AUGUST AUGURINGS.

Leaves From the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

The rotund watermelon is in the market, making glad the eye and palate of the small boy.

The west bound train arrives from three to five hours late every morning on account of waiting at Pendleton for the train from Spokane.

The station at Grant is abandoned and the depot will be located about half way between that point and Rufus. The elevator at Grant will be moved to the new station.

The suit of Eshenburg against the D. P. & A. N. Co. in Justice Davis' court yesterday was decided in favor of plaintiff, who got judgment for the value of his goods. The case will be appealed.

The Regulator is handling an immense amount of wool, going loaded with it every day. Today there is a line of drays between the warehouses and the wharf, filling the latter with baled wool for shipment tomorrow.

The city recorder had just one victim this morning, being the same individual who kept the docket from being bare yesterday. He put up five big dollars yesterday, but today his best friend, his pocketbook, went back on him.

Messrs. Schenck and Patterson, of the First National bank, were engaged yesterday in making money. They had sheets of $10 and $20 bills which were of no value whatever until each had signed his name to them, when they at once became the money of the realm.

Rev. O. D. Taylor left a basket of apples at this office last night, raised in his Mill creek orchards, that were a delight to both eye and tongue. Wasco county apples are the best grown in the state, and those grown in the vicinity of The Dalles size up with any of them.

The officers of the Third have been calculating on having five or six companies at least go into camp this summer, but General Compton after an interview with the governor, has decided not to hold any encampment this year. Had the Third turned out it was intended to go into camp near Hood River.

Superintendent Shelley is engaged in examining a galaxy of youth and beauty, composed of one youth and fourteen beauties, and all being anxious to obtain a license to teach school. They are as demure, that is the beauties are, as a girl with her first bean. The examination will last until Friday evening, it covering ten branches, and about two hours being devoted to each.

Killed by the Cars.

The east-bound passenger, as it pulled out about midnight last night, ran over a man, about a hundred yards the other side of the company's ice house. The engineer saw him lying on the track, reversed his engine and applied the air brakes, but was not able to stop the train until the wheels of the engine had passed over the victim's head. From appearances the man had been drinking and lay down on the track to sleep. The wheels struck him on top of the head, mashing the left side of it to a pulp. As the body, with the exception of the toes of one foot, was not touched, we judge the man was lying by the track using the rail for a pillow.

Some of the railroad boys recognize the body as that of a man employed as a cook on the section, but know no other name for him than "Dutchy." The remains were taken to Mr. Mitchell's undertaking rooms, where an inquest will be held on them tomorrow, when the engineer and firemen who were on the engine that ran over him will return.

A Bad Scalp Wound.

This morning shortly before noon a little 6-year-old son of T. W. Jackson was playing in front of Jones cigar store, where men were engaged in bracing up the sidewalk and filling in a hole in the edge of the street where it had caved during the high water. The little fellow was cautioned several times to keep away, but paid no attention to the warnings. In playing he stood on the sidewalk and was leaning on the handle of a spade which he had braced against the bank on the opposite side of the cave. His hands slipped and he fell headforemost, striking the corner of a plank in the bottom of the hole, and receiving an ugly three-cornered scalp wound four inches in length. Dr. Hollister sewed up the wound.

Lost Five Dollars Reward.

Strayed from my west pasture, one iron-grey horse, branded (half circle) on left shoulder and two S's crossed on right shoulder; rather thin cinch sore on left ribs; foretop reached back to the place for halter. Probably went towards Tygh Ridge. Will give $5 reward for his return to me at my ranch, or a liberal reward for any information leading to his recovery.

Crop Bulletin.

The following is the report of the Oregon State Weather Service for the week ending Monday, Aug. 6th, 1894:

Last week was the warmest of the season. The temperature in Columbia and Walla Walla valleys averaged 78 degrees. South and east of the Blue mountains the average was 70 degrees. A heavy shower occurred in Baker county on Sunday. No precipitation occurred in other sections. The sunshine was normal.

Headers made rapid progress. The weather was excellent for advancing the harvest. The weather was the warmest for the season, but was not attended by damaging hot winds. All grains ripening so that the oat crop is in a proper state for the harvester. Some late sown grain possibly suffered injury by the warm spell, but the damage is found only in spots. There is an excellent outlook for large yields of all kinds of grain. The aphid scare is passed. When grain is found to be shriveled some attribute it to the grain aphid and others to the warm weather. Corn has a very good color and will make a good crop. Apples and plums are plentiful. Wild and cultivated blackberries are in the markets. Gardens suffered much from the warm weather, but the potato crop still will be very good.

Our North Powder, Union county, correspondent writes that all kinds of grain are doing well, but ripening too rapidly to make a plump berry. Crops are suffering in sections of Union and Malheur counties for want of moisture. Our correspondent at Vale writes that farmers are securing the second crop of alfalfa, and that there is a plenty of water in the streams for irrigation purposes. All kinds of stock are doing well. Harvesting is well advanced and barley is ready to cut. There is a good prospect for fair prices for hay.

He Went In Earnest.

Sunday afternoon Mr. Riggs and Ernest Drews went boat riding on the broad bosom of the turbulent Columbia. Now, Ernest is given to deep spells of introspection, self communion and such, in which he becomes so wrapped up in himself that he is dead to all outside matters. Such was his condition Sunday as the little boat leaped over the white caps, and Ernest indulged in deep thought concerning electrical matters, and particularly to the use of electricity as a depilatory, being led thereto by the fact that the wind was blowing with unbecoming freedom through the silky tangle of his first crop of whiskers, and therefore heeded not the warning to watch out for the boom. The boat tacked, and the boom came around striking Ernest in the shoulders and knocking him out from under his hat and into the Columbia. He could not swim a stroke, but fortunately was thrown so far ahead that he had gone down and, not liking it, had come back to the surface by the time the boat reached him, and Mr. Riggs, taking a good grip in his collar, snaked him back into the boat. He lost his watch, he lost the thread of his electrical thought, and he lost confidence in himself at the same time.

The shock was a severe one, for his whiskers, which were black as a coal when he went over, were almost white when he was pulled out. He has taken a short vacation and gone to Portland after a razor. Seriously it was a very close call and we are glad indeed that the termination of the matter permits a joke as mild as Ernest's whiskers, instead of an obituary notice.

The Indians Will Be Happy.

Judge Bellinger yesterday morning rendered an important decision in the cases of Thomas Hawks and Edward Kline, charged with selling liquor to Indians. It was not shown that the Indians to whom the liquor was sold were wards of a United States Indian agent, and the court presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that they were beneficiaries under the allotment of land in severalty to the Indians of the Umatilla agency in 1887.

He decided that the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians had the effect of removing them from under the charge of Indian agents, and gave them the standing of American citizens. As such the United States laws governing Indian wards of the government do not apply to them, and the selling of liquor to an Indian who is not in charge of a United States Indian agent is not punishable under the United States statutes. The decision has, as a precedent, the opinion of Judge Hanford delivered in an Indian case of another character in 1892, but it is the first decision to this effect in a case directly in point. It will have the effect of very materially lessening the number of prosecutions in the United States court of the offense of selling liquor to Indians, and after it is thoroughly understood by the Indians there should be no difficulty in getting them to accept allotments of lands in severalty.—Telegram.
