"How is your health?" said the caller at the 5 o'clock tea. "Very delicate," replied the hostess, languidly. "I am kept on the strictest regimen." And then she leaned toward the table and began to eat a dainty luncheon, including ices, macaroons, pickles, strawberries, marmalade, olives, chocolate, charlotte russe and chow-chow.—Chicago Record.

PURELY VEGETABLE
—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They're a compound of refined and concentrated botanical extracts. These tiny, sugar-coated pellets—the smallest and the easiest to take—absolutely and permanently cure Constipation, Indigestion, Sick and Bilious Headaches, Dizziness, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels.

They cure permanently, because they act naturally. They don't shock and weaken the system, like the huge, old-fashioned pills. And they're more effective. One little Pellet for a corrective or laxative—three for a cathartic.

They're the cheapest pills you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

For a perfect and permanent cure of Catarrh, take Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Its proprietors offer $500 reward for an incurable case.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him so quickly that others at the hotel who had had colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure in the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Specimen Cases.
S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by Snipes & Kinerly.

WASTE OF FISH LIFE.

Continual Submarine Warfare Raging Off the French Coast.

From the Largest Down to the Smallest the Inhabitants of the Waters Devour Their Inferiors in Size—Paternalism of the Government.

There is a frightful waste of life in the processes of nature on these coasts, says a St. Pierre-Miquelon correspondent of the New York Evening Post. In the water the warfare of each against all and all against each is eternally going on. The lobster devours the smaller shellfish which live upon the animalcules; the prickly urchin, or sea urchin, lies in wait on every stone and rock for his particular prey; the cod swallows everything that comes within its reach, herring, capelin, squid and periwinkles for choice; and at this season the sand is littered with the roes of fish and with the bodies of fry that have succumbed prematurely in the struggle for existence. Vast flocks of seabirds help to augment the universal carnage, and man takes a hand in it too, and often in turn falls a victim to the wintry sea. Yet with wholesale death all round them there is not a happier people anywhere than the inhabitants of the St. Pierre-Miquelon. Apparently the only drawback is the excessive amount of government. Everybody and everything is regulated by decree or by law. The council, consisting of elected members, passes decrees and by-laws, so does the governor with his large entourage of minor officials, so does the colonial minister in France. The new decrees are published in an official gazette every week; the new by-laws are proclaimed at the street corners by a trumpeter, who blows his horn and reads them aloud with a considerable display of dignity.

On the other hand, France takes good care of the people. The widows and orphans of drowned fishermen are provided with work at the ouvroir or at the laundries where the fishermen's kits are cleaned, the washing being done in the mountain streams and the clothes laid upon the rocks to bleach. Others work on the graviers, the stretches of stone where the cod are dried, getting two francs a day with a little claret. Those who cannot work are supplied with food and fuel. There is a most elaborate bounty system—bounties for building dories and small schooners, for inshore fishing, for deep-sea or bank fishing, for selling the catch in Europe, for selling it in America, for exporting the roes to the sardine fishermen in France and for extracting oil from the livers. Then there are outfit bounties, the owner of a craft receiving a sum proportionate to the number of hands he employs, bounties to encourage fishing on the French shore of Newfoundland and bounties to promote the manufacture of manure from fish offal.

It is necessary to add that this intense paternalism has produced the usual results. If the people are happy, after a fashion, they are also slow and unenterprising. The American, Newfoundland and Canadian fishermen beat them all hollow at seining herring or catching cod on the banks. It is only lately that the French have taken to using dories. Formerly they dispatched all hands on the vessel in a big chaloupe to ply the lines, and if the chaloupe was lost the vessel itself was thrown out of the running for the season; whereas if one dory with its two men aboard comes to grief there are half a dozen others left to prosecute the work. The Grand-Barachois on Langlade contains tens of thousands of seals in the early spring, tumbling about the beach like clowns in a circus, but this fishery, from which the Newfoundlanders make a lot of money, is not carried on at all by the French. They rely too much on the cod bounties, which enable them, whatever the market price is, to undersell their competitors, and devote but little attention to the development of new branches of fishing or to the improvement of their vessels and gear.

The Churn That Failed.
A traveling peddler of patent churns called at a farmhouse in Lewiston the other day soliciting patronage, says the Journal, and, ascertaining that the lady had a churning of cream on hand, was anxious to churn it. The lady said that she had a patent churn already, but the man insisted that his was so much better that he could get two pounds more butter from the cream than she could from her churn. She said: "If you can I will buy it." So he left the churn, promising to come and prove it the next morning. The lady put her cream into her own churn and brought her butter; took it out and poured the buttermilk into the vendor's churn. He came the next morning and churned and churned, but no butter, exclaiming at last: "There is no butter in this cream." "I know it," said the lady, "for I've churned it in my churn; but I wanted to see you get that other two pounds." There was no sale and no further conversation.

The Ignorant Sultan.
According to Spanish sources the new sultan of Morocco evinces an incredible amount of ignorance. The following may serve as an illustration, says the Detroit Free Press: Several European officers had tried to explain to him the compass, but in spite of all explanations the Moorish ruler insisted that the motions of the needle were caused by clockwork and would not be convinced of his error. The officers talked to him about the railroads, and Abdul Aziz questioned them about the time it would take to ride from Tangier to Mequinez. The answer was: "Two hours." But the sultan would not believe it, and thought the foreigners were trying to fool him. Among other things he asked whether Belgium was the first war power of Europe (the Belgians sell large quantities of arms and ammunition to Morocco) and whether "Republie" was still the king of France, speaking all the time of King Republic.
