SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1894 THE FARMER IS KING.

The Telegram concerning the desirability of farm life. The Dalles Chronice takes issue with us by saying that farming is the least satisfactory of all occupations, and is far from being the poetic dream that writers paint it. We admit that the farmer has all the annoyances incident to any sort of industrial conincident to any sort of industrial occu- but a Salem clique, by the practice of pation. He has his taxes to pay and his bills to meet, and he must earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. Yet in spite of all these troubles his living is assured, and that is the main thing. His work and his worries end with the day. The night time the season are the control of the practice of fraud, nullified the election and delayed the "location" four years. In 1864 the vote was carried for Salem, and located the capitol there "for 20 years only." The night time the season are day. The night time, the season appointed for rest, is his, and he can always lie down under his own vine and fig tree to enjoy the rest that he has earned, with the comtortable thought that his family is provided for. Furthermore, the farmer is conscious that he holds the key to the whole financial and industrial situation of the world.

The time has long since expired, Bro. Cradlebaugh; and the capitol is now subject to removal. The clause in the constitution (which was put there before the capitol was located), declaring that all other institutions of the state should be located at the state capitol, has been regarded as a dead letter for Agriculture is the basis of all industry over 20 years, until Sherman revived and commerce. The price of farm prod-ucts is the unerring index to the world's prosperity. Hence his position is not of sovereignty. The farmer is a king, in the highest and best sense. Just now he may be reduced to a temporary state of political vassalage, but in time his sovereignty will be reasserted and those stand. More Observer. sovereignty will be reasserted and those who have rebelled against his rule will stand.—Moro Observer. be punished for their rebellion. It was decreed in the beginning that the tiller of the soil should subjugate the earth, and so it will be. Commerce and finance are merely handmaidens, and are dependent on him. The industrial depression of these present times is the depression of these present times is the result of a rebellion against nature's immutable law. The servants have risen against the master, and are trying to make a vassal of him, and abnormal conditions will continue as long as this rebellion is in progress. But in time it will come to an end. It will exhaust itself in its fight against a divine decree. In his claim to sovereignty the farmer is backed by the great Jehovah, and he can afford to stand still and wait to see the salvation of the Lord. It is coming through the travail of these calamities. The bitter experiencies of these troublous days tend to the exaltation of agriculture and to its restoration as the recognized basis of all industry, and

But As she lay by the fire with Dolly. alas! the practical, every day life of the "For as white as the snow are the hairs on your farmer is not made up of such as this. Yet you always look rosy and jolly. The picture our contemporary draws is not true to facts. The farmer does not lie down to rest at the end of his day's work confident that his family is safe.

On the contrary has been also with the picture of the picture our contemporary draws is "Pray tell me, dear grandma, the reason of this why you always look healthy and spritely, why you never are pale when you give me a kiss, why you take such long walks morn and nightly!" The picture our contemporary draws is On the contrary, he has as much worry as any other man. Most of them are in debt, and the payment of debt by money made on a farm is slow at the best, and most times impossible.

The farmer should be king; he should be all our friend pictures him; but he within the past thirty years, the change being inimical to the farmer. The rapid increase of agricultural productions, the decrease the price of all farm products. It is not the fault of laws, but of circumstances, and time alone can provide the remedy. Farming is now at its lowest ebb, from a financial standpoint; but nevertheless it is perhaps as satisfactory as an other pursuit.

We would rejoice to see the farmers able to live just as the theorist pictures them, for if anyone deserves the gratitude of the world it is the patient, plodding, weary farmer who feeds it.

IT CANNOT PASS THEM BY.

Some two or three weeks ago this paper contained an editorial squib to the effect that the Oregonian was advocating the proposition that Oregon make an exhibit at the Tacoma fair, and that it was doing so because it was paid for it. and have induced many to use it. "Thirty-five years ago this Spring, I was run down by hard work and a succession of colds, which made me so feeble that it was an effort for me to walk. I consulted the doctors, but kept sinking lower until I had given up all hope of ever being better. Happening to be in a store, one day, where medicines were sold, the proprietor noticed my weak and sickly appearance, and, after a few questions as to my health, recommended me to try Ayer's Pills. I had little faith in these or any other medicine, but concluded, at last, to take his advice and try a box. Before I had used them all, I was very much better, and two boxes cured me. I am now 80 years old; but I believe that if it had not been for Ayer's Pills, I should have been in my grave long ago. I buy 6 boxes every year, which make 210 boxes up to this time, and I would no more be without them than without bread."-H. H. Ingraham, Rockland, Me.
