OUR FAIR.

The sixth annual meeting of the Eastern Oregon Agricultural Association begins Tuesday, October 9th, and holds five days. While heretofore the fairs have not been all that was desired, yet the management did all that could be expected of it, and the fault, if fault there was, was that of the people. The patronage has never been as good as it should have been, but in spite of all obstacles, those in charge of it have manfully stood by it, though it has cost them many good dollars to do so.

There is this year, as usual, $1,500 to be distributed among the farmers, stockmen and fruit growers in the shape of premiums, and this ought to stimulate competition. Could our fruitmen realize the immense good that will accrue to them from a first-class exhibit, they would make it, regardless of premiums. The latter are indeed but a trifle compared to the benefits of the advertising the exhibit gives us. Wasco county is the best fruit county in the state by long odds, and the display of her fruits, so that this fact may become known to the outside world through the medium of the eyes instead of the ears, is what carries conviction.

A year ago Hood River had an apple exhibit, that is it was a general fruit exhibit, but the apple overshadowed everything else to such an extent that it might well be called by that name. The exhibit was started with the intention of getting some choice fruit together so that selections could be made to send to the world's fair and also to the Portland exposition. It was not expected that a regular exhibit would be made, but the people took hold of it and brought their products in, not for premiums, but to assist in advertising the country's resources. The exhibit grew until it surpassed the wildest expectations of the most sanguine. The Oregon Press Association was invited to come up and inspect it, which they did, and with them came the special commissioner from Australia, who had been sent to this country for the purpose of selecting fruit trees for that country. The display was a surprise, and the Australian expert, who had visited all the civilized countries of the world in the course of his professional duties, pronounced it superior to anything he had ever seen, and by far a better display than was made at Chicago, with the whole United States to select from. That exhibit did more to advertise Hood River than $20,000 would have done in the shape of paid matter. People wrote about it who saw it; they told their friends of it; the Australian papers were filled with it, and today Hood River is known where The Dalles and Wasco county have never been heard of. What was the cause? A little well-directed, though unexpected, energy and a pull all in the same direction at the same time.

We can do the same thing here, if we will. We can fill the pavilion from end to end and top to bottom with a fruit display that cannot be duplicated in the United States. Hood River will contribute her share to the exhibit, because she realizes the benefits to be derived. The orchards of this section cannot be excelled, and the grape exhibit can be made to equal any that California ever produced.

The opportunity should not be neglected. It is true that the attendance may not be as large as it should be this fall, but make the exhibit, show those who do come something that will open their eyes concerning our fruit, and rest assured that every year will see a larger and more enthusiastic gathering. Let the world know you have something that is worth while coming to see, and it will come to see it. Get up some enthusiasm about our resources, and you will entice others. Show what your labor has accomplished, do your duty as good citizens of grand old Wasco, and you will have a fruit exhibit that will be the talk of the country and the best, the largest and the cheapest advertisement the county ever had. It doesn't matter who gets the premiums. The advertisement enhances the value of your products. It brings buyers of both fruit and the land that produces it here. It settles and populates the country, decreases taxes, and will in the near future make our foothills in the spring, fragrant with blossoms and in the autumn odorous of fruits.

An anonymous correspondent of the Oregonian who signs himself "Salem," yesterday, asked that paper for space to defend the "Salem hog," and very naturally signs himself one of them. We fear brother Pittcock failed to note the fact that while the article aforesaid starts in to defend the actions of Salem concerning the branch asylum, it winds up as an advertisement of Salem acre tracts. Since reading the article in question, we are convinced, however, that we inadvertently did Salem an injustice. The correspondent convinced us that we were mistaken, and we therefore desire to say that "Salem is not more kinds of a swine at once than any other town on the coast." There now will that satisfy you? If not we will go further and admit that the breed is larger.

TRICK WITH A BANK BILL.

A Man Who Planned a Good Joke on His Boston Friends.

A man walked into a hotel near the Grand Central station early the other morning, having just left a train. He ordered and ate a hearty breakfast and then, instead of giving his waiter the money to pay the check and waiting for the change, as most men do, he "tipped" the waiter and carried the bill to the cashier. In his hand, says the New York Tribune, along with the bill for his breakfast, he held a ten-dollar note.

"I wish," he said to the cashier, "that you would pin a slip of paper to this bank bill, so that you can identify it, and then put it away, please, until I call for it. I'll be back to-morrow." The cashier looked rather astonished.

"Yes," said the other. "I only want to leave it here as security for your breakfast. I'll come back to get it."

"But it's a good bill," said the cashier. "I'll accept it and give you the change."

"No," replied the stranger. "I don't want you to do that. I want merely to leave this bank bill in pawn. I want to pledge it. Give me the price of my breakfast on it, and to-morrow I'll redeem it."

"Oh, I see," said the cashier, with a smile, "you want to keep this bill because it has some peculiar value through association. It's a sort of a souvenir, eh?"

"Well, not exactly," was the answer. "You see, I have been over in Boston. I went nearly broke there. When I was coming away some of my friends insisted on lending me some money. I told them that I should not need it, but they declared I could not pull through. One of them forced ten dollars on me."

"I'll tell you what I'll do, I said. 'You take down the number and date of this bill. I'm coming to Boston again next week. Now to prove to you that I don't need this ten dollars, I'll bet you that I bring the same bill back with me, I'll bet a dinner for us all.'"

"They took the bet, and that is why I want to put this bill in pawn. Pretty good joke on them, eh?" he said, with a wink. "I spend it, and yet I keep it. Take good care of it for me," and he went out, looking like a conqueror.

About five minutes later the cashier took out the bill, pinned the slip of paper to another one of about the same color and appearance, and slipped them back into his cash-drawer.

"I wonder who'll have the joke on him, now?" he said to himself, and then he whistled softly.

WHEN SHE SHOULD SAY NO.

Advice to the Girl Who Has Received or Expects a Proposal.

She should refuse him when she knows his habit to be intemperate, says the New York Advertiser, for there can be no unhappier fate than marriage with a drunkard. She should refuse him when there is any hereditary disease in the family, such as consumption or insanity which would in all probability show itself and cause infinite misery in after years. She should refuse him when she sees he is in the habit of associating with bad companions, who may lead him into a gambling, drinking and card playing life. She should refuse him when she knows him to be that despicable thing, a male flirt; she should reflect that as he has treated other girls so he may treat herself and no woman cares to lay herself open to such treatment. She should refuse him when she feels she has no love to give him, and not marry, as many girls do, for a home. No marriage can be truly happy without love to sweeten the bonds. She should refuse him when he is proposing to her for her money or from pique. A girl can generally distinguish real love from feigned, and even if she cares for him should not accept him until convinced his motives are disinterested. She should not refuse him when she really cares for him, and knows him to be a steady, faithful man, who will make her happy and not cause her heartbreaks, which, perhaps, one of her more brilliant lovers might have done.

A WONDERFUL nugget of tin has been discovered in the mines of North Dundas, Tasmania. It is estimated to weigh 5,400 pounds. The assay of a small piece shows that the large mass of ore contains 67 per cent. of metallic tin.

Sufferers from dyspepsia have only themselves to blame if they fail to test the wonderful curative qualities of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In purifying the blood, this medicine strengthens every organ of the body, and even the most abused stomach is soon restored to healthy action.
