

ON THE OUTSIDE—
That is the best place to keep the huge, old-fashioned pill. Just as soon as you get it inside, it begins to trouble you. What's the use of suffering with it, when you can get more help from Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets?

These tiny, sugar-coated granules do you permanent good. They act mildly and naturally, and there's no reaction afterward. Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and permanently cured. They're the smallest, the easiest to take, and the cheapest—for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get. Nothing else urged by the dealer, though they may be better for him to sell, can be "just as good" for you to buy.

SACRED MONKEYS.

Disturbance of the Adjusts to the Brahmin Worship.
In certain parts of India monkeys are regarded as objects of worship. In "Reminiscences of Seventy Years' Life, Travel and Adventure," the author was about to enter the court of a large monkey temple at Nuddea, when the officiating Brahmin said: "No person must visit the court of Huniman—the monkey god—with his shoes on." After some discussion, however, the point was yielded, the party entering without removing their shoes. On another occasion he writes:

In passing up the country, when near to Nuddea, I happened to stroll into a bamboo grove, or jungle, when the boat had put to rest for the night. I had not advanced far before I heard a terrible uproar all around, and was not a little alarmed, on looking up, to behold a whole army of the largest monkeys making towards me from all quarters. Some jumped on the ground before me, others swung by the bamboos over my head, and many closed up the path in my rear. Several females had young ones clinging to them, but this did not seem to render them less agile than the others. A few of the largest, and apparently the oldest, chattered for about half a minute together; then the whole tribe responded, while all closed in upon me.

What to do I knew not. However, I hallooed as loudly as I could to make my people hear, and to my great comfort the monkeys retreated a few paces every time I did so. This encouraged me to persevere, but I perceived that when I began to retreat they closed upon me again, without being affected by my noise.

Once more I stood still and gave a tremendous shout, when back they went again. I gained full twenty yards this time before they came jumping around; and just as I was about to repeat the call, my hopes were raised by beholding a poor, decrepit old woman some hobbling through the midst of them.

She shook two or three of them by the paws as she passed; but no sooner had she come within hearing than she opened upon me a torrent of abuse for disturbing the sacred animals in their retirement. She motioned me, with almost frantic gestures, to depart quickly, and her tongue never ceased till I was quite out of hearing.

I was not long in fulfilling her commands, as the monkeys all seemed implicitly to obey her bidding, and made a way for my retreat. When I quitted the jungle I met my servant, who said he was coming to tell me not to disturb the monkeys, as Huniman owned that bamboo grove. The old woman, it appeared, was employed by the Brahmins to give the monkeys food every day; beside which they were worshipped by all the people in the country round, who brought offerings of rice and sweetmeats to them continually.

FORTUNES OF MEDICAL MEN.

Eminent English Physicians Who Have Died Leaving Millions Behind.
Some great men have died leaving large fortunes behind, and others have died poor, says the British Medical Journal. The will of Sir William Gull, which was sworn under £344,000, is generally quoted as the largest amount left by a member of the medical profession. This, however, was exceeded by Dr. Blundell, who died in 1877 and left a fortune of £350,000. Among other wills of six figures may be mentioned Sir Erasmus Wilson, £264,000; Sir Andrew Clark, £204,000; Sir Oscar Clayton, £146,000; Sir George Burrows, £104,628; Sir William Bowman, £103,948, and Sir Charles Looock, £100,000.

Of the fortunes made by members of the medical profession very little has been left institutions connected with that body. A notable exception to this stands out in the magnificent bequest of Sir Erasmus Wilson to the Royal college of surgeons, by which that corporation received £200,000. In addition to this bequest, Sir Erasmus left £5,000 each to several institutions and charities connected with the medical profession. The name of John Radcliffe, too, must not be overlooked in this connection. The Radcliffe infirmary has been erected by the trustees of the will. In addition to these, the Radcliffe library, now housed in the university museum, which is one of the finest scientific libraries in the world, is entirely supported by the Radcliffe trustees. Another exception to this rule is the will of the late Mr. Brickwell, of Tottenham, who died during 1893, and who left the residue of his estate to the Society for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of Medical Men. The ability to leave these large legacies comes to but few, and the main body of practitioners will agree with Socrates that "a physician is a ruler of bodies, and not a maker of money."

HE WAS AN EXPERIMENTER.

And He Filled the Waiters with Conster-nation and Worry.

The young man on the opposite side of the table studied the bill of fare for some time, while the waiter stood on one leg with his ear held out for the order, and then he said: "I want some of that hominy and a side order of maple sirup, a little of the spinach, some sweet corn, and a cup of chocolate." The waiter slowly moved his lips in amazement, says the Chicago Record, and had the order repeated. He smiled and started away, and the young man looked after him frowning.

"Confound these waiters," he said. "I suppose they expect every man to order something conventional, like steak and coffee or liver and bacon." "You did put in a queer order," was suggested. "Oh, I don't know. It may turn out to be a good combination. I'm experimenting all the time." "Experimenting?" "Yes, I try new combinations. How did people ever find out that jelly and roast duck go together? How did they ever get on to spring lamb and mint sauce, pie and cheese, steak and mushrooms, and so on? Why, by trying new combinations. I order whatever strikes my fancy, and in that way I get some good combinations." "What are some you have discovered?" "Scrambled eggs and cranberry sauce is one. Cold pigs' feet and lemon ice is another. Did you ever dip slices of banana into hot bouillon? Of course not. There are no fixed rules about things—you must experiment."

SHARP PRACTICE.

A Girl Detects a Shoplifter and Rewards Herself.

"It was the queerest thing," said the girl at the jewelry counter during the fall, according to the Buffalo Express. "When I was in the other store uptown the shopwalker came around and told us all to look out for these people that go around and steal because they can't help it. I was kind of green, then, and I almost put my eyes out looking for them. One day a woman came to the counter and I didn't pay much attention to her. After I was through with the party I was waiting on I happened to look at her and saw her take a gold-headed hairpin from a tray. "I didn't say a word, but I found out who she was. That night I went right over to her house, and told her what I had seen. She tried to brazen it out, but I was too much for her, and finally she owned up that she had taken the pin." "Did you have her arrested?" asked the other girl. "No," said the first girl, "but I made her give me the pin." Then she turned her queenly head, pointed to something glittering in her hair and asked, proudly: "Ain't it a beauty?"

Progress in Bacteriology.
No science, unless it be that of the electrician, can boast such a wonderful growth in the past quarter century as that of bacteriology, which has developed with remarkable rapidity since Pasteur made his initial investigations. It is now known and conceded by all branches and schools of the medical profession that nine-tenths of all the diseases of both man and animals are due to the presence of certain of the bacterial species, and, insignificant as they are in size, their presence may rapidly bring about wonderful structural changes, this owing to the amazing rapidity with which certain of the species propagate—twenty minutes in some instances sufficing for the complete lifetime of a generation of millions.
