

HOW DO YOU DO when you buy shoes or clothing? Don't you go to the place (if you can find it) where they tell you that you may wear the articles out, and then, if you're not satisfied, they'll refund the money? Why not do the same when you buy medicine?

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is sold on that plan. It's the only blood-purifier so certain and effective that it can be guaranteed to benefit or cure, in every case, or you have your money back.

It's not like the ordinary spring medicines or sarsaparillas. All the year round, it cleanses, builds up, and invigorates the system. If you're bilious, run-down, or dyspeptic, or have any blood-taint, nothing can equal it as a remedy.

The worst cases of Chronic Catarrh in the Head, yield to Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. So certain is it that its makers offer $500 reward for an incurable case.

"What are your political beliefs?" "I don't know that I have any." "What don't you belong to any party at all?" "Oh! Why didn't you ask that first? I am a democrat."—Indianapolis Journal.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

It Should Be in Every House
J. B. Wilson, 371 Clay St., Sharpshurg, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with pneumonia after an attack of "la grippe," when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber, of Cooksport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for lung trouble. Nothing like it. Try it. Manhattan—So you really think that marriage is an expensive institution? Kakefronte—Why, yes. I never got a divorce that didn't cost me at least a thousand.—Buffalo Courier.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him so quickly that others at the hotel who had had colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton Druggists.

INCOMES IN ENGLAND.

Wealthy Men Not So Numerous as in America.

Notwithstanding Which the Wealth of This Country is More Evenly Distributed—Facts Gleaned from Figures.

If the evidence of the British government returns showing the number of persons assessed for the income tax is trustworthy the number of very rich people in the United Kingdom is small. Only 250,000 subjects of the queen confess to an annual income of over $1,000 a year derived from trades or professions. The whole number of them who live on the scale represented by a family income above the $1,000 mark, derived from any source, is set down at about 2,000,000, or one in nineteen of the population. In other words, says the Baltimore Sun, not more than 5 per cent. of the inhabitants of England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland are living in the moderately well-to-do state, implied by a family income of $20 per week. Going up in the scale of incomes we learn from these official returns that 125,000 British families, aggregating 615,000 persons, are all who are in receipt of incomes of $1,500 a year and over. Commenting on these figures the Westminster Gazette says of the limits of wealth and income in the realm of Victoria: "The possession of what is ordinarily termed a modest income, of anything, in fact, above $150 (or $750) is a rare stroke of fortune, which comes to very few in this world, while the chance of becoming a Cræsus is so wildly remote that it will hardly enter into the calculations of a reasonable man." It appears that about 5,000 persons in the whole United Kingdom have incomes of over $25,000 a year. Gen. Booth some time since took a servant girl census of London and found that only 94,000 houses in that city hired any servants at all, and that in one-half of that number there was only one maid-of-all work employed. And this in the richest city of the country, containing one-ninth of its entire population.

Making due allowance for the fact that Britishers, like mankind generally, can be trusted not to overstate their incomes for purposes of taxation, it is still evident that the wealth of this country is not only greater than that of Great Britain, but that it is better distributed. Far more American families than British have incomes exceeding any given figure above $1,000 a year. As against the 5,000 British families with incomes of $25,000 a year or larger, the famous tabulation made by Thomas G. Shearman shows that there are more than twice as many American families possessing that degree of wealth. These Shearman figures have not been disputed by anybody, and, if true, they show that at least 400,000 American families, or 2,000,000 persons, live on a level of comfort represented by an income of $2,000 a year or more, as against the same number living on the $1,000 a year plane in England. It is estimated that 85,000 persons will be called upon in this country to pay the new income tax on incomes exceeding $1,000 a year. The British parliamentary returns indicate that this is three times as many persons as are assessed over that figure by the queen's tax collectors. On the whole, it seems safe to conclude that the average incomes of families in the United States are still higher than in the most favored, or at any rate the best governed, country in Europe. Wealth is still distributed more evenly here than anywhere else in the world.

ALL HAD SEEN HARD LUCK.

The Actor and the Man Who Kents Outdone by the Dry Goods Clerk.
"I think," said the actor, "that the toughest luck I ever ran against was when I was playing Lorenzo in a comic opera company which I prefer shall be nameless for reasons of my own. We had an engagement at a pavilion in a summer garden. It was a good engagement, too, and we went out there with our hearts as full of hope as our pockets were empty of money. It happened, though, that we struck one of those nasty cold summer months. This was the coldest that I ever saw. It was positively arctic. But the place was popular and a lot of people came on the first night. Show was a dead frost, though, and we had to walk back."
"Didn't the people like it?" asked the Buffalo Express man.
"Couldn't tell. You see, there was a big crowd, but it was so blamed cold that they all wore ear-muffs and couldn't hear the gags."
"Huh," said the man who rents, "that ain't a marker to the luck I had to-day. Here I am a man with a sick wife and a lot of other things on my hands, and when I got home to-day I found that it would be absolutely impossible for me to stay there any longer. All there is to it, I've got to move. When you think that my wife is flat on her back, you will realize what an affliction that is. I've got to move; think of it."
"Well," inquired the reporter, "what have you got to do that for? Shy on the rent?"
"No; I'm not shy on the rent, but a lot of my old creditors found the place the other day, and there's nothing to do but get out of their way."
"You fellows make me laugh," said the dry goods clerk. "You actually make me laugh. You talk as if you knew what hard luck really is. Why, you ain't in it with me! I had a job as floor walker that paid me thirty dollars a week. Part of my duties were to paint the signs used so extensively in the store. I always was handy with a brush, you know. I had a big sign to paint for the candy counter last Wednesday. It was to read 'Fresh To-day,' meaning some particular kinds of candies. I painted it, but an infernal imp of a boy who worked in the store painted another just like it that read 'Fresh, Toddy' and hung it in place of mine. The highly moral head of the firm had a fit when he saw it and fired me without giving a chance for an explanation."

