a rude sculpture of the dragon at his feet. When the old church had crumbled to an unrecognizable mass of stone and mortar. the effigies of the hero and the "worm were removed to Sockburn hall Among the other relies preserved at this hall may be seen the identical falchion or sword with which the monster was slain. Near by, almost in sight of this miniature museum of relies, is a gigantic bowlder, lying in the midst of "Worm Field." Here, the legend says, the creature attempted to hide itself on the day when it was pursued and vanquished by the hero of Sockburn Downs.
