

It isn't in the ordinary way that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes to the weak and suffering woman who needs it. It's guaranteed. Not with words merely; any medicine can make claims and promises. What is done with the "Favorite Prescription" is this: if it fails to benefit or cure, in any case, your money is returned. Can you ask any better proof that a medicine will do what it promises?

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nerve, and a certain remedy for the ills and ailments that beset a woman. In "female complaint" of every kind, periodical pains, internal inflammation or ulceration, bearing-down sensations, and all chronic weaknesses and irregularities, it is a positive and complete cure.

To every tired, overworked woman, and to every weak, nervous, and ailing one, it is guaranteed to bring health and strength.

To every sufferer from Cataract, no matter how bad the case or of how long standing, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Cataract Remedy say this: "If we can't cure it, perfectly and permanently, we'll pay you $500 in cash." Sold by all druggists.

Millionaire Gilders is a good deal of a wag. A tramp accosted him as he was on his way down town the other morning, and Gilders said reprovingly: "Here, don't you interfere. I'm working this side of the street."—Kate Field's Washington.

Deafness Cannot be Cured By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him so quickly that others at the hotel who had had colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton Druggists.

A YANKEE'S IDEA.

How It Spurred a Band of Lazy Blacks to Action.

The value of a little Yankee push and enterprise is well illustrated in Mr. Francis B. Thurber's account of a trip from Madura to Trichinopoly, over an Indian railroad newly opened to travel. At one of the water stations the tank had given out, and a hundred or more natives were set at work with earthen water jars to fetch water from a capacious well. Says Mr. Thurber: "After waiting an hour or more in the cars I became impatient at the delay and went out in the broiling sun to see what could be the trouble. The native conductor was trying to induce the lazy blacks to hasten their movements, but without effect.

"On consulting with the engineer I found that the engine was steaming out water faster than it was being put into the tender, and that something must be done or we should never get to our destination. There were plenty of men, but they were dawdling up and down the steps leading to the well, each filling his own jar and occupying about half an hour in carrying it from the well to the engine.

"My first step was to promise them, through the conductor, three rupees—backsheesh—if they would submit to my orders; and then, ranging them in line, I soon had a continuous stream of jars passing rapidly from hand to hand between the well and the engine. As soon as they caught the idea they entered into it with a will.

"Raising a strange, wild song, or chorus, they gradually accelerated their motion, and no line of buckets at an American fire ever circulated faster than did those earthen water-jars in southern India."

THE QUAKER CITY.

Some Curious Facts About New and Old Philadelphia.

For at least two generations in the past, and for as many probably in the future, Philadelphia must essentially be regarded as two distinct and separate towns. Politically there is but one, but from all other standpoints the two towns of which I speak might as well be grouped about the north and south poles, writes Charles B. Davis in Harper's Magazine. And yet the gulf which separates these two places is but a fairly wide thoroughfare—Market street it is called.

On one side lies the new town of Philadelphia, with its wide avenues, magnificent homes—generous and modern in its every outline. On the other quite peacefully rests the old town of Philadelphia, with narrow streets, old brick houses, and shrouded in the conservatism which gave the city its individuality two hundred years ago. The new town has the money and progression of a modern western city, with the boom still on. Its men are ambitious, and spend their money alike on trolleys and cables and new club houses. But old Philadelphia does not fancy rapid transit. It prefers walking, or an occasional ride on the horse car. If it has thrown aside the shabby coat and the wide-brimmed hat of its Quaker ancestors, it cannot altogether free itself from the blood which ran through the splendid men who once wore these quaint clothes.

A DETECTIVE'S HINT.

It May Be of Service to Owners of Valuable Jewels.

One of the big sleuths in the city had been seen by a citizen who had lost a diamond scarfpin, says the Chicago Herald. "Where did you keep it when you were not wearing it?" he asked of the loser.

"Under the lapel of my waistcoat. Always pinned it there when I didn't wear it in my scarf."

"Ever have your waistcoat scoured at the cleaner and dyer's?" "Yes, once a year." Then he named the place. The sleuth went to the place and found the missing spark. This in itself is of no consequence. But what the sleuth added may save some worry. "In a city like this," he said, "where so many are accustomed to sending wearing apparel to the scourer and dyer valuables are likely to be left in a pocket. I have traced a number of such articles to those places. I do not say that all valuables that go in that direction are recovered, but I suggest to people who leave their apparel at the scourer's to examine the pockets first. It may save a whole lot of trouble."

Bullets Carried for Years.

Two extraordinary cases of bullet wounds becoming active after a lapse of twenty-four years are reported by a German medical paper. One is that of a watchmaker named Kleeman, living at Dusseldorf, who was wounded in the Franco-German war. Three years ago he had a bullet successfully extracted from his right shoulder, and a short time ago, after a month's illness, a second bullet was extracted from his left side. The second case is that of a stationmaster who a few days ago was operated upon at Bonn and had a French bullet, which pierced his right shoulder in the war, cut from his right side.

Healthy Berlin.