AFFECTED BY WEATHER.

The Mental Faculties Regulated to Some Extent by Atmospheric Changes.

A writer in the American Journal of Psychology for this year discusses the subject from the view of common experience, and presents some facts that are interesting as well as leading in their directness. He says: "The head of a factory employing three thousand workmen said: 'We reckon that a disagreeable day yields about ten per cent. less work than a delightful day, and we thus have to count this as a factor in our profit and loss account.' Accidents are more numerous in factories on bad days. A railroad man never proposes changes to his superior if the weather is not propitious. Fair days make men accessible and generous, and open to consider new problems favorably. Some say that opinions reached in best weather states are safest to invest on." Other facts are mentioned in the psychological and physiological relation, as "weather often affects logic, and many men's most syllogistic conclusions are varied by heat and cold." * * * The knee-jerk seems proved to have another factor. It is not strange if the eye, e. g., which wants the normal stimulus in long, dark weather, causes other changes."

Temperament is a fundamental factor in sensitiveness to atmospheric changes, that type of it called the mental being the more intensely affected, while the bilious type may exhibit by comparison the more capricious or morbid impressions, says the Psychological Journal. The mental manifestations, as a rule, however, depend upon the organism primarily. If the culture is good, i. e.; the faculties have been trained to co-ordinate, harmonious action, and the elements that contribute to serenity and self control have been well developed, weather conditions will but operate like other parts of the environment, and self-training will show adaptation and self-repression. The "nervous," excitable, irascible person is he who has not learned to control feeling and expression and it is he who finds fault with his surroundings and imputes uncanny conduct to them. That there are functional states of the body that predispose one to mental depression or exhilaration we are ready to admit. A torpid liver, a chronic catarrh, a rheumatic joint, and even an old corn may render one susceptible to weather changes, the physical ailment producing a nerve reaction that is keenly felt at the spinal centers and may test the spirit. Mind, however, is superior to matter, or rather constituted for superiority. Fairly organized, carefully developed and trained, it will exhibit that superiority by its poise and calmness in circumstances that are disagreeable or painful to the physical sense.

DANGER IN A LOBSTER'S CLAW.

Twenty-Five Pound Monsters Can Easily Snap a Man's Finger Off.

A mature lobster is not small or harmless looking by any means, says the New York Evening Post. Without the claws an old fellow should measure from one to two feet in length, and will weigh altogether from five to fifteen pounds. Smaller ones are caught more frequently than larger ones, especially since the competition has become so fierce as to reduce the number and size all along the New England coast. Occasionally an old-timer is caught—one that weighs as high as twenty-five pounds. Such a monster is a veritable fighter, and a fierce struggle is sometimes experienced before the creature is landed safely. The claws of a large lobster are powerful enough to crack the shell of a clam or to snap off a man's finger. Instances are on record where several fingers have been thus nipped off and where severe injuries have been inflicted on the hands and arms. The fishermen are consequently very cautious when they land a big lobster, and take particular pains to see that he is well secured before taking him out of the trap. According to the fishermen of Newburyport, Mass., the lobster sheds his shell for the first time when he is about five years old, but no one seems able to tell how often after that the shedding occurs. The young lobsters a few inches in length have very little power to protect themselves, and they generally seek refuge under their mother's shell when danger approaches. If startled by enemies when away from their mother they will run into conch shells or other places of refuge. The parent lobster shows the same maternal instinct noticeable in all living creatures. If her young are pursued by enemies she is pretty sure to enter into the race also. Her powers of locomotion are pretty good at such times and her fighting abilities of no mean order. Very few fish or shell creatures can withstand her onslaughts or give effective battle with her. One stroke of her powerful claws will suffice to destroy most enemies. The food of the lobsters consists for the most part of clams, mussels, flounders, sculpin and other fish that get within their reach. They seize these creatures with their strong anterior claws and hold them up to the mouth while the substance is slowly sucked in.

A Gold Miner's Plan.

An Australian mining journal is responsible for the following story: A miner in that country who was obtaining fine gold by sluicing, was asked how he saved it. He replied that he employed the common amalgamation process, but used a novel and ingenious retort for the purpose. "After amalgamating with quicksilver, I get a potato," said the miner, "cut off one end and scoop out a cavity in it large enough to take my ball of amalgam. I next take a spade or piece of flat iron and place that over the fire; and then upon that I place the potato with the cut side down. As the amalgam gets hot the 'silver' evaporates and goes all through the potato; but it can't get through the skin. When it is cool I have my gold button on the spade and my 'silver' all in fine globules in the potato. I break that potato up under water and I have all my 'silver.'"

"You are old, my dear grandma," the little girl said.

As she lay by the fire with Dolly.

"For as white as the snow are the hairs on your head—

Yet you always look rosy and jolly.

"Pray tell me, dear grandma, the reason of this. Why you always look healthy and spritely. Why you never are pale when you give me a kiss.

Why you take such long walks morn and night?"

"The reason, my darling," her grandma replied "is simple, it needs no description. I've always been well, for I keep by my side
