THE DISPATCHES TOMORROW.

owing to the Western Union lines being down we have at last made arrangements for getting the dispatches, which we will print tomorrow for the first time. We will be able to give the news thirtytwo hours ahead of the Telegram and road. He told us cheerfully that he had forty hours ahead of the Oregonian. We been working two days on it and that it hope the extra expense we are going to, to supply the demand of the people for news, will be appreciated and that appreciation shown in the shape of a generous patronage.

GRASP THE OPPORTUNITY.

There is an old proverb that "the Lord helps those who help themselves." commissioners today. The true meaning of the trite saying being that success is attained by individual effort. It is time, high time that we as a community adopt this rule. The Dalles is the most favorably situated city in the state in many respects, and she has attained importance not on account of the efforts of her citizens, but in spite of their indifference. What she is, circumstances and her geographical situation has made her. It is obvious that if we desire to grow, we must make some effort to do so. Other places are being built up, are reaching after trade and getting it, and The Dalles must meet this competition it it de sires to keep up with the procession. The great factor in a city's prosperity, the thing that stirs up its blood and puts life in it, is the monthly pay rolls. The employment of labor, and consequent business alone can induce a city's

There are opportunities now, and they should he taken advantage of at once. The distillery at Grants is to be rebuilt; but whether at that point or some other will depend largely on circumstances. With a liberal treatment it can be located here. Grounds can be procured west of the shops, and these and other inducements would locate the plant here. It is not a distillery alone, but also a flour mill. In connection with fifty barrels of flour daily, and if the plant is put here its proprietors propose to double its capacity. Its pay roll would then amount to from $3000 to $5000 per month, besides the vast amount that would be paid out for grain, fuel and stock. One industry naturally leads to another, and a cannery would no doubt soon follow.

We suggest that our business men take the matter in hand and see what can be done. We have suffered long and severely from neglected opportunities, let us see to it that hereafter we shall have nothing of the kind to regret.

STATE PORTAGE ROAD.

The following is given to the Salem Statesman, no doubt from official

At its 1891 session the Oregon legislature passed an act authorizing and empowering the governor, secretary of state and state treasurer, in behalf of the state of Oregon, to build, construct, operate and maintain a portage railway between the highest and lowest points of the navigable waters of the Columbia river at the Cascades in Oregon and between The Dalles and Celilo, and to build and construct all necessary switches and approaches to the same, and to equip, run, operate and perpetually maintain the same. And this legislation promptly led to the state ownership of a very successful but short line of rail in Oregon. The act carried an appropriation of $60,000, and the line was built and ready for business in October of the same year and has been in operation ever since, with slight interruptions by reason of high water. The line was built within the appropriation and has made money. The late floods damaged it to the extent of probably $750, but as the earnings on hand amount to probably $1,0 0 the repairs will be made without delay. The effect of the building of this road has been to greatly reduce freight rates between The Dalles and points down the river. No effort was made to operate it at a profit, but even at a low rate earnings have piled up until there is today a fund sufficient to meet the emergency created by reason of the flood. Rates were reduced about "Ships That Pass in the Night" the same per cent, then as they have been raised on the Southern Pacific and other lines in Oregon under the present state board of railroad commissioners. Oregon is the second state in the Union to have experimented in state ownership of railway lines and the success of the experiment should and no doubt will lead to something greater-for instance, the completion of the Oregon Pacific across the mountains:

There can be no doubt about the ne cessity for a cannery here, or that it would have abundant business. Between the salmon, fruit and vegetables it could be kept running for six months in the year, and besides furnishing a market, would also furnish employment for a large number of laborers. What we say elsewhere concerning the disaddress all communication to "THE CHRON- tillery applies with equal force to a cannery. It should be built, and built at once, so that the fall fruits can be taken care of. Had there been such an institution here three months ago, Hood River would have saved not less than $25,000 worth of berries, and from one After ten weeks of unsuccessful effort hundred to two hundred people would have been furnished work.
