

It isn't in the ordinary way that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes to the weak and suffering woman who needs it. It's guaranteed. Not with words merely; any medicine can make claims and promises. What is done with the "Favorite Prescription" is this: if it fails to benefit or cure, in any case, your money is returned. Can you ask any better proof that a medicine will do what it promises?

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nerve, and a certain remedy for the ill and ailments that beset a woman. In "female complaint" of every kind, periodical pains, internal inflammation or ulceration, bearing-down sensations, and all chronic weaknesses and irregularities, it is a positive and complete cure.

To every tired, overworked woman, and to every weak, nervous, and ailing one, it is guaranteed to bring health and strength.

To every sufferer from Catarrh, no matter how bad the case or of how long standing, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy say this: "If we can't cure it, perfectly and permanently, we'll pay you $500 in cash." Sold by all druggists.

The title has a great deal to do with the popularity of a book. An English novel in the early days of this century found no readers when announced as "The Champion of Virtue," but immediately became popular as the "Old English Poem."

Last June, Dick Crawford brought his twelve months old child, suffering from infantile diarrhoea, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and being sickly everything ran through it like water through a sieve. I give it the usual treatment in such cases, but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used, a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. MARLOW, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. Deafness Cannot be Cured. By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. LOSSES CAUSED BY LIGHTNING.

Some Interesting Figures Taken from a Work Published by the Government.

Science has been busy among the cherished beliefs regarding everyday phenomena of late years, and one by one they have been demolished and the list of vulgar errors grows smaller. An exception to this, says the Washington News, is a little publication that has made its appearance from the publishing house of Uncle Sam, compiled by Alexander MacAdie, of the weather bureau, and containing some very interesting facts regarding lightning and the damages and fatalities it causes in this country. Its primary object is to show the best methods of protection by lightning rods, but incidentally it gives some very unique figures, and shows that a few at least of the beliefs that are common to every class are well founded. The number of death-dealing lightning bolts that find victims in this country yearly is greater than is probably generally believed. According to figures given by Mr. MacAdie there occurred in 1893 251 deaths by lightning, and in the year following there were 209. The statistics do not go further back than 1890, but even this short space of time has demonstrated that the danger seems to be on the increase by extending over a greater portion of the year than formerly. In 1890 the months of March, April, May, June, July and August alone chronicled fatalities. The year following September was added, and in 1892 every month from April to December provided a victim to heaven's fire. The average number of persons killed yearly by lightning is 196. A glance at the table shows that by far the greater number of fatalities occurred in June, July and August.

In the eight years ending in 1893 there were 3,516 fires in the United States due to lightning, causing a total loss of $12,663,835. This is a rather startling statement to those who are inclined to scoff at the danger from thunderstorms. Barns, stables and granaries apparently had the greatest attraction for lightning, for during the nine years ending in 1892 2,935 buildings of that class were struck, as against 664 dwellings and 104 churches. Electric light stations and telegraph and telephone offices seemed to have enjoyed a comparative immunity from danger from the element with which they are pervaded. In certain states there has been a marked increase in the number of lightning strokes in the past year, particularly in Connecticut, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan and New York.

One of the most interesting results of the observations that have been made of late years regarding lightning and its freaks is that the geological as well as the topographical conditions influence it. According to the statistics a chalk formation is the least liable to damaging lightning, while next in order of frequency come marl, clay, sand and loam. With regard to trees the oak is most frequently and the beech the least frequently struck. Neither does it seem to have been the highest or most exposed trees that were struck, as the bolt hit in the most erratic and unexpected manner. As regards the superstitions or beliefs regarding the safety or danger of certain localities when the lightning is on the rampage, Mr. MacAdie states that it is not judicious to stand under trees, in the doorway of barns, close to cattle or near chimneys and fireplaces, which is a scientific justification of the actions of probably five persons out of six when a storm is prevailing.

A BARBER SHOP SURPRISE.

A Fashionably Dressed Young Lady Nonchalantly Takes a Shave.

But one of the dozen chairs in a popular Cincinnati barber shop was vacant about ten o'clock the other morning, when a fashionably dressed young woman entered, removed her wrap, veil and hat, handed them to the open-mouthed boy, walked to the vacant chair, sat down in it, threw her head back on the padded rest, and placed her daintily shod feet on the foot bench. "Bangs trimmed?" asked the barber. "Nope, shave!" she said, gazing composedly at the ceiling. "Huh!" grunted the wonder-stricken barber. "Shave," she repeated, without winking, "here and here," pointing to her upper lip and to the skin in front of her ears.

The barber, says the Tribune, keeping his eyes on her all the time, tucked a towel under her chin, lathered the places she had indicated, stropped the razor and went to work. A few strokes and it was over, and when her face had been washed and powdered, she left the chair, allowed the boy to put on her wrap, adjusted her hat and veil with much deliberation, and, throwing a half dollar on the cashier's counter, walked out. The effect of this visit on the other barbers and their victims was to cause the barbers to forget, for the first time in their lives, to tell the victims that they needed shampoos, and the victims to fail to notice the cuts in their faces when the lady said "shave."

"She'd been there before," he added.

A Shower of Feathers.

The eminent surgeon, Sir Astley Cooper, was fond of a practical joke. On one occasion he ascended the church tower of a village in Norfolk, taking with him one of his mother's pillows, and finding the wind blowing directly to the next town, he let off handfuls of feathers until he had emptied the pillow. The local papers reported this "remarkable shower" of feathers, and offered various conjectures to account for it, and the account was copied into other papers, and was probably received as a perfectly natural occurrence.

THE DALLES

Wasco County, Oregon. The Gate City of the Inland Empire is situated at the head of navigation on the Middle Columbia, and is a thriving, prosperous city.

ITS TERRITORY. It is the supply city for an extensive and rich agricultural and grazing country, its trade reaching as far south as Summer Lake, a distance of over two hundred miles.

The Largest Wool Market. The rich grazing country along the eastern slope of the Cascades furnishes pasture for thousands of sheep, the wool from which finds market here.

ITS PRODUCTS. The salmon fisheries are the finest on the Columbia, yielding this year a revenue of thousands of dollars, which will be more than doubled in the near future.

ITS WEALTH. It is the richest city of its size on the coast and its money is scattered over and is being used to develop more farming country than is tributary to any other city in Eastern Oregon.

Its situation is unsurpassed. Its climate delightful. Its possibilities incalculable. Its resources unlimited. And on these former stones she stands.