According to the Glasgow Evening News it appears that the latest statistics issued by the German Imperial health department gave Berlin the honor of being the healthiest city in the world. The death-rate is given as only 16.3 per 1,000. The unhealthiest city is Alexandria, which, despite its unvarying fine weather, its 300 fountains and its soft sea breezes, has a death-rate of no less than 52.9 per 1,000.

Married Fourteen of Her Own Sex.

The most remarkable trial on record was that of Mary Hamilton, an English woman, who was brought into court on October 7, 1746. She was one of the greatest frauds of the day, having succeeded in deluding her own sex in a most extraordinary manner, it being clearly proven at the trial that she had at different times and places married not less than fourteen other women of various ages.

CATARACT IN THE EYE.

A Simple Method by Which It May Be Seen by the Patient.

A correspondent of a scientific journal describes a simple method which enables a patient to see a cataract in his own eye and note its growth and development probably better than any oculist can observe it for him. The cause of cataract is the gradual deposition of oxalate of lime in the substance of the crystalline lens. It occurs at first in small spots or streaks, sometimes in one part and sometimes in another, gradually increasing until it penetrates the whole of the lens causing blindness. The remedy is to remove the lens, and after its removal the patient needs a substitute in the form of highly magnifying spectacles. The method advocated to enable a person to follow the progress of the disease is to use a piece of card—a visiting card, round hole near the middle of the card and hold the card up to the light, close to the eye, looking preferably in the direction of blue sky. With the card near to the eye the observer will not see the small hole pierced by the needle, but a comparatively large, faintly illuminated field, with his cataract projected upon it. He is, in fact, regarding the shadow cast by his cataract on the retina at the back of the eye. With a small puncture in the card the shadow so thrown is comparatively sharp. But with a normal eye an evenly illuminated field or clear disk will be seen. The correspondent states that there is in this way no difficulty in mapping out the deposition of foreign matter, and so arriving at an opinion as to whether it is advisable to have an operation or not. As an evidence of his faith in his own prescription he has made drawings at intervals during the last three years of a cataract which is slowly developing in one of his eyes. He further says that no oculist he has met with is acquainted with this method, and there may consequently be some advantage in making it public.

BIRDS IN POLAR REGIONS.

They All Are There by Force of Climatic Disturbances.

In the countries bordering on the polar seas, where the changing seasons bring alternately the two extremes of dearth and plenty, birds are more numerous in the short summer than anywhere else all the world over, and in the winter absent altogether. All are emigrants there by force of circumstances. In like manner, says Littell's Living Age, the birds of temperate climates are affected by the seasonal changes, though in a less degree, through the influence of cold and heat upon their food supplies rather than by effect of cold upon their well-protected bodies. A coat of mail is not to be compared to a coat of feathers for safety, so far as a bird's life is concerned. Layer upon layer of feathers can withstand any amount of water or any degree of cold; in proof of this, see how the delicate tern, after wintering in comparatively mild weather, go back to the ice floes of the polar sea and lay their eggs on the bare ice. For two or three weeks the tender breast of the sea swallow is pressed against a cold block of ice. Again, as another example of the influence of food rather than climate in governing bird action, take the colony of becaeficos. The becaeficos is a Mediterranean bird common on the southern shores of Spain and Italy, in the Grecian islands, Sicily and Malta, and on the northern shores of Africa. Formerly it was quite unknown in the British Isles, but some years ago a large orchard of fig trees was planted near Brighton, and the becaeficos have discovered the fact and come over to share the spoil. Doubtless the nightingales told them the story of English figs and showed them the way over. Be this as it may, the little birds from the warm shores of the Mediterranean bid fair to become established as naturalized British subjects.

HE "DISPERSED."

It Was a Difficult Feat, But He Succeeded in Accomplishing It.

A speaker who has planned an address for a multitude and finds himself confronted with but a single auditor sometimes fails to readjust his remarks, and the result is apt to be ludicrous, says the Youth's Companion. A little story illustrative of this point is told in connection with a former president of the University of North Carolina. One day as this dignified and stately personage was walking about the campus he observed an unlawful assemblage of students at some little distance. He did not hasten his steps, but proceeded slowly toward them with his head down and his eyes apparently bent in contemplation of his own boots. When this leisurely proceeding had brought him to the spot where the students had been gathered only one young man remained, the others having precipitately departed.

The president raised his head and surveyed the solitary culprit with apparent severity, although the young man always contended that he detected a twinkle in his keen eyes. "Sir," said the president, in a commanding tone, "instantly disperse to your several places of abode." "Difficult though the feat required certainly was, the young man executed it to the best of his ability by "dispersing" without further delay.

About American Feet.

Several London newspapers have been entertaining their readers by a lively controversy over the respective size and beauty of the feet of English and American women. Some editors, in the face of overwhelming evidence, confess that English feet are out of running in such a controversy, and console themselves by asserting that the feet of Englishmen are far more shapely and aristocratic than those of their American brother. There have been many indignant protests against even this admission. The shoe dealers, when assured that they may speak in error, regretfully admit that they are unable to fit the trim American foot with any shoe ready made for the fat and flat feet of English women.
